1987 Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 328, L. 1987, provided: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to employees as defined in 2-18-601 whose hours were reduced from 40 hours a week to less than 40 hours a week as a result of a budget deficit on or after January 1, 1986, and who were employees on the effective date of this act." Effective April 2, 1987.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (8) relating to contribution of accumulated sick leave to sick leave fund.

1985 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 707, L. 1985, read: "This bill requires a statement of intent because section 1 [which inserted subsection (8) of this section] gives the department of administration rulemaking authority to administer the sick leave fund created by the bill.

The department is required to consult with the sick leave advisory council created by the bill in promulgating all rules. It is intended that these rules relate to the following matters:

(1) procedures for contributing sick leave and applying for loans of sick leave;

(2) a plan under which individuals must pay back the loaned sick leave;

(3) the contribution of sick leave to a specific eligible individual rather than to the fund in general;

(4) definition of the types of illness or other circumstances for which loans or grants may be made;

(5) maximum amount of sick leave which may be loaned or granted;

(6) the inapplicability of contributing sick leave accrued prior to 1971 to the sick leave fund;

(7) procedures under which an agency or unit of the university system may administer a sick leave fund for agency or unit employees; and

(8) other matters necessary for the efficient operation of the sick leave fund.

It is intended that when promulgating these rules, the department of administration review similar programs, including the programs in use in school district no. 1 in Helena and school district no. 1 in Butte, and use those programs as guidelines for the adoption of the rules required by this bill.

It is further intended that these rules in no way limit the ability of a recognized bargaining agent to negotiate other sick leave provisions for its members."

1983 Amendment: At end of (2), deleted "exceeding 15 working days".

Case Notes

Involuntarily Terminated Public Employee Entitled to One-Fourth Accumulated Sick Leave: This section makes no distinction between voluntary or involuntary termination. A firefighter who was wrongfully terminated was entitled to only one-fourth his accrued sick leave benefits. Section 2-18-621 does not apply to accumulated sick leave benefits. Welsh v. Great Falls, 212 M 403, 690 P2d 406, 41 St. Rep. 1826 (1984).

"Schoolteacher" — Higher Education Faculty Not Included: The plain and ordinary meaning of "schoolteacher" does not encompass higher education faculty, including community college faculty members, especially since community college faculty members are ultimately answerable to the Board of Regents. Community college faculty members are state employees for purposes of entitlement to payment for accumulated sick leave. Rippey v. Bd. of Trustees, 210 M 396, 682 P2d 1363, 41 St. Rep. 1117 (1984), followed, with regard to the fact that "teacher" does not include a community college instructor for tenure purposes, in Talley v. Flathead Valley Community College, 259 M 479, 857 P2d 701, 50 St. Rep. 889 (1993).

Attorney General's Opinions

Public Employee Supplementing Workers' Compensation With Sick Leave Classified Under Leave-With-Pay Status — Accrual of Vacation and Sick Leave Credits on Prorated Basis: Employees who supplement their workers' compensation benefits with accrued sick leave are classified under leave-with-pay status as to the sick leave hours converted to pay. As such, the employees are entitled to accrue vacation and sick leave credits for the converted hours on a prorated basis. 56 A.G. Op. 1 (2016).

Vacation and Sick Leave to Accrue for Police and Firefighters Injured on Duty: Police officers and firefighters who are injured in the line of duty and who receive salary benefits under 7-32-4132 and 7-33-4133 through the usual payroll system in the same manner as if they were still on regular duty accrue vacation and sick leave credit pursuant to 2-18-611 and 2-18-618. 52 A.G. Op. 7 (2008), overruling a contrary holding in 42 A.G. Op. 114 (1988).

Supplementation of Workers' Compensation Benefits With Sick Leave Not Allowed: When a particular employment condition for public employees has been legislatively set, it may not be modified through collective bargaining without statutory authorization. The consequence of making payment of accrued sick leave benefits to an employee is that, effective July 1, 1987, the employee's eligibility for workers' compensation benefits is forfeited under 39-71-736. Therefore, a state agency is precluded from complying with a collective bargaining agreement that provides for supplementation of workers' compensation wage loss benefits with sick leave when entitlement to that compensation arose on or after July 1, 1987. 44 A.G. Op. 33 (1992), distinguishing 42 A.G. Op. 69 (1988).

Compensation of Police Officer Injured on Duty — No Accrual of Leave: Under 7-32-4132, a police officer of a first- or second-class municipality who is injured in the performance of duty is entitled to the difference between any workers' compensation benefits received and the officer's regular salary. However, 7-32-4132 does not provide for accrual of either vacation or sick leave benefits during the period of disability. 42 A.G. Op. 114 (1988), overruled in 52 A.G. Op. 7 (2008) to the extent that police officers and firefighters who are injured in the line of duty and who receive salary benefits under 7-32-4132 and 7-33-4133 through the usual payroll system in the same manner as if they were still on regular duty accrue vacation and sick leave credit pursuant to 2-18-611 and 2-18-618.

Change to Ten-Hour Work Day — Leave Time Calculated on Hourly Basis: Accrued employee leave time is calculated on an hourly basis for the purpose of determining the amount of leave time credited to employees who change from an 8-hour work day to a 10-hour work day. 39 A.G. Op. 15 (1981).

Beginning of Fiscal Year — Computation for Compensation: Sick or annual leave for employees terminated as laid off on June 30, 1979, should be computed by reference to the pay matrix in effect on that date. 38 A.G. Op. 70 (1980).

Vacation and Sick Leave Benefits: Nonteaching employees of school districts and postsecondary vocational-technical centers are entitled to vacation and sick leave benefits. 38 A.G. Op. 20 (1979).

County Employee Elected to Public Office: A county employee who is elected or appointed to a public office of the state, county, or city thereby terminates his employment and is entitled to receive vacation and sick leave benefits accumulated during his employment, unless he falls within the mandatory leave provision of 2-18-620 (now repealed). 38 A.G. Op. 12 (1979).

Hospital District Employees — Vacation and Sick Leave: Employees of county hospital districts are employees of a subdivision of the county and are therefore entitled to receive the vacation and sick leave benefits provided public employees. 37 A.G. Op. 102 (1977).

County Superintendent of Schools: An elected County Superintendent of Schools is not an "employee" for the purposes of this part. 37 A.G. Op. 4 (1977).

School District Employees: Full-time nonteaching employees of a school district are entitled to sick leave benefits under this section; however, schoolteachers are not as section 2-18-601 excludes them. 35 A.G. Op. 69 (1974).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2-18-621. Unlawful termination — unlawful payments.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Chapter 341 inserted (2) providing that employee who terminates employment is entitled to receive payments for accumulated wages, vacation leave, sick leave, and compensatory time earned and, if termination caused by reduction in force, severance pay and retraining allowance and providing that employee who terminates employment may not receive severance pay, bonus, or other type of monetary payment; inserted (3) providing that payments do not include retirement benefits, payment, settlement, award, or judgment involving potential or actual cause of action, legal dispute, claim, grievance, contested case, or lawsuit or other payment authorized by law; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 27, 2007.

1985 Amendment: In second sentence, after "Title 27, chapter 5", inserted "as if an agreement described in 27-5-114 is in effect"; and near end after "bargaining agreement" inserted "to the contrary".

Case Notes

Involuntarily Terminated Public Employee Entitled to One-Fourth Accumulated Sick Leave: Section 2-18-618 makes no distinction between voluntary or involuntary termination. A firefighter who was wrongfully terminated was entitled to only one-fourth his accrued sick leave benefits. This section does not apply to accumulated sick leave benefits (see 2007 amendment). Welsh v. Great Falls, 212 M 403, 690 P2d 406, 41 St. Rep. 1826 (1984).

2-18-622. Reduction in force — severance pay and retraining allowance required.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 640 in (1) substituted "shall provide severance pay as provided in subsection (2)" for "may provide severance pay"; inserted (2) providing for severance pay; inserted (3) providing that one choosing severance pay is not eligible for certain other benefits; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 17, 1993, and terminates June 30, 1995.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 758, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to a reduction in force occurring on or after July 1, 1991."

Effective Date: Section 6, Ch. 758, L. 1991, provided that this section is effective July 1, 1991.

Effective Date: Section 3, Ch. 225, L. 1999, provided that this section is effective on passage and approval. Approved April 1, 1999.

2-18-641. Exemption — employees of certain county hospitals or rest homes and hospital districts.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 128 in (1) after "rest home in a" substituted "county having a taxable valuation of less than $30 million" for "third, fourth, fifth, sixth, or seventh class county". Amendment effective July 1, 2011.

Effective Date: This section is effective October 1, 2001.

Funding: Section 2, Ch. 359, L. 1975, read: "In compliance with section 43-517[, R.C.M. 1947 (since amended, now 1-2-112)], the administration of this act is declared a public purpose of a county, city, or town which may be in addition to any other levy and may be paid out of the general fund of the governing body and financed by a levy on the taxable value of property within the county, city, or town."

Part Case Notes

School Health Insurance Contribution: School district contribution of $35 per month to teachers' medical insurance costs, made pursuant to opinion of the Attorney General but prior to enactment of the exception provision of section 11-1024, R.C.M 1947 (now Title 2, ch. 18, part 7), was not unlawful. Duffy v. Butte Teachers' Union 332, 168 M 246, 541 P2d 1199 (1975).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 175 in definition of employee inserted (k) regarding full-time short-term workers, inserted (l) regarding part-time short-term workers, and at end of definition deleted former (b) that read: "(b) The term does not include a student intern, as defined in 2-18-101"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 356 inserted definition of dependent; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2008.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 75 inserted (2) excluding student intern from definition of employee; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 314 inserted (11) relating to the state compensation insurance fund. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1989 Amendment: In (2), (3), and (9), inserted "regularly"; in (3), after "seasonal", inserted "full-time" and after "a year" inserted reference to employee who works for a continuous period of more than 6 months; inserted (4) expanding employee definition to include certain seasonal part-time employees; in (9), after "temporary", inserted "full-time"; in (9)(b), after "6 months"; inserted "a year although not regularly scheduled to do so"; inserted (10) expanding employee definition to include certain temporary part-time employees; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective March 20, 1989.

1981 Amendment: Added "permanent" before "employees" in (5) and (6); added subsection (8) relating to temporary employees.

Attorney General's Opinions

Volunteer Firefighters — Eligibility for Insurance: Volunteer firefighters working fewer than 20 hours a week do not fit within the definition of "employee" found in this section. Therefore, they are excluded from the group insurance plan of a third-class city. Because they are not eligible to belong to the group, they are not permitted to participate by paying their own premiums unless they fall within the class of eligible retirees or dependents defined by 2-18-704. 41 A.G. Op. 18 (1985).

County Attorneys — Participation in State Group Health Insurance Program: County Attorneys are elected county officials. The Legislature intended to exclude them from the state group health insurance program. They are not eligible to participate in the program. 40 A.G. Op. 52 (1984).

Local Government — Group Health Insurance: A local government unit is required, upon approval of two-thirds of its officers and employees, to contribute to the group health insurance plan of its officers although it is not required to contribute a specific amount. 37 A.G. Op. 138 (1978).

Contribution by Public Employer to Be to Group Plan: A city may not contribute to individual employees' insurance plans but must contribute to a city group insurance plan. 37 A.G. Op. 54 (1977).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 128 in (1)(c) near beginning substituted "governing body of a county having a taxable valuation of less than $30 million" for "governing body of a third, fourth, fifth, sixth, or seventh class county". Amendment effective July 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 145 in (1)(b) near middle of first sentence and near middle of second sentence after reference to organization inserted reference to hospitals, health centers, or nursing homes; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 559 in (1)(a) at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (1)(c) relating to exempting employees of certain county hospitals, county rest homes, and hospital districts from insurance contracts or plans; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 186 inserted (1)(b) authorizing governing body of county, city, or town to consider employees of private, nonprofit economic development organizations as employees for purpose of health insurance contracts or plans and authorizing governing bodies to require payment of actual cost of required coverage; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 325 in (3) substituted "state treasurer" for "auditor"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 13 in (1) inserted second sentence to clarify that providing greater or additional contributions for insurance benefits for employees with dependents does not constitute discrimination based on marital status; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 1, 1993.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning of (5) inserted reference to implementation of a self-insured group health plan by a school district board of trustees. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendment: Inserted (5) requiring an actuarially sound basis for any alternative plan implemented by the Board of Regents. Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1981 Amendment: Added "and elected officials" after "State employees" at the beginning of (2); substituted "2-18-701" for "2-18-809" in (2).

Attorney General's Opinions

Modification of Group Plan Covering Employees Covered Under Collective Bargaining — Exception When Another Bargaining Unit Represented by Different Labor Organization: A governing body may agree to modify a group insurance plan covering employees represented for collective bargaining purposes unless the changes would affect employees in another collective bargaining unit represented by a different labor organization, in which case concurrence of both representatives is required before modifications can be made. 43 A.G. Op. 79 (1990).

Two-Thirds Vote Unnecessary to Change Carriers or Policy Provisions or to Renew Policy: The only purpose of the two-thirds vote required under this section is to simultaneously authorize and require entry into a group health or other specified plan. Once initial authorization is given, no further votes are mandated. Therefore, a governing body need not obtain a two-thirds vote of all officers and employees to change group insurance carriers or policy provisions or to renew an existing policy. Following the original vote, decisions regarding these matters are subject to the discretion of the governing body, except as otherwise constrained by law. 43 A.G. Op. 79 (1990).

Prohibition on Separate Health Benefit Plan: A county with general government powers may not establish a separate health benefit plan for certain employees in a collective bargaining unit when a county employee-wide group insurance plan adopted under this section already exists. (See 2001 amendment.) 42 A.G. Op. 37 (1987).

Insurance for Volunteer Firefighters — Third-Class Cities: Pursuant to 7-33-4130, only cities of the first and second class are required to provide group insurance to their firefighters if they provide such insurance for other employees. Cities of the third class are not mentioned in the statute and therefore are not required to provide group health and life insurance for volunteer firefighters. 41 A.G. Op. 18 (1985).

County Attorneys — Participation in State Group Health Insurance Program: County Attorneys are elected county officials. The Legislature intended to exclude them from the state group health insurance program. They are not eligible to participate in the program. 40 A.G. Op. 52 (1984).

District Court Employees as County Employees: District Court employees are paid by the county in which the court is located, receive the same county benefits as all other county employees, and are therefore county employees. 39 A.G. Op. 38 (1981).

Soil Conservation District Employees as County Employees: Although soil conservation districts are distinct governmental entities covering more than one county and the statutes governing the districts do not expressly designate district personnel as county employees to be included on the county payroll, if a county does include district personnel on its payroll, giving them the same benefits received by other county employees, to that extent district personnel must be considered county employees. 39 A.G. Op. 38 (1981).

Local Government — Group Health Insurance: A local government unit is required, upon approval of two-thirds of its officers and employees, to contribute to the group health insurance plan of its officers although it is not required to contribute a specific amount. 37 A.G. Op. 138 (1978).

Contribution by Public Employer to Be to Group Plan: A city may not contribute to individual employees' insurance plans but must contribute to a city group insurance plan. 37 A.G. Op. 54 (1977).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 175 in (2)(a) at end substituted "$1,054 a month from January 2017 through December 2019" for "$887 a month from January 2015 through December 2015, $976 a month from January 2016 through December 2016, and $1,054 a month from January 2017 through December 2017"; in (2)(b) near beginning substituted "January 2020" for "January 2018"; in (2)(c) after "contribution for group benefits is" deleted "$887 a month from July 2014 through June 2016 and"; in (2)(c)(i) substituted "June 2020" for "June 2018"; and in (2)(d) substituted "the earlier of July 2020 or the first month in 2020" for "the earlier of July 2018 or the first month in 2018". Amendment effective April 10, 2017.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 175, L. 2017, provided: "[Section 4] [2-18-703] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to January 1, 2017."

2015 Amendment: Chapter 438 substituted (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(c), and (2)(d) concerning employer group benefit contributions for "For employees defined in 2-18-701 and for members of the legislature, the employer contribution for group benefits is $733 a month from January 2011 through December 2013, $806 a month from January 2014 through December 2014, and $887 for January 2015 and for each succeeding month. For employees of the Montana university system, the employer contribution for group benefits is $806 a month from July 2013 through June 2014 and $887 a month from July 2014 and for each succeeding month"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2015.

2013 Amendment: Chapter 385 in (2) in first sentence substituted "$733 a month from January 2011 through December 2013, $806 a month from January 2014 through December 2014, and $887 for January 2015 and for each succeeding month" for "$626 a month from January 2009 through December 2009, $679 a month from January 2010 through December 2010, and $733 for January 2011 and for each succeeding month", in second sentence substituted "$806 a month from July 2013 through June 2014, and $887 a month from July 2014 and for each succeeding month" for "$626 a month from July 2008 through June 2009, $679 a month from July 2009 through June 2010, and $733 for July 2010 and for each succeeding month", and in third sentence after "39-31-305" inserted "and to the protections of 2-18-1205". Amendment effective July 1, 2013.

2009 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 7 in (2) in first sentence after "benefits is" substituted "$626 a month from January 2009 through December 2009, $679 a month from January 2010 through December 2010, and $733 for January 2011" for "$557 a month from January 2007 through December 2007, $590 a month from January 2008 through December 2008, and $626 for January 2009" and in second sentence after "benefits is" substituted "$626 a month from July 2008 through June 2009, $679 a month from July 2009 through June 2010, and $733 for July 2010" for "$557 a month from July 2006 through June 2007, $590 a month from July 2007 through June 2008, and $626 for July 2008". Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

Chapter 412 in (3) after "high school districts" deleted "and of local government units", after "the employer's" deleted "premium", and deleted former last sentence that read: "Subject to the public hearing requirement provided in 2-9-212(2)(b), the increase in a local government's property tax levy for premium contributions for group benefits beyond the amount of contributions in effect on the first day of the last fiscal year is not subject to the mill levy calculation limitation provided for in 15-10-420"; inserted (4) concerning contributions for group benefits for employees of political subdivisions; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2009 Transition Levy: Section 4, Ch. 412, L. 2009, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), a political subdivision that levied mills for group contributions pursuant to 2-18-703 in fiscal year 2009 may for the fiscal years 2010 through 2014 levy the greater of:

(a) the dollar amount levied in 2009; or

(b) the amount determined in 2-18-703.

(2) The actual dollar amount under subsection (1)(a) may not include an amount for group benefits paid from user charges described in 2-9-212(2)(a)(i)."

Saving Clause: Section 5, Ch. 412, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 in (2) in first sentence near beginning after "group benefits is" deleted "$460 a month for the period from July 2005 through December 2005, $506 a month for the period from January 2006 through December 2006, and" and after "January 2007" inserted reference to amount through December 2007 and other amounts through December 2008 and for January 2009 and in second sentence after "group benefits is" deleted "$506 a month for the period from July 2005 through June 2006 and" and after "July 2006" inserted language referencing amounts through June 2008 and amount for July 2008; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 6 in (2) in first sentence near beginning after "legislature" deleted "and for employees of the Montana university system", increased contribution from $410 a month for period from July 2003 through June 2004 to $460 for period from July 2005 through December 2005, increased contribution rate from $460 a month for period from July 2004 through June 2005 to $506 for period from January 2006 through December 2006, and near end increased contribution rate to $557 a month beginning January 2007 and inserted second sentence providing contribution rates for university system; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section — Coordination: Chapter 529 in (3) near end of second sentence after "in effect on" substituted "the first day of the last fiscal year" for "July 1, 1999". Amendment effective April 26, 2003.

Section 4, Ch. 529, L. 2003, provided: "If House Bill No. 13 is passed and approved, then the amendments contained in 2-18-703(2) in [section 2 of this act] are void." House Bill No. 13 was passed and approved as Ch. 552, L. 2003, so the amendments to 2-18-703(2) in sec. 2, Ch. 529, L. 2003, are void.

Chapter 552 in (2) in first sentence near beginning after "members of the legislature" deleted "the employer contribution for group benefits is $295 a month for the period from July 2001 through December 2001, $325 a month for the period from January 2002 through December 2002, and $366 a month for January 2003 and for each succeeding month", substituted "$410" for "$325", substituted "July 2003 through June 2004" for "July 2001 through June 2002", substituted "$460" for "$366", and substituted "July 2004 through June 2005" for "July 2002 through June 2003"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section — Coordination: Chapter 314 in (1) near beginning inserted reference to the state compensation insurance fund; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

The amendments to subsection (2) of this section made by sec. 4, Ch. 314, L. 2001, were rendered void by sec. 9, Ch. 553, L. 2001, a coordination section.

Chapter 511 in (3) inserted second sentence exempting increases in local government's property tax levy for the employer's premium contributions for group health insurance benefits from the mill levy calculation limitation. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

The amendments to subsection (2) of this section made by sec. 2, Ch. 511, L. 2001, were rendered void by sec. 9, Ch. 553, L. 2001, a coordination instruction.

Chapter 553 in (2) in first sentence substituted "$295 a month for the period from July 2001 through December 2001, $325 a month for the period from January 2002 through December 2002, and $366 a month for January 2003" for "$270 a month for the period from July 1999 through December 1999, $285 a month for the period from January 2000 through December 2000, and $295 a month for January 2001" and in second sentence substituted "$325 a month for the period from July 2001 through June 2002 and $366 a month for the period from July 2002 through June 2003" for "$285 a month for the period from July 1999 through June 2000 and $295 a month for the period from July 2000 through June 2001"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 558 in (2) in first sentence substituted "is $270 a month for the period from July 1999 through December 1999, $285 a month for the period from January 2000 through December 2000, and $295 a month for January 2001 and for each succeeding month" for "is $245 per month for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1998, and $270 a month for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1999, and for each succeeding fiscal year" and inserted second sentence establishing employer contribution for employees of Montana university system. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 417 in (2), in first sentence, increased contributions to $245 from $220 and to $270 from $225 and substituted "1998" for "1996" and "1999" for "1997"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 in (2), near beginning of first sentence after "2-18-701", deleted "other than members of collective bargaining units" and substituted "$220" for "$210", "1996" for "1994", "$225" for "$230", and "1997" for "1995" and at end of fourth sentence, after "contribution", deleted "as wages"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1993 Amendments: Chapter 13 inserted (6) to clarify that providing greater or additional contributions for insurance benefits for employees with dependents does not constitute discrimination based on marital status; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 1, 1993.

Chapter 640 in (2) substituted "$210" for "$170", "1994" for "1992", "$230" for "$190", and "1995" for "1993". Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 171 inserted (5) relating to unused employer contributions; and made minor change in style.

Chapter 720 in (2) increased contribution for benefits from $130 to $170 in first year of biennium and from $150 to $190 in second year of biennium. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

Chapter 758 in (2) inserted second sentence that reads: "When a state employee is terminated to achieve a reduction in force, the continuation of contributions for group benefits beyond the termination date is subject to negotiation under 39-31-305"; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 758, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to a reduction in force occurring on or after July 1, 1991."

1989 Amendments: Chapter 171 in (2), in second sentence after "part-time", inserted "seasonal part-time, and temporary part-time". Amendment effective March 20, 1989.

Chapter 660 near beginning of (2) increased employer contribution for group benefits from $115 per month to $130 per month for fiscal year ending June 30, 1990, and to $150 per month for fiscal year ending June 30, 1991, and each fiscal year thereafter; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 370 near middle of (4), after "department", inserted "of administration".

Chapter 661 in (2) increased employer benefit contribution from $105 to $115 and substituted "fiscal years ending June 30, 1988, and June 30, 1989" for "fiscal year ending June 30, 1986".

1986 Amendment: The amendment was contingent on renegotiation of collective bargaining agreements; since such contingency didn't occur, the amendment terminated.

1985 Amendment: In (2) near beginning substituted "$105" for "$90", "1986" for "1984", and "$115" for "$100".

1983 Amendments: Chapter 207 inserted last sentence of (2) relating to "Part B" of Medicare.

Chapter 710, in (2), increased the employer contributions to $90 from $70 and to $100 from $80 per month; and changed year from 1982 to 1984.

1981 Amendment: Increased employer insurance contribution to $70 and $80 for the first and second year of the biennium from $50 and $60, respectively.

Funding: Section 2, Ch. 359, L. 1975, provided: "In compliance with section 43-517 [R.C.M. 1947, now 1-2-112, MCA], the administration of this act is declared a public purpose of a county, city, or town which may be in addition to any other levy and may be paid out of the general fund of the governing body and financed by a levy on the taxable value of property within the county, city, or town."

Attorney General's Opinions

Insurance for Volunteer Firefighters — Third-Class Cities: Pursuant to 7-33-4130, only cities of the first and second class are required to provide group insurance to their firefighters if they provide such insurance for other employees. Cities of the third class are not mentioned in the statute and therefore are not required to provide group health and life insurance for volunteer firefighters. 41 A.G. Op. 18 (1985).

Local Government — Group Health Insurance: A local government unit is required, upon approval of two-thirds of its officers and employees, to contribute to the group health insurance plan of its officers although it is not required to contribute a specific amount. 37 A.G. Op. 138 (1978).

Contribution by Public Employer to Be to Group Plan: A city may not contribute to individual employees' insurance plans but must contribute to a city group insurance plan. 37 A.G. Op. 54 (1977).

Group Insurance Payments Not Limited: This section does not limit a school district to a maximum payment of $10 per month per employee for group insurance. 35 A.G. Op. 11 (1973).

Chapter 390 inserted (9) requiring coverage for well-child care; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2008.

Chapter 463 inserted (11) requiring written informational materials to be provided. Amendment effective January 1, 2008.

Applicability: Section 8, Ch. 390, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to policies, certificates, evidence of coverage, and plans issued or renewed on or after January 1, 2008."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 463, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, early detection of cancer can save lives and improve and increase treatment options for patients; and

WHEREAS, screening tests for cancer are the main tool for early detection of cancer; and

WHEREAS, health insurers may not routinely provide information on the coverage provided for cancer screenings; and

WHEREAS, state law requires health insurers to provide a summary of benefits offered to consumers; and

WHEREAS, because of the importance of early detection, consumers deserve and will benefit from information about the types of cancer screenings that a policy covers."

Contingent Effective Date: Section 79(4), Ch. 471, L. 1999, provided that the amendments to this section are "effective contingent upon certification, as provided in [section 65] [not codified], that the defined contribution retirement plan is ready to become operational or on July 1, 2002, whichever is earlier". Section 65 provided in subsection (2) that "The board shall certify to the governor and the secretary of state the date on which the defined contribution retirement plan established pursuant to [sections 42 through 63] [Title 19, chapter 3, part 21] is ready to become operational and shall provide a copy of the certification to the code commissioner." The contingency occurred pursuant to a letter dated May 23, 2002, which certified that the defined contribution retirement plan "is ready to become and will become operational as of July 1, 2002".

2001 Amendment: Chapter 450 inserted (8) concerning coverage of outpatient self-management training and education for diabetes. Amendment effective January 1, 2002.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 450, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] is effective January 1, 2002, and applies to all policies, contracts, plans, or certificates issued or renewed on or after that date."

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 434 inserted (7) concerning coverage for inborn error of metabolism. Amendment effective January 1, 2000.

Chapter 471 in (1)(a) near beginning inserted "of a defined benefit plan" and inserted "or, in the case of the defined contribution plan provided in Title 19, chapter 3, part 21, a member with at least 5 years of service and who is at least age 50 while in covered employment"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency or July 1, 2002, whichever is earlier.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 434, L. 1999, provided that this section is effective January 1, 2000, and applies to all policies, contracts, plans, or certificates issued or renewed on or after that date.

Saving Clause: Section 77, Ch. 471, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 78, Ch. 471, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 42 in (3)(b) and (3)(c) substituted reference to subsection (3)(a) for reference to subsection (3). Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Chapter 282 inserted (4) requiring an insurance contract or plan to provide for continued participation by a retired judge as inactive vested member and providing circumstances under which judge may not remain a member or rejoin; in (5) inserted reference to subsection (4); and made minor changes in style.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 282, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] [2-18-704] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to a judge who was a member of the state's group health insurance plan in effect on December 1, 1996, who is otherwise eligible under the provisions of 2-18-704 and who files written notice to the department of administration within 30 days of [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 274 in (2), near beginning of introductory clause after "issued", deleted "after June 30, 1983"; in (3)(a), near beginning after "plan", deleted "issued after August 31, 1991"; in (5), near beginning of introductory clause after "part", deleted "after June 30, 1993"; in (5)(a), near middle after "plan", inserted "and to meet all terms and conditions, including the same professional requirements that are met"; in (5)(b), near middle, substituted "registered with" for "licensed by"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 28, 1995.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 274, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill gives the board of pharmacy authority to adopt administrative rules for the registration of out-of-state mail service pharmacies.

It is the intent of the legislature to correct a deficiency in Title 37, chapter 7, part 7 (Chapter 664, Laws of 1991), that arose from a defective attempt to grant rulemaking authority to the board of pharmacy to carry out the provisions regarding out-of-state mail service pharmacies. [Section 4] [37-7-712] is specifically intended to grant rulemaking authority to the board of pharmacy to carry out the purpose and to enforce the provisions of Title 37, chapter 7, part 7. Sections 37-7-701 and 37-7-703 are intended to provide for regulation of out-of-state pharmacies and pharmacists through recognition of the licenses issued by their states of domicile through registration, rather than licensure, by the state of Montana."

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 274, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 300 in (1), after "issued", deleted "after June 30, 1977"; inserted (5) regarding conditions for insurance contracts providing for dispensing of prescription drugs by out-of-state mail service pharmacies; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 300, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (3) requiring contract or plan issued after August 31, 1991, to permit legislator to remain member of group plan until eligible for federal Medicare if legislative service is terminated and he is vested member of retirement system and Department of Administration receives notification in writing within 90 days of end of legislative term and describing situations when legislator may not remain member of group plan; in (4) inserted reference to subsection (3); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1991.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 738, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to a legislator who was a member of the state's group health insurance plan in effect on December 1, 1990, who is otherwise eligible under the provisions of 2-18-704 and who files written notice to the department of administration within 30 days of [the effective date of this act] [effective May 1, 1991]."

1983 Amendment: Inserted (2) relating to provisions required for contract or plan issued after June 30, 1983.

Funding: Section 2, Ch. 359, L. 1975, provided: "In compliance with section 43-517 [R.C.M. 1947, now 1-2-112, MCA], the administration of this act is declared a public purpose of a county, city, or town which may be in addition to any other levy and may be paid out of the general fund of the governing body and financed by a levy on the taxable value of property within the county, city, or town."

Attorney General's Opinions

Insurance for Volunteer Firefighters: Volunteer firefighters working fewer than 20 hours a week do not fit within the definition of "employee" found in 2-18-701. Therefore, they are excluded from the group insurance plan of a third-class city. Because they are not eligible to belong to the group, they are not permitted to participate by paying their own premiums unless they fall within the class of eligible retirees or dependents defined by this section. 41 A.G. Op. 18 (1985).

Options for cost containment measures include but are not limited to:

(1) reviewing and consulting with appropriate experts on the following:

(a) improving primary care case management and coordinated care to improve medical outcomes and reduce costs;

(b) sharing data with providers to identify and reduce inappropriate use or overuse of services;

(c) implementing pilot programs to improve health outcomes, such as programs for addressing pain management, emergency department use, and drug or alcohol addiction or abuse;

(d) increasing the cost-efficiency of the state health clinics, including recommendations for services and controls on or review of referrals;

(e) implementing a network-based or reference-based pricing arrangement, or both, with health care facilities, health care providers, and medical transport providers, considering a multiple of medicare rates to establish a contract of network providers or as a reference-based pricing model for the arrangement; and

(f) amending contracts, to the extent possible, for the state health clinics to require copayments equal to the copayments required by the state employee group benefit plans for similar services; and

(2) requiring a contractor or third-party administrator to provide data analytics, professional expertise, and recommendations for improvement of the state employee group benefit plans to the department, the state employee group benefits advisory council, and the legislative finance committee."

Part 9
Subrogation — Notice

Part Case Notes

Third-Party Administrators Not Liable for Made-Whole Violation Under State Employee Benefit Plan: Insureds under the state of Montana employee benefit plan sued the state and the third-party administrators (TPAs) who administer the state benefit plan, alleging violations of the subrogation statutes, Title 2, chapter 18, part 9. The District Court determined the subrogation statutes did not apply to the TPAs. The Supreme Court affirmed, concluding that the TPAs are not "insurers" under Title 2, chapter 18, part 9, and therefore could not be held independently liable under the subrogation statutes in this case. In addition, the TPAs were not liable under a third-party beneficiary theory because the insureds failed to demonstrate that the benefits they received from the expertise of the TPAs in administering claims were anything but incidental, rather than a benefit that the state and the TPAs intended to bestow upon the insureds when they contracted for administrative services. Case Notes

Class Certification — Numerosity, Commonality, Typicality Requirements — No Abuse of Discretion: The District Court certified a class whose members had been subject to agreements with a pool of health plans containing exclusion clauses in violation of 2-18-902. The health plan pool and the plan administrator appealed. The Supreme Court held that the District Court did not abuse its discretion when it certified the class action because although the appellants' search of medical records did not turn up further class members, the numerosity requirement under Rule 23, M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), may focus on other factors in specific circumstances, and the plaintiff established that sufficient potential class members will be found who did not file claims. The appellants argued that the District Court's notification of absent class members to inform them that the illegal exclusion had been removed was improper because the plaintiff used it to satisfy the numerosity requirement. However, the requirement had already been satisfied, and the notification was used as an appropriate tool to manage the litigation process. Further, although the appellants argued that the plaintiff was an inappropriate representative of the class because of the plaintiff's bad faith claim and that the plaintiff's bad faith claim destroyed the commonality and typicality requirements, the District Court did not abuse its discretion because declaratory and injunctive relief was uniform and nothing in the bad faith claim implicated issues in the class action. Lastly, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by defining the class too broadly because it appropriately narrowed the class to individuals enrolled in plans administered by the appellants containing the unlawful exclusion. Roose v. Lincoln County Employee Group Health Plan, 2015 MT 324, 381 Mont. 409, 362 P.3d 40.

State Employee Health Care Benefits — State Subject to Regulation as Insurer: The plaintiffs claimed that under the state employee health care benefit program, they were not fully compensated for their injuries because the state had retained refunded payments it had made to their medical providers in cases where the provider had already been paid by a third-party insurer. The state claimed that under its coordination of benefits policy, it was allowed to accept the refunded payments without first ensuring the plaintiffs had been fully compensated for their injuries. The District Court granted the plaintiffs summary judgment, concluding that the state is an insurer in operating the benefit plan and that its coordination of benefits policy contravened the "made whole" requirements of 2-18-902. The state appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed the District Court and further agreed that the state, as an insurer to its employees through its employee health care benefit plan, is subject to the same regulations as other insurers. Diaz v. St., 2013 MT 331, 372 Mont. 393, 313 P.3d 124. See also Diaz I, 2011 MT 322, 363 Mont. 151, 267 P.3d 756.

Statute of Limitations Applicable to Subrogee in Insurance Claim: St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Company (St. Paul), as subrogee, sought to recover from Glassing a payment made to its insured Lynn for underinsured motorist coverage, interest, and costs. Montana has no statutory authority extending the statute of limitations for subrogation claims in such cases. Because an insurer's claim is derived from that of the insured, St. Paul's claim was subject to the same defenses, including the statute of limitations, as though the action were sued upon by the insured and St. Paul had no claim for its damages independent of Lynn's claim. An insurer's right to subrogation attaches upon paying an insured's loss; thus, the 3-year statute of limitations in 27-2-204 applied to St. Paul's claim in the same manner that the original action brought by Lynn and, when raised after the 3-year limit, was time-barred. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Glassing, 269 M 76, 887 P2d 218, 51 St. Rep. 1437 (1994), followed in Nimmick v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 270 M 315, 891 P2d 1154, 52 St. Rep. 208 (1995). Part 10

Grievance Procedures

Part Case Notes

BPA's Findings Not Supported by Record — Order Unenforceable: Larson and Sanders applied for a sectionman position with the Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation). Sanders, the brother-in-law of the Department personnel director, was selected over Larson who had more seniority. Larson filed a grievance, and the Board of Personnel Appeals conducted a hearing. The Board concluded that the Department had not acted in good faith and had violated the union contract by not applying the mandated criteria in awarding the advancement and ordered that Larson be given the position with backpay. The Board petitioned the District Court for enforcement of the Board's order. The District Court, however, found that the record as a whole did not support the findings and that the order was invalid and unenforceable. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the District Court. Bd. of Personnel Appeals v. Dept. of Highways, 189 M 185, 615 P2d 844 (1980).

Case Notes

Former MDOT Employee's Preclusion From WDEA — Failure to Establish Similarly Situated Classes — No Violation of Equal Protection: An employee of the Montana Department of Transportation (MDOT) who was demoted, and later resigned, filed a claim of constructive discharge under the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act (WDEA) in District Court instead of filing a grievance with the Board of Personnel Appeals (BOPA), as required by 2-18-1001. The District Court granted summary judgment in favor of the MDOT on the discharge claim based on its conclusion that the BOPA procedure was the employee's exclusive remedy and therefore he was precluded from filing a claim under the WDEA. The employee argued that precluding him from filing a claim under the WDEA violated his equal protection rights, claiming his denial to pursue a WDEA claim was arbitrarily based on his being a former MDOT employee. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's ruling, concluding that the employee neither articulated consistent class definitions nor demonstrated that the classes were similarly situated and thus failed to support his violation of equal protection argument. Kershaw v. Dept. of Transportation, 2011 MT 170, 361 Mont. 215, 257 P.3d 358.

District Court Unable to Look Beyond Complaint to Determine Whether BOPA Grievance Procedure Precludes Complaint Under WDEA: Campanella was fired by the Department of Transportation on July 16, 2003. Campanella filed a grievance regarding the discharge with the Board of Personnel Appeals under this section. Campanella later filed a wrongful termination complaint under the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act (WDEA) in District Court on November 12, 2004. The District Court rejected the Department's argument that Campanella's discharge was exempt from the WDEA because the grievance procedure under this section is a state statute providing a grievance procedure and remedy for contesting the dispute under 39-2-912. The District Court concluded that determining whether this grievance procedure qualified to exempt the claim first required an affirmative determination that the court could not make without looking beyond the complaint and that such a finding could not yet be made. The Supreme Court agreed and took no position on this issue. Campanella v. Dept. of Transportation, 2007 MT 2, 335 M 212, 156 P3d 1 (2007).

Transportation Department Personnel Grievance Statutory Procedure Not "Written Internal Procedure" for Purposes of Extending Time Limitation for Filing Under WDEA: Campanella was fired by the Department of Transportation on July 16, 2003. Campanella filed a grievance regarding the discharge with the Board of Personnel Appeals under this section. Campanella later filed a wrongful termination complaint under the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act (WDEA) in District Court on November 12, 2004. The District Court dismissed Campanella's WDEA complaint on the grounds that it was time-barred because it was filed beyond the 1-year limitation period in 39-2-911 and determined that Campanella was not entitled to the 120-day extension under the statute for a claimant who had first contested a discharge by pursuing written internal procedures of the employer. The Supreme Court upheld the dismissal and determined that the Department personnel grievance procedure under this section was not the employer's written internal procedure. The court based its interpretation of this section on the statute's language requiring that a complainant exhaust all other administrative remedies before filing under this section. The court determined that by use of this language, the Legislature intended that these other remedies be the mandatory internal procedures for Department employees, and therefore, the statutory procedure could not be the written internal procedures of the employer contemplated under the WDEA. Campanella v. Dept. of Transportation, 2007 MT 2, 335 M 212, 156 P3d 1 (2007).

Case Notes

Board of Personnel Appeals Not Bound by Findings and Conclusions of Hearings Examiner — District Court Bound by Board Conclusions if Correct: The interpretation of an administrative rule and an agency's policy is a question of law, and in its final order, an agency may reject or modify a hearings officer's conclusion of law and interpretation of administrative rules in the proposal for decision. As the final administrative authority in the state employee classification process, the Board of Personnel Appeals must review and interpret applicable rules promulgated by the Department of Administration. Thus, the Board is not bound by a hearings officer's conclusions and interpretations. However, the District Court is bound by the Board's conclusions of law and interpretation of administrative rules, if correct. In the present case, the Board reasonably interpreted applicable employee classification rules and correctly concluded that child support enforcement investigators were improperly classified in violation of 2-18-202, and the District Court erred in reversing the Board's final order. St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002). See also Weber v. Pub. Employees' Retirement Bd., 270 M 239, 890 P2d 1296 (1995), and In re Grievance of Brady, 1999 MT 153, 295 M 75, 983 P2d 292 (1999).

Department to Develop Guidelines for Classification — Board Limited to Determining Proper Classification: Certain highway patrol officers successfully appealed to the Personnel Division of the Department of Administration to have their grade raised pursuant to 2-18-203. In response, other officers filed a grievance pursuant to this section, seeking reclassification of their positions and grades. Appeal was permissible under 2-18-203 as it existed at the time. The Division reclassified their positions using a "five factor" formula. The affected officers appealed their resulting grade reassignment to the Board of Personnel Appeals, which issued an order to the Division requiring reclassification of certain positions. The Board subsequently rejected the Division's classification recommendations and upheld the so-called "practice" of maintaining a grade difference between supervisors and persons they supervise. In the subsequent appeal from the classification process used by the Division, the Supreme Court held: (1) the Division's failure to follow a "practice" or "rule of thumb" is not an abuse of discretion because it followed the factors set forth in its rules and offered legitimate reasons for deviating from the "practice"; (2) the Board is limited to determining whether a position is properly classified; (3) the function of developing guidelines for classification is assigned to the Department; and (4) the state has a legitimate interest in preserving the state pay classification system, and the amended statute rationally relates toward effectuating that objective. St. Personnel Div. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 235 M 208, 766 P2d 1300, 45 St. Rep. 2324 (1988).

Action to Enforce Distinguished From Action for Judicial Review of Contested Case — No Timely Exceptions or Appeal Filed: In an action based upon an order of the Board of Personnel Appeals regarding reclassification, Walch disputed parts of the order but failed to make a timely appeal or exception to the order and instead filed a petition to enforce in District Court. In upholding the District Court's dismissal, the Supreme Court distinguished an action to enforce under 2-18-1013 from an action for judicial review of a contested case under 2-4-702, noting that the latter action must be brought within 30 days after service of a final agency decision and allows the petitioner to contest the decision. However, in an action to enforce, the petitioner may not contest the decision; therefore, Walch could prevail only if the employer was not paying him according to the order. Upon a finding that Walch was being paid accordingly, the District Court's dismissal of the petition to enforce was affirmed. Walch v. Univ. of Mont., 221 M 52, 716 P2d 640, 43 St. Rep. 629 (1986).

District Court Bound by Factual Findings of Board of Personnel Appeals — Wrongful Discharge — Reinstatement — No Backpay: An employee of the state was discharged from employment because he used a state-owned vehicle for private purposes. He appealed the decision of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and the Board of Personnel Appeals ruled that though his discharge was properly justified, the Department had never adopted a policy regarding such use of vehicles and had not punished similar usage; thus, the discharge was wrongful and he was entitled to reinstatement. He was offered a substantially equivalent position but appealed the Board's denial of backpay and benefits and, upon losing the District Court appeal, pursued the issues before the Supreme Court. The court upheld the District Court on all issues, observing that both courts were bound by factual findings of the Board and stipulations by the parties. The District Court was not obligated to hold a hearing on the facts. Hutchin v. St., 213 M 15, 688 P2d 1257, 41 St. Rep. 1916 (1984).

Job Classification — No Participation by Employing Agency: The statutes and rules governing job classification procedures do not contemplate participation by the employing agency other than the opportunity for input into the Personnel Division's decision. If and when the dispute reaches step four of the formal appeals procedure, the employee represents his interests and the Personnel Division, through its Classification Bureau, represents the interests of the state. Therefore, the Board of Personnel Appeals had no clear legal duty and no authority to hear the objections of the employing agency. State ex rel. St. Tax Appeal Bd. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 181 M 366, 593 P2d 747 (1979).

Board Power in Classification Appeal — Resolution of Grievance: Under 2-18-203 and the holding in St. Personnel Div. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 235 M 208, 766 P2d 1300 (1988) (also known as the Mead decision), in a classification appeal, the Board of Personnel Appeals is limited to determining whether a position is properly classified. If the Board determines that the position is improperly classified and the employee is therefore aggrieved, the Board can resolve the grievance under this section by ordering the State Personnel Division to reclassify the employee's position and, as appropriate, order other remedies, such as retroactive pay. In the present case, the Board exceeded its authority by granting retroactive pay even though there was no finding of improper classification or that the employees were aggrieved. St. Personnel Div. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 255 M 507, 844 P2d 68, 49 St. Rep. 1087 (1992), distinguishing Hutchin v. St., 213 M 15, 688 P2d 1257 (1984).

Termination Date Removed: Section 17, Ch. 417, L. 1997, and sec. 40, Ch. 532, L. 1997, removed the termination date for the amendments enacted by sec. 13, Ch. 23, Special Laws of November 1993.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 23 in (1) substituted "implement this part" for "equitably administer the employee incentive award program"; at end of (3) substituted "this part" for "the program"; deleted former (4) and (5) that read: "(4) grant or deny incentive awards in consultation with the incentive awards advisory council and determine the amount of each incentive award based on first year monetary savings;

(5) hear appeals from employees on the operation of the program"; near beginning of (4), after "submit", substituted "in the manner provided in 5-11-210" for "as a part of the information required by 17-7-111", after "savings to the state" substituted "and improvements in the effectiveness of state government" for "resulting from each employee's suggestion or invention", and at end substituted "operation of this part" for "program"; deleted (7) that read: "send a copy of all suggestions or inventions submitted under this program to the office of the legislative fiscal analyst"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective December 23, 1993, and terminates July 1, 1997.

Applicability: Section 11, Ch. 23, Sp. L. November 1993, provided that this section applies to achievements and outcomes occurring after December 23, 1993.

Termination: Section 13, Ch. 23, Sp. L. November 1993, provided that the amendments to this section terminate July 1, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 349 near beginning of (6), after "submit", substituted "as a part of the information required by 17-7-111" for "as provided in 5-11-210, a biennial report to the legislature containing".

1991 Amendment: At beginning of (6), after "prepare", inserted "and submit, as provided in 5-11-210". Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

1986 Amendment: Inserted (7) providing that a copy of suggestions or inventions be sent to the Legislative Fiscal Analyst.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent for HB 161 (Ch. 552, L. 1981) read: "The general purpose of H.B. 161 is to provide incentives to state employees to make suggestions or to create inventions that reduce the costs of government operations or improve government operations without increasing costs. The discretion of the Department of Administration in granting awards is limited to 10% of the cost savings realized in the first year, or $500, whichever is less. Larger awards may be proposed but the Legislature must approve the awards and appropriate the money.

The purpose for giving the Department of Administration rulemaking authority is that it can best administer the program consistently throughout state government and determine the amount of money appropriate for an incentive award.

It is contemplated that the rules should address the following:

(1) the composition of the Advisory Council created by the bill;

(2) the procedures and bylaws that the Advisory Council will follow when conducting its business;

(3) providing model suggestion systems for agencies to use when administering the incentive program;

(4) standards to assure administration of the program on a statewide basis;

(5) forms that may be necessary to administer the provisions in the bill;

(6) procedures for detailed investigations and evaluations of suggestions;

(7) procedures for filing suggestions with the Department;

(8) procedures for the review of employee concerns regarding the fair administration of the program;

(9) time limits for the review of suggestions and inventions;

(10) procedures for the presentation of suggestions or inventions to the Legislature when the legitimate value of the ideas exceeds the $500 limit in the bill;

(11) procedures covering the timely payment of cash awards that are approved by the Department;

(12) procedures to maintain the integrity of the program through the review of awards to assure that they are granted equitably, on the basis of merit, and that the reasons for granting an award are made public. All provisions of this act shall expire and terminate on July 1, 1983."

Termination Date — Permanent: Section 7, Ch. 552, L. 1981, provided: "All provisions of this act shall terminate on July 1, 1983." Section 1, Ch. 61, L. 1983, extended the termination date to July 1, 1985, by amending section 7, Ch. 552, L. 1981, to read: "All provisions of this act shall terminate on July 1, 1985." Section 2, Ch. 103, L. 1985, repealed the termination, making the program permanent.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 417 deleted former (2) that read: "The incentive award for an achievement or outcome that does not result in cost savings that can be specifically determined a year after the achievement or outcome is implemented and the cost savings are actually incurred is the agency head's estimated dollar value of the achievement or outcome, up to a maximum of $500 per employee or nonemployee or, in the discretion of the agency head, not more than 40 hours of paid leave time for an employee. Larger awards may be proposed and submitted to the legislature for consideration"; inserted (2) relating to discretionary awards; in (3), at end of first sentence, substituted "realized or that can be accurately projected for a period of 12 months following implementation, a larger award may be granted by the agency head" for "incurred"; in (3)(a) substituted "realized or accurately projected" for "incurred during the 12 months following implementation of the suggestion"; in (3)(b) and (3)(c) substituted "realized or accurately projected" for "incurred during that 12-month period"; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) The number of awards granted by an agency in a state government fiscal year may not exceed the number equal to 20% of the average number of full-time equivalent employees in that agency during that fiscal year. The office of budget and program planning may grant an agency with less than 50 full-time equivalent employees an exemption from this limitation, but the exemption may not allow more awards than the number equal to 50% of the average number of full-time equivalent employees in the agency during the fiscal year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Termination Date Removed: Section 17, Ch. 417, L. 1997, and sec. 40, Ch. 532, L.1997, removed the termination date for the amendments enacted by sec. 13, Ch. 23, Special Laws of November 1993.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 23 substituted (1) concerning an incentive award to an employee, a group or team of employees, or a nonemployee who has made a significant contribution to achievements or outcomes in the agency or employees who are not members of the agency that benefits from the achievement or outcome for former text that read: "After an agency implements an employee's suggestion or invention and the monetary savings to the state is estimated, an agency head, upon written application to and approval from the department and the incentive awards advisory council, may grant an incentive award to an employee whose proposal meets the requirements enumerated in 2-18-1105"; substituted first sentence of (2) concerning nondetermined incentive award as the agency head's estimated dollar value of the achievement or outcome, up to a maximum of $500 per employee or nonemployee or, in the discretion of the agency head, not more than 40 hours of paid leave time for an employee for "The incentive award shall be 10% of the savings resulting from implementing the employee's proposal for 1 year up to a maximum of $3,000"; inserted (3) establishing that the amount of an award to be determined by agency head not exceed 10% of first $100,000, 5% of second $100,000, and 2% of third $100,000 of actual savings incurred during first 12-month period of achievement or outcome; inserted (4)(a) requiring agency head to determine amount each person is to receive if award is divided; inserted first sentence of (4)(b) requiring a lump-sum payment of award no later than 90 days after end of 12-month period following implementation, inserted second sentence allowing agency head to pay award at any time savings can be determined, in third sentence, after "pay the" substituted "award" for "employee" and at end deleted "in a single, lump-sum award", and at end of fourth sentence inserted "or leave time"; inserted (5) limiting number of awards within an agency during state fiscal year to not more than 20% of the average number of full-time equivalent employees and allowing office of budget and program planning to grant agency with less than 50 full-time equivalent employees an exemption from the 20% limitation but not to exceed 50% of the average number of full-time equivalent employees in the agency during a fiscal year; inserted (6) concerning list of the number of incentive awards granted; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective December 23, 1993, and terminates July 1, 1997.

Applicability: Section 11, Ch. 23, Sp. L. November 1993, provided that this section applies to achievements and outcomes occurring after December 23, 1993.

Termination: Section 13, Ch. 23, Sp. L. November 1993, provided that the amendments to this section terminate July 1, 1997.

1987 Amendment: In (2), near beginning, substituted "award shall be 10%" for "award may not be more than 10%" and increased maximum award from $1,500 to $3,000.

1986 Amendment — Applicability: The June 1986 amendment that terminated November 1, 1986, read: "(2) The incentive award shall be 10% of the savings resulting from implementing the employee's proposal for 1 year up to a maximum of $10,000. Larger awards may be proposed and submitted to the legislature for consideration.

(3) The agency head shall pay the employee from the savings in the agency's budget in a single, lump-sum award. If the money saved as a result of the employee's proposal is restricted or unavailable for payment of this kind of award, then the award must be paid by the department from money appropriated for that purpose. This award is in addition to the recipient's regular compensation."

The amendment applied to employee suggestions or inventions submitted to the Department prior to November 1, 1986. To allow time for evaluation of those suggestions or inventions, sec. 4, Ch. 23, Sp. L. June 1986, provided that awards could be granted pursuant to the amendment until June 30, 1987.

Effective Date — Applicability: The 1986 amendment was effective July 10, 1986, and terminates on November 1, 1986. Section 4, Ch. 23, Sp. L. June 1986, provided that the amendment to this section applies to employee suggestions or inventions submitted to the department prior to November 1, 1986. To allow time for evaluation of those suggestions or inventions, awards may be granted pursuant to the amendment until June 30, 1987.

1985 Amendment: In (2) increased maximum incentive award from $500 to $1,500.

JUDICIARY, COURTS

CHAPTER 1
COURTS AND JUDICIAL OFFICERS GENERALLY

Chapter Case Notes

Prohibition on Judicial Endorsements — Narrowly Tailored — Summary Judgment for Defendants Proper: A judicial candidate brought an action alleging that Rule 4.1(A)(7) of the Code of Judicial Conduct violated the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution by prohibiting judicial candidates from seeking, accepting, or using endorsements from a political organization or a partisan or independent nonjudicial officeholder or candidate. The Ninth Circuit Court affirmed the District Court's order entering summary judgment for the defendants because the prohibition was narrowly tailored to achieve the compelling state interests of actual and perceived judicial impartiality and a structurally sound judiciary by striking an appropriate balance between those interests and a candidate's speech. Case Notes

City Not Liable for City Judge's Civil Rights Violations — City Judge Acts Under State Authority: Claims of the indigent defendants, who were not effectively informed by a City Judge of their right to appointed counsel, were properly dismissed. Under Montana law, a City Judge's acts and decision in advising defendants of the right were performed under the state's authority rather than the city's authority, thereby precluding imposition of civil rights liability on the city. Further, the indigent defendants did not have standing to seek declaratory and injunctive relief. There are other remedies for indigent defendants in future situations—they can file a complaint with the state body charged with overseeing judicial conduct, they can appeal their convictions to a higher court, and they can sue a judge individually because a judge does not enjoy judicial immunity for unconstitutional behavior when the facts are sufficient to grant declaratory or injunctive relief. Eggar v. Livingston, 40 F3d 312 (9th Cir. 1994).

City Judge Not to Hold Office as Community College Trustee: The provisions of Art. VII, sec. 10, Mont. Const., apply to all judges, including City Judges. Because the position of trustee of a community college district is considered an elective public office, a City Judge is constitutionally prohibited from holding office as an elected trustee of a community college district. 44 A.G. Case Notes

Workers' Compensation Court Authorized to Issue Only Limited Declaratory Judgments: Several workers filed claims in the Workers' Compensation Court seeking benefits. In a separate action, the workers filed a petition for a declaratory judgment in the Workers' Compensation Court seeking a declaration that the claimant disclosure waiver procedures in 39-71-604(3) and 50-16-527(5) violated the workers' right to privacy and deprived them of property without due process. The Workers' Compensation Court granted summary judgment for the workers and declared the statutory provisions unconstitutional. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The Workers' Compensation Court erred in concluding that it had jurisdiction to enter a declaratory judgment in the context of this case. As a court of limited jurisdiction, the Workers' Compensation Court is statutorily authorized to issue declaratory rulings only in the context of a dispute concerning benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act and only as to the applicability of any statutory provision, rule, or order of an agency to that dispute. Benefits were not at issue in this case, so the Workers' Compensation Court did not have jurisdiction to issue a declaratory judgment concerning the constitutionality of 39-71-604(3) and 50-16-527(5), nor is the Workers' Compensation Court a court of record because it does not appear in the list in 3-1-102. (Note that the Legislature added the Workers' Compensation Court to the list of courts of record effective October 1, 2007.) Thompson v. St., 2007 MT 185, 338 M 511, 167 P3d 867 (2007).

Lack of Hearing Record on Support Modification — Vacation of District Court Decree Required: Pamela filed a motion to amend the decree dissolving her marriage, in order to increase child support payments, and a motion to hold her ex-husband, Earl, in contempt for failure to pay child support. The District Court held a hearing, which Earl did not attend. Based upon the hearing, of which no record was made, the District Court modified the decree by increasing Earl's child support payments. Earl was also ordered to pay Pamela's attorney fees and costs. In response, Earl filed a motion for relief from the judgment under former Rule 60, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), but that motion was denied when the District Court failed to rule. Citing Malley v. Malley, 190 M 141, 619 P2d 531 (1980), the Supreme Court held that without a record, the Supreme Court could not determine the change in circumstances justifying the amended decree and Earl was thereby denied effective appellate review. The District Court's order was vacated, and the case was remanded for a hearing on the merits of Pamela's motion. In re Marriage of Long, 268 M 187, 885 P2d 533, 51 St. Rep. 1252 (1994).

Tribal Court Not State Court: Because of involvement of federal agents in a search on an Indian reservation, the search was a federal search governed by Rule 41(a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and hence a search warrant must be issued by a federal court or state court of record. A tribal court is neither a federal court nor a state court as enumerated in 3-1-102; thus the warrants were invalid and subsequent evidence seized pursuant to the warrants is inadmissible. U.S. v. Messerly, 530 F. Supp. 751, 39 St. Rep. 183 (D.C. Mont. 1982).

Record Required — Appeal Denied: The Supreme Court noted in Guardianship of Gullette, 173 M 132, 566 P2d 396 (1977), that the District Court is, by statute, a court of record, and this implies that a record will be kept of the proceedings. Recently, in Schneider v. Ostwald, 190 M 29, 617 P2d 1293, 37 St. Rep. 1728 (1980), a trial court contempt order was set aside because the contempt of court proceedings were not recorded. The same result obtains in the instant case. The record is silent as to why a court reporter was not present. But reasons aside, the failure to record the property distribution hearings has effectively denied the husband appellate review of the trial court's judgment. Malley v. Malley, 190 M 141, 619 P2d 531, 37 St. Rep. 1827 (1980), followed in In re Marriage of Long, 268 M 187, 885 P2d 533, 51 St. Rep. 1252 (1994).

Contested Guardianship Custody: A contested custody proceeding involving the guardianship of minors is a hearing requiring a verbatim record. Failure to hold such a hearing necessitates reversal. In re Gullette, 173 M 132, 566 P2d 396 (1977), followed in In re Marriage of Long, 268 M 187, 885 P2d 533, 51 St. Rep. 1252 (1994).

Court's Refusal to Extend Trial Beyond Time in Pretrial Order — No Error: After the District Court determined that a quitclaim deed conveying property to the defendant was void and had no legal effect, it denied the defendant's request for reimbursement for mortgage and tax payments that were made on the property held under the voided deed. On appeal, the defendant claimed that the District Court's refusal to extend trial beyond the 2-day trial period set forth in the pretrial order was an abuse of discretion on the grounds that there was not enough time for the defendant to present evidence regarding the request for reimbursement. The Supreme Court determined that the defendant made strategic choices in calling eight witnesses to testify about another issue instead of the request for reimbursement. Consequently, there was no abuse of discretion in the District Court's management of the trial. Fink v. Williams, 2012 MT 304, 367 Mont. 431, 291 P.3d 1140.

Former or Current Client — Plaintiffs' Attorney Joins Law Firm Representing Defendants — Motion to Disqualify Firm — Denial of Motion Reversed: The plaintiffs sued a lender for breach of contract, breach of the covenants of good faith and fair dealing, and fraud. Early in the case, the plaintiffs' attorney hired a tax attorney to advise them on certain issues related to their case. The plaintiffs and both attorneys met to discuss the case against the lender. Following the meeting, the plaintiffs received from the tax attorney an engagement letter and a bill, which the plaintiffs paid. A few weeks before the trial date, the plaintiffs received a letter from the tax attorney notifying them that he had taken a position with the law firm representing the lender. This was the plaintiffs' first notice that the tax attorney intended to join the opposing law firm. The plaintiffs moved to disqualify the firm from representing the lender. The lender claimed that the plaintiffs were former clients of the tax attorney and therefore, under the Rules of Professional Conduct, the firm could continue to represent the lender as long as there was a screen in place. The District Court agreed that the plaintiffs were former clients and denied the motion to disqualify. The plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court, which reversed the District Court. The Supreme Court concluded that the plaintiffs reasonably believed they were current clients of the tax attorney based on the engagement letter, the fact the bill did not indicate it was a final bill, and the lack of notice. Because the plaintiffs were current clients at the time the tax attorney joined the other law firm, the Supreme Court held that the firm was disqualified from representing the lender. Krutzfeldt Ranch, LLC v. Pinnacle Bank, 2012 MT 15, 363 Mont. 366, 272 P.3d 635.

No Violation of Due Process Right to Be Free From Bodily Restraints in Civil Commitment Hearing When Record Demonstrates Restraints Are Needed: The District Court did not err in requiring T.J.F. to appear before it at a bench trial without a jury, during a civil commitment proceeding, in full restraints. Testimony regarding T.J.F.'s verbal outbursts and violent physical behavior established the need for restraints in order to maintain orderly conduct of the court's proceedings. In re Mental Health of T.J.F., 2011 MT 28, 359 Mont. 213, 248 P.3d 804.

Security Hearing — Exception to Right to Be Present at Any Hearing Regarding Involuntary Commitment: T.J.F. was not present at the security hearing held by the District Court to determine whether T.J.F. should be required to appear in full restraints during a bench trial. The District Court did not violate T.J.F.'s right to be present at the security hearing because a security hearing is simply an administrative proceeding to ensure the orderly conduct of the bench trial pursuant to 3-1-111. In re Mental Health of T.J.F., 2011 MT 28, 359 Mont. 213, 248 P.3d 804.

No Error in Denial of Motion for Judgment as Matter of Law in Light of Disputed Fact Issues: Defendants contended that the District Court incorrectly denied a motion for judgment as a matter of law. The Supreme Court noted that such a motion is properly granted only when there is a complete absence of evidence that would justify submitting an issue to the jury. In this case, reasonable persons could differ as to conclusions that could be drawn from the evidence related to work performed and money paid under a construction contract, so the motion for judgment as a matter of law was properly denied. Murphy Homes, Inc. v. Muller, 2007 MT 140, 337 M 411, 162 P3d 106 (2007). See also Johnson v. Costco Wholesale, 2007 MT 43, 336 M 105,152 P3d 727 (2007).

Trial Court's Sua Sponte Objection to Testimony Not Violative of Court's Duty to Ensure Fairness of Trial: Price was charged with assault with a weapon, and his defense was based upon the assertion that his roommate committed the crime. On the opening day of trial, both the prosecution and the defense elicited testimony regarding the roommate's propensity for violence. At the beginning of the second day of trial, outside the presence of the jury, the trial judge objected sua sponte to the admission of the character testimony and heard arguments from both parties regarding the objection before ruling that the testimony was inadmissible. The judge then instructed the jury to disregard the testimony and limited testimony on the subject by a future witness. Following conviction, Price appealed on grounds that the judge's actions constituted an abuse of discretion that impaired Price's defense and entitled Price to a new trial. The Supreme Court noted that although a trial judge should avoid officious interference in proceedings and remain impartial, the judge is not a mere figurehead or umpire at a trial who must remain silent and passive throughout a jury trial, speaking only to rule on motions and objections. Rather, the judge's duty is to ensure fairness, avoid waste of time, keep from the jury extraneous, potentially confusing matters, and facilitate the ascertainment of truth, which does not preclude a judge from excluding inadmissible evidence on the judge's own motion if the judge believes exclusion is in the interests of justice. Here, the judge did not cross the line between arbiter and advocate. The judge's objection pertained to testimony elicited by both parties and thus was not partial to the prosecution. The purpose of the objection was to prevent the jury from being misled by extraneous matters or basing the verdict on incompetence evidence, and the judge's action was in the nature of regulating the proceedings to ensure a fair trial. In addition, limiting the testimony by a future witness to the extent that the state opened the door regarding the roommate's character was not an abuse of discretion because the ruling was proportional to that testimony. St. v. Price, 2006 MT 79, 331 M 502, 134 P3d 45 (2006).

No Authority of Courts to Expunge Criminal Records Absent Statutory Authorization: Montana courts have jurisdiction to expunge criminal records pursuant to statute, but absent explicit legislative authorization, courts have no inherent power to expunge criminal records. St. v. Chesley, 2004 MT 165, 322 M 26, 92 P3d 1212 (2004).

Municipal Ordinance Placing Clerk of Municipal Court Under Supervision of Finance Department Void: The city of Bozeman passed municipal ordinance 2.06.030 placing the Municipal Court Clerk under the supervision of the city department of finance, contending that it falls to the governing body to decide where its employees should be placed for supervision purposes. However, this section gives authority to the court to control the conduct of its ministerial officers. The District Court concluded that the clerk was in a ministerial position and voided the ordinance. The Supreme Court agreed. The Municipal Court Clerk may exercise independent judgment only within those areas of responsibility allowed by the Municipal Court Judge, so the position is ministerial. If the Municipal Court was divested of control of its ministerial officers, it would be powerless to regulate its calendar, prioritize the clerk's time to meet the needs of the court, or compel the clerk to obey its orders, thus impairing its power to conduct court business. The ordinance conflicted with the statute and was therefore void. Carlson v. Bozeman, 2001 MT 46, 304 M 277, 20 P3d 792 (2001).

Attorney Failure to Consult Client on Possible Conflict of Interest — Opposing Attorney Failure to Further Pursue Motion to Disqualify: In February 1992, Klemens was served with an amended complaint bringing Klemens into a case. In September 1993, Klemens' motion to disqualify the law firm representing plaintiffs, on grounds of conflict of interest, because the firm had represented Klemens in another matter was denied. Judgment in the case was issued in January 1999, and Klemens appealed denial of the motion to disqualify. Klemens never renewed its conflict of interest objection and did not request from the trial court the relief that Klemens requested on appeal—a new trial. Klemens could have requested an injunction under irreparable harm theory, sought a writ of supervisory control, sought certification of the order denying its motion to disqualify, or reported the alleged conflict of interest to the Commission on Practice. Instead, Klemens did nothing for 6 years. A party may not request relief on appeal that was not requested of the trial court. Denial of the motion to disqualify is affirmed. However, conduct of counsel for both sides must be referred by the Supreme Court to the Commission on Practice, which can pursue appropriate proceedings and any appropriate discipline. Plaintiffs' counsel did not consult with Klemens and obtain Klemens' consent to represent plaintiffs, as required by a professional conduct rule. Klemens' counsel failed to follow up on its disqualification motion. Schuff v. A.T. Klemens & Son, 2000 MT 357, 303 M 274, 16 P3d 1002, 57 St. Rep. 1499 (2000). The decision in Schuff to refer the attorneys involved to the Commission on Practice was held to constitute sufficient notice to preclude claims of delay in disciplinary proceedings in In re Wenz, 2004 MT 7, 319 M 200, 87 P3d 376 (2004), and In re Marra, 2004 MT 8, 319 M 213, 87 P3d 384 (2004). See also Krutzfeldt Ranch, LLC v. Pinnacle Bank, 2012 MT 15, 363 Mont. 366, 272 P.3d 635.

Jurisdiction Over and Authority to Sanction Conduct of Attorney — Motion to Disqualify: It is beyond argument that the Supreme Court has original and exclusive jurisdiction in all matters involving the conduct of attorneys practicing law in Montana. Accordingly, the court and the agency to which the court has delegated disciplinary authority have the exclusive authority to discipline or sanction unprofessional conduct of an attorney, and a lower court cannot give a party relief for misconduct of an attorney or a firm. Violation of a professional conduct rule should not give rise to a cause of action or create a presumption that a legal duty has been breached. The professional conduct rules do not establish substantive legal duties. However, a lower court may consider an attorney's violation of a rule if the violation results in prejudice or adversely affects the rights of another party, as when an attorney is disqualified because of a conflict of interest, because the lower court has inherent authority to control trial administration in the interest of fairness and justice. The essence of a motion to disqualify is that the continued representation of one party by the attorney will prejudice or adversely impact the rights of another party, not that the attorney violated a professional conduct rule, and evidence of violation of a professional conduct rule merely adds additional weight that may tip the scales in favor of disqualification. The rule violation is not prima facie grounds for disqualification or for any other relief. Prejudice must be proved. Schuff v. A.T. Klemens & Son, 2000 MT 357, 303 M 274, 16 P3d 1002, 57 St. Rep. 1499 (2000), followed in In re Wenz, 2004 MT 7, 319 M 200, 87 P3d 376 (2004), In re Marra, 2004 MT 8, 319 M 213, 87 P3d 384 (2004), and Byers v. Cummings, 2004 MT 69, 320 M 339, 87 P3d 465 (2004). See also Krutzfeldt Ranch, LLC v. Pinnacle Bank, 2012 MT 15, 363 Mont. 366, 272 P.3d 635.

Refusal to Bifurcate Wrongful Discharge Claim From Employer's Counterclaim Proper: Jarvenpaa argued that his employer's counterclaim against him for recovery of retirement benefits should have been bifurcated from his wrongful discharge claim because the counterclaim unnecessarily invited evidence of his election to retire and the retirement benefits that he received, which prejudicially persuaded the jury to find that the discharge was fair instead of wrongful. However, evidence of the retirement election was helpful to the jury to make a well-informed decision, including whether the employer acted with malice, and was relevant to the wrongful discharge action. Therefore, the District Court did not err in refusing to bifurcate the issues for separate trial. Jarvenpaa v. Glacier Elec. Co-op, Inc., 1998 MT 306, 292 M 118, 970 P2d 84, 55 St. Rep. 1261 (1998).

Court's Refusal to Bifurcate Defendant's Trial Not Error: Ross argued that the lower court should have allowed the question of whether his letters to the victim were "true threats" to be tried separately from the question of whether the threats were communicated in such a way as to create a reasonable fear in the victim that the threats would be carried out. The Supreme Court held that trial administration issues will not be set aside absent a showing of abuse of discretion, which was not present in Ross's trial. St. v. Ross, 269 M 347, 889 P2d 161, 52 St. Rep. 22 (1995). See also Mont. Rail Link v. Byard, 260 M 331, 860 P2d 121 (1993).

District Court Remand of Appeal From City Court Precluded: A District Court has a number of powers respecting the conduct of its business, none of which include the remand of an appeal from City Court. While 3-1-113 authorizes a District Court to use the means necessary for the exercise of jurisdiction conferred by the constitution or by statute, it does not grant blanket authority to respond to a defendant's failure to appear when the range of responses is circumscribed by statute. Rickett v. Billings, 262 M 339, 864 P2d 793, 50 St. Rep. 1586 (1993), affirming Hardin v. Myers, 194 M 248, 633 P2d 677 (1981), and distinguished in In re Driver's License of Anderson, 284 M 109, 943 P2d 978, 54 St. Rep. 797 (1997).

Sanctions and Contempt Imposed on Attorney by City Court Invalid: A City Court imposed sanctions on an attorney for failing to appear to defend a client in a DUI case. The attorney argued that he had been required to attend a hearing in District Court and had diligently tried to inform the City Court of the conflict. The City Court refused to revoke the sanctions, adding instead a contempt charge. The Supreme Court ruled that the sanctions were improper in that the City Court acted arbitrarily in imposing them. The Supreme Court went on to reverse the contempt, finding on the basis that the sanctions did not constitute a lawful order and therefore the attorney could not be found in contempt for failing to pay the sanctions. Doran v. City Court of Whitefish, 239 M 94, 779 P2d 68, 46 St. Rep. 1539 (1989).

District Court's Power to Order Payment of Expenditures Beyond Budget: District Court's fiscal year budget was overrun, and this stopped or threatened to stop the efficient and orderly administration of justice and court business, creating an emergency. As a court of competent jurisdiction, the District Court may issue orders for the payment of out-of-budget expenditures that are reasonable and necessary. Compliance with the orders by the members of the Board of County Commissioners or by any other officer in the exercise of his official duties is within the exception to personal liability of the officers provided in 7-6-2323 (now repealed). The officers may pass on the propriety of the claims but may not deny them on the basis that they are outside the budget if the court has duly ordered them paid. State ex rel. District Court v. Whitaker, 210 M 363, 681 P2d 1097, 41 St. Rep. 1104 (1984).

No Finding of Willful Disobedience of Court Order — Contempt Not Found: The trial court adjusted the property settlement and the support and maintenance payment to allow the respondent to pay debts incurred in his name by the petitioner during a spending spree after separation but before the divorce. The case was remanded because the petitioner was penalized twice the amount of the spending spree. On remand, the court equalized the property distribution and adjusted the support and maintenance payments. There was no mention of the spending spree debts in the second decree. The petitioner is now being sued for the spending spree debts and brought this action seeking a contempt citation for respondent's failure to pay the debts. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's holding that the respondent was not in contempt. In re Marriage of Grenfell, 200 M 490, 652 P2d 1170, 39 St. Rep. 1891 (1982).

Evidence — Witness Called by Judge: There was no merit to contention that due process was denied at suspended sentence revocation hearing when the judge called a witness to the stand to resolve a conflict in pertinent testimony, for a court may on its own motion call witnesses, and the asserted error was waived because it had not been objected to below. St. v. Sullivan, 197 M 395, 642 P2d 1008, 39 St. Rep. 412 (1982).

Inherent Powers:

The District Court has inherent power to correct errors of Clerk, Judge, or counsel to conform to the actual decision, either immediately or years later. Morse v. Morse, 116 M 504, 154 P2d 982 (1945).

The District Court has power to order its judgments amended by nunc pro tunc order to correct an error which has crept into the judgment by reason of misprision on the part of the Judge, Clerk, or counsel and is apparent on the face of the record. State ex rel. Kruletz v. District Court, 110 M 36, 98 P2d 883 (1940).

Common-Law Powers: This section adds nothing to the powers already possessed by courts of general jurisdiction, for it is merely declaratory of the common law. May v. N. Pac. Ry., 32 M 522, 81 P 328 (1905).

Amendment of Process: The District Court has full power to amend a Writ of Attachment by virtue of this section. Wilson v. Barbour, 21 M 176, 53 P 315 (1898).

Attorney General's Opinions

Duty of Boards of County Commissioners to Accept and Pay Claims for Actual and Necessary Clerical Expenses of Justice's Court: Under 3-10-103, a duty is created on the part of Boards of County Commissioners to accept and pay claims for actual and necessary clerical expenses associated with the operation of Justices' Courts. If disputes arise regarding payment of those expenses, the procedural rule in State ex rel. Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975), applies. Although Boards may have some budgetary discretion when considering payment of actual and necessary court expenses, the statutes governing the county budgeting process do not preclude application of the Browman rule when disputes arise. 49 A.G. Op. 19 (2002).

3-1-112. Rules for courts of record.

Case Notes

Full-Time District Court Reporters Subject to Statutory Workweek Requirement — Recordkeeping Required — Designation of Court Reporter's "Workstation": A District Court reporter who is treated as a full-time salaried county employee is subject to the statutory 40-hour workweek requirement in 7-5-2108, and recordkeeping to document a court reporter's working hours, including overtime, annual leave, and sick leave, must be as determined by the District Court Judge who employs the court reporter. However, any method used to fulfill these requirements must comport with the District Court Judge's authority to control court assistants because allowing a Board of County Commissioners to enforce county personnel policies on court reporters would infringe on that authority. Any mandatory location of work for a court reporter that is set by anyone but the District Court Judge would interfere with the necessary flexibility of the judge. Thus, a court reporter's "workstation" is wherever that reporter is required to be to perform the duties for the judge for whom that court reporter works. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 2000 MT 258, 301 M 496, 10 P3d 805, 57 St. Rep. 1061 (2000).

Rule Excluding Witnesses From Courtroom — Rebuttal Witnesses Exempt: In a prosecution for deliberate homicide, the court did not err in allowing a police officer to testify as a rebuttal witness after the same police officer allegedly violated a rule excluding witnesses from the courtroom and heard the defendant's testimony. Rebuttal witnesses are not within the rule governing exclusion of sworn witnesses from the courtroom during taking of testimony. St. v. Close, 191 M 229, 623 P2d 940, 38 St. Rep. 177 (1981).

Local Rule as Conflicting With Montana Rules of Civil Procedure: Local court Rule 3 of Park County District Court states in part that a party opposing a motion has 10 days after the filing and service of the moving party's brief to serve and file a reply brief. When applied to a motion for summary judgment, local Rule 3 conflicts with former Rule 56(c), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). Whenever a local rule conflicts with Montana Rules of Civil Procedure, the local rule must be set aside. Krusemark v. Hansen, 186 M 174, 606 P2d 1082, 37 St. Rep. 304 (1980).

Force of Rules:

Trial court rule requiring filing of briefs in support of preliminary motions is proper exercise of authority under this section and may be enforced by summary denial of motion where brief has not been filed. Hansen v. Kiernan, 159 M 448, 499 P2d 787 (1972).

Court rules adopted by a Judge are not binding on his successor. State ex rel. Little v. District Court, 49 M 158, 141 P 151 (1914).

Rules of court, when once adopted, under the limitations prescribed by law, become binding upon the court and litigants, for they have the force of statutes within the limitations of their application and should be enforced, except when the court, for good cause shown, in a particular case, may relax them in order that justice may be done. State ex rel. Little v. District Court, 49 M 158, 141 P 151 (1914); State ex rel. Connors v. Foster, 36 M 278, 92 P 761 (1907); State ex rel. Nissler v. Donlan, 32 M 256, 80 P 244 (1905); Mont. Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 27 M 288, 70 P 1114 (1902), explained in 30 M 442, 76 P 1005 (1904); State ex rel. King v. District Court, 25 M 202, 64 P 352 (1901); Martin v. De Loge, 15 M 343, 39 P 312 (1895).

The requirement of a District Court rule that where, after perfection of an appeal from a Justice's Court, appellant fails to file the transcript and papers in the District Court within 10 days, such appeal shall be subject to dismissal, is not jurisdictional. Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913).

Rules of court are binding upon District Courts and their officers insofar as such courts and officers have to do with appellate procedure. State ex rel. Connors v. Foster, 36 M 278, 92 P 761 (1907); Mont. Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 33 M 400, 84 P 706 (1900).

Assignment of Judges: A rule of court assigning all of the criminal cases to one of the Judges of a District Court will not preclude another Judge of the same court from assuming jurisdiction of a criminal case. State ex rel. Little v. District Court, 49 M 158, 141 P 151 (1914).

Departmental Rules: Each Judge of a District Court that has more than one Judge has authority to make rules of court for the control of the business before the department over which he presides, provided they are confined to legitimate subjects for government by court rules. State ex rel. Little v. District Court, 49 M 158, 141 P 151 (1914).

Stipulations Between Parties: A rule of the District Court that agreements between attorneys relating to causes pending will be disregarded by the court unless made in open court and entered in the minutes or reduced to writing, subscribed by the party or his attorney, against whom they are urged, has no application to an executed oral agreement or stipulation admittedly entered into by an attorney. Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913).

3-1-113. Means to carry jurisdiction into effect.

Case Notes

Validity of Search Warrant Issued by Previously Substituted Judge: A search warrant was issued by a judge who had previously been substituted from the case. Defendant contended that the warrant was void ab initio because the substituted judge had no jurisdiction to issue the warrant. The Supreme Court disagreed. Pursuant to 46-5-220, a search warrant may be issued by any District Judge within the state. The judge therefore had general authority to issue the warrant, and the warrant was not void. St. v. Dasen, 2007 MT 87, 337 M 74, 155 P3d 1282 (2007), distinguishing Erickson v. Hart, 231 M 7, 750 P2d 1089 (1988), and St. v. Vickers, 1998 MT 201, 290 M 356, 964 P2d 756 (1998).

Justice of the Peace Required to Follow Established Employee Disciplinary Procedures: Although Justices' Courts undoubtedly possess inherent power under this section to do those acts necessary to ensure proper court functioning, the exercise of that power is not unlimited. A Justice's Court is required to follow established methods for disciplinary action against a court office manager, including the grievance process, before the inherent power can be exercised to suspend the office manager. Clark v. Dussault, 265 M 479, 878 P2d 239, 51 St. Rep. 642 (1994).

District Court Remand of Appeal From City Court Precluded: A District Court has a number of powers respecting the conduct of its business, none of which include the remand of an appeal from City Court. While this section authorizes a District Court to use the means necessary for the exercise of jurisdiction conferred by the constitution or by statute, it does not grant blanket authority to respond to a defendant's failure to appear when the range of responses is circumscribed by statute. Rickett v. Billings, 262 M 339, 864 P2d 793, 50 St. Rep. 1586 (1993), affirming Hardin v. Myers, 194 M 248, 633 P2d 677 (1981), and distinguished in In re Driver's License of Anderson, 289 M 109, 943 P2d 978, 54 St. Rep. 797 (1997).

Lack of Jurisdiction — Lack of Power to Adjudicate: Generally, courts lacking subject matter jurisdiction over a cause of action have no power to adjudicate issues in the action. Sterrett v. Milk River Prod. Credit Ass'n, 234 M 459, 764 P2d 467, 45 St. Rep. 2048 (1988).

Bifurcation of Question of Common-Law Marriage From Issues of Child Custody, Property Distribution, and Maintenance: Subsection (1)(d) of 40-4-104 did not prohibit bifurcation of proceedings (to determine if parties had a common-law marriage) before hearing evidence on custody, property distribution, and maintenance. The trial court lacked authority to grant the requested relief until a determination of the marital relationship was completed because it could not dissolve or equitably distribute the fruits of that which may not exist. Bifurcation was well within the wide discretion of the court. In re Marriage of Geertz, 232 M 141, 755 P2d 34, 45 St. Rep. 942 (1988).

Judicial Immunity for Discharge of Predecessor Judge's Secretary: The summary discharge by a District Judge of his predecessor's personal secretary was a judicial action, and the judge was therefore immune from suit under 2-9-112(2). Mead v. McKittrick, 223 M 428, 727 P2d 517, 43 St. Rep. 1886 (1986), distinguished, with regard to applicability of judicial immunity to bar a grievance hearing regarding the suspension by a Justice of the Peace of a court manager who was not a key employee, in Clark v. Dussault, 265 M 479, 878 P2d 239, 51 St. Rep. 642 (1994).

Appointment of Director as "Suitable Process or Mode of Proceeding": Appointment of a director of family court services was a "suitable process or mode of proceeding" within the meaning of 3-1-113 for the District Court to follow to carry out its statutorily mandated duties under the provisions of the Montana Conciliation Law. Since the District Court acted properly, the position was entitled to be funded. The Commissioners' refusal to comply with the funding order was an arbitrary and capricious abuse of the powers of their office. Bd. of Comm'rs v. District Court, 182 M 463, 597 P2d 728, 36 St. Rep. 1231 (1979).

Election Recount Proceedings: In the absence of statutory directions as to conduct of proceedings, the court could proceed in any suitable manner. State ex rel. Riley v. District Court, 103 M 576, 64 P2d 115 (1937).

Supervisory Control of Courts:

The power of supervisory control is a distinct power and may be exercised to control the discretion of an inferior court in making an order from which no appeal would lie and for which the writs appertaining to the appellate jurisdiction furnish no remedy. State ex rel. Regis v. District Court, 102 M 74, 55 P2d 1295 (1936); State ex rel. Anaconda Copper Min. Co. v. District Court, 25 M 504, 65 P 1020 (1901).

This section is broad enough to cover the exercise of the power of supervisory control by the Supreme Court and is ample to authorize its use in its utmost vigor in the absence of legislation upon the subject. State ex rel. Whiteside v. District Court, 24 M 539, 63 P 395 (1900), explained in State ex rel. Shores v. District Court, 27 M 349, 71 P 159 (1903), and distinguished in State ex rel. Estes v. District Court, 129 M 136, 284 P2d 249 (1955).

Lien Enforcement:

Where the statutory method of enforcing a materialmen's lien is adequate, it is conclusive; but if inadequate, the District Court under its general jurisdiction at law and in equity may adopt any suitable method of proceeding for enforcing it. Cont. Supply Co. v. White, 92 M 254, 12 P2d 569 (1932).

Where, pending action to foreclose a lien, the defendant dies before judgment, the plaintiff may present his claim in accordance with section 91-2714, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and prosecute the action to judgment. In re Stevenson, 87 M 486, 289 P 566 (1930).

Notice of Proceedings: In the absence of statute prescribing the kind and manner of giving of notice to persons interested in an estate of a petition of the estate's attorney for allowance of his fees prior to final settlement, the court may adopt any suitable mode or method. In re Culver's Estate, 91 M 475, 8 P2d 662 (1932), distinguished in State ex rel. Regis v. District Court, 102 M 74, 55 P2d 1295 (1936).

Representative Actions: While there appears to be no method of procedure prescribed in the Code for bringing a representative suit into court when a court has jurisdiction of a cause, it may adopt any suitable mode of procedure or process. State ex rel. Lewis & Clark County v. District Court, 90 M 213, 300 P 544 (1931).

Attachment Affidavit: Where jurisdiction is conferred on a court, all the means necessary to give it effect are also given, and in the absence of such a provision the court may adopt any suitable process. Daley v. Torrey, 71 M 513, 230 P 782 (1924).

Homestead Selection: In selecting a homestead for the family of a decedent where none was selected prior to his death, the probate court may, in the absence of a mode of procedure prescribed by the statute, proceed in substantially the manner indicated by section 33-127, R.C.M. 1947 (now 70-32-106), for its selection during the lifetime of a decedent. In re Trepp's Estate, 71 M 154, 227 P 1005 (1924).

Probate Powers: Although the jurisdiction of the District Court sitting in probate is limited to the exercise of the powers conferred by statute, it nevertheless possesses all the authority incidentally necessary to the effective exercise of the powers expressly conferred. In re McLure's Estate, 68 M 556, 220 P 527 (1923).

Enforcement of Orders: Whenever jurisdiction is conferred upon a court, all the means necessary to carry the same into effect are expressly provided, and if a court has power to make an order, it has jurisdiction to enforce it. State ex rel. Eisenhauer v. District Court, 54 M 172, 168 P 522 (1917).

County Seat Selection: There being no remedy at law to contest the selection or removal of a county seat, equity will take cognizance of the matter under this section. Poe v. Sheridan County, 52 M 279, 157 P 185 (1916).

Execution: A decree for separate maintenance recovered by a married woman may be enforced by execution. Raymond v. Blancgrass, 36 M 449, 93 P 648 (1907), explained in Lewis v. Lewis, 109 M 42, 94 P2d 211 (1939).

Attorney General's Opinions

County Regulatory Power — District Courts: Montana's District Courts are clothed with inherent and statutory power to do all that is necessary to render their jurisdiction effective, including the power to hire necessary court personnel and control them; but it appears that requiring District Court personnel to also abide by county policies and regulations is not an undue interference with the judicial branch. The scope of the judicial authority in this matter in relation to county authority is not an appropriate matter for an Attorney General opinion and would be more appropriately disposed of by either an understanding between the court and the county or a judgment in a court of proper jurisdiction. 39 A.G. Op. 38 (1981).

District Court Employees as County Employees: District Court employees are paid by the county in which the court is located, receive the same county benefits as all other county employees, and are therefore county employees. 39 A.G. Op. 38 (1981).

District Court Employees' Workweek: District Court employees are paid by the county in which the court is situated and are considered county employees; therefore, they are salaried county employees under this section and must work a 40-hour week if required. 39 A.G. Op. 38 (1981).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 583 in (1) at end of first sentence deleted "county attorneys, deputy county attorneys, salaried public defenders, assistant public defenders, employees of the offices of public defenders, clerks of district court, and employees of the offices of the clerks of district court"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Transition: Section 51, Ch. 585, L. 2001, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 55, Ch. 585, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

Transfer of County Employees to State Employment — Preservation of Rights: Section 57, Ch. 585, L. 2001, provided: "(1) District court employees who are employed by the county on June 30, 2002, and who are transferred to state employment by [this act] become state employees on July 1, 2002, except for purposes of application of the judiciary branch personnel plan, as provided in [section 63] [sic, section 64, not codified].

(2) The compensation of former county employees who become state employees under [this act] may not be impaired. This subsection does not preserve the right of any former county employee to any salary or compensation, including longevity benefits, that was payable while the employee was employed by the county and that was not accrued and payable as of June 30, 2002.

(3) An employee who is transferred from county employment to state employment under [this act] may elect to become a member of the state employee benefit plan on July 1, 2002, or remain on the employee's county benefit plan through the remainder of the plan year in effect on June 30, 2002. For an employee who elects to remain on a county benefit plan, the monthly state contribution toward insurance benefits must be transferred to the county benefit plan. Any benefit costs in excess of the state contribution must be paid by the employee.

(4) Accumulated sick and vacation leave and years of service with a county must be transferred fully to the state as of July 1, 2002, and become an obligation of the state at that time. Any liability for accumulated compensatory time of employees who are transferred from county employment to state employment under [this act] is not transferred to the state and remains an obligation of the county that employed the employee prior to the transfer, subject to federal law and the county's personnel policies.

(5) The state becomes a successor employer with regard to any collective bargaining agreement existing on July 1, 2002, that prior to July 1, 2002, covered any employee transferred from county employment to state employment by [this act]. The responsibilities and obligations of the parties to an agreement to which the state becomes a successor employer must, as applied to a transferred employee, continue until the expiration date of the agreement.

(6) In the development of a plan of personnel administration for employees of the judicial branch, the supreme court may recognize an appropriate bargaining unit."

Delayed Application of Judicial Branch Personnel Plan — Salaries for FY 2003: Section 59, Ch. 585, L. 2001, provided: "(1) All judicial branch employees, including district court employees, become subject to the judiciary branch personnel plan adopted by the supreme court, as required by [section 1] [3-1-130], on July 1, 2003.

(2) During fiscal year 2003, each district court employee who was a former county employee and who becomes a state employee under [this act] is entitled to the person's salary and compensation, including longevity payments, that the person is entitled to on June 30, 2002. In addition, the person is entitled to an increase equal to the average pay increase for judicial branch employees if any pay increase is granted for fiscal year 2003.

(3) An employee's compensation may not be reduced by transfer to the judicial branch personnel plan. If application of the judicial branch personnel plan would reduce an employee's compensation, the employee shall remain at the compensation earned at the time of transfer until compensation under the plan requires an increase in the employee's compensation."

Purchase of Court Reporters' Equipment: Section 60, Ch. 585, L. 2001, provided: "The state may:

(1) during fiscal year 2003, on a one-time basis, offer to purchase reporting and transcription equipment from a court reporter who becomes a state employee under 3-5-601(2)(a); or

(2) offer to purchase the equipment of a court reporter who becomes a state employee under 3-5-601(2)(b) under guidelines adopted by the supreme court and recommended by the district court council under [section 5] [3-1-1602]."

Effective Date: Section 63(2), Ch. 585, L. 2001, provided that this section is effective July 1, 2001.

Applicability: Section 64, Ch. 585, L. 2001, provided: "The judiciary branch personnel plan adopted under [section 1] [3-1-130] applies to fiscal years beginning July 1, 2003."

Case Notes

Judicial Branch Personnel Plan — Supreme Court Exclusive Jurisdiction: After adoption of the Judicial Branch Personnel Plan (Plan) by the Supreme Court, Boe, a long-term judicial assistant, filed a complaint in District Court contesting the validity of the Plan. The state moved to dismiss the complaint on the grounds that the Supreme Court had exclusive jurisdiction over the Plan and that the District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. The District Court agreed and dismissed the complaint. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal, holding that the Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction over the Plan and the District Court is without subject matter jurisdiction. The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction over the Plan, and a District Court cannot invalidate, modify, or replace any of it. Boe v. Court Administrator, 2007 MT 7, 335 M 228, 150 P3d 927 (2007).

Testing County Name: A Writ of Mandate to compel the Clerk to issue an execution with the seal bearing the former name of a county is the proper remedy where the Legislature, by a void act, has attempted to change the name of a county. State ex rel. Sackett v. Thomas, 25 M 226, 64 P 503 (1901).

Part Case Notes

Unpublished Opinions Not to Be Cited as Precedent: Opinions and orders designated as "unpublished" should not be cited as legal precedent, and the Supreme Court will disregard arguments or portions of arguments based on unpublished opinions. St. v. Ferre, 2014 MT 96, 374 Mont. 428, 322 P.3d 1047, following St. v. Oie, 2007 MT 328, 340 Mont. 205, 174 P.3d 937.

3-1-301. Days on which courts may be held.

Attorney General's Opinions

Legality of Evening City Court Hours: A City Judge is not prohibited by 3-1-302, 3-11-101, or this section from establishing regular sessions of the court during evening hours as long as regular sessions are not convened on Sundays or other legal holidays and the court is open for business on judicial days. These sections place no limitations on the hours of business. Although 7-4-102 requires that City Court offices be open for business continuously from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. on weekdays, this does not prohibit a City Judge from setting office hours after 5 p.m. on weekdays. As long as the office is open during the required hours for the transaction of business, such as the filing of court documents with the clerk, the City Judge may set additional hours for regular court sessions. 43 A.G. Op. 61 (1990).

3-1-302. Nonjudicial day.

Case Notes

Waiver of Irregularities: By failure to interpose timely objection or by consenting to proceed with the case, a party waives his right to object to proceedings conducted on a holiday. Miller v. Emerson, 120 M 380, 186 P2d 220 (1947).

Publication of Summons: There is no direct statutory prohibition against publication of summons in a newspaper on Sunday, and neither does such publication constitute a judicial act or judicial business within the meaning of this section, it being purely a ministerial act for the purpose of giving public notice to interested parties. State ex rel. Fisher v. District Court, 110 M 61, 99 P2d 211 (1940).

Nonjudicial Acts: Every holiday, including Sunday, is qualifiedly a nonjudicial day; but the prohibition of this section extends only to strictly judicial acts, and some of them are excepted. It does not prohibit the doing of a ministerial act, such as the publishing of an amendment to the state constitution. State ex rel. Hay v. Alderson, 49 M 387, 142 P 210 (1914), explained in Tipton v. Mitchell, 97 M 420, 35 P2d 110 (1934).

Service of Summons: Service of summons on Sunday is not a nullity but a mere irregularity, and a judgment based upon it is not void but voidable. Burke v. Inter-State S&L Ass'n, 25 M 315, 64 P 879 (1901), overruling Hauswirth v. Sullivan, 6 M 203, 9 P 798 (1886).

Attorney General's Opinions

Legality of Evening City Court Hours: A City Judge is not prohibited by 3-1-301, 3-11-101, or this section from establishing regular sessions of the court during evening hours as long as regular sessions are not convened on Sundays or other legal holidays and the court is open for business on judicial days. These sections place no limitations on the hours of business. Although 7-4-102 requires that City Court offices be open for business continuously from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. on weekdays, this does not prohibit a City Judge from setting office hours after 5 p.m. on weekdays. As long as the office is open during the required hours for the transaction of business, such as the filing of court documents with the clerk, the City Judge may set additional hours for regular court sessions. 43 A.G. Op. 61 (1990).

Conduct of Criminal Trial — Never on Sunday: Montana law does not permit criminal trials to be conducted on Sundays except to conclude a trial already initiated as specified in this section. The exercise of power on Sunday by a magistrate with regard to proceedings of a criminal nature, as outlined in subsection (1)(c) of this section, is limited to the issuance of arrest warrants. 43 A.G. Op. 27 (1989).

3-1-312. Sittings of court to be public.

Case Notes

Closure of Probation Revocation Hearing — Interruption a Contempt — Prior Notice of Closure Not Required: The public and the press have the right, with limited exceptions, to attend and observe probation revocation hearings. In a proper case, a District Court may close such a hearing. When a hearing is properly closed, no member of the public or representative of the press may interrupt the due course of the hearing in a manner that might defeat the reason for closure. Such an interruption constitutes a contempt of court. A District Court may proceed on an ad hoc basis, without giving prior notice, to make a closure decision in accordance with the facts and circumstances facing it at the time. State ex rel. Great Falls Tribune Co., Inc. v. District Court, 238 M 310, 777 P2d 345, 46 St. Rep. 1292 (1989).

Preliminary Pleadings — Public's Right to Know: In a defamation case, an affirmative defense based on the privilege under 27-1-804(4) extends to newspaper accounts of preliminary pleadings. The Supreme Court acknowledged that the public has a right to know what happens in the judicial system, including the filing of civil suits. Cox v. Lee Enterprises, Inc., 222 M 527, 723 P2d 238, 43 St. Rep. 1476 (1986), followed, with respect to Commission on Practice investigation, in Lence v. Hagadone Inv., 258 M 433, 853 P2d 1230, 50 St. Rep. 601 (1993).

Exclusion From Courtroom: The power does not exist anywhere to exclude from the courtroom anyone sui juris who comes into the presence of the court when there is accommodation for him and who conducts himself in a becoming manner, except in the civil actions enumerated specifically. St. v. Keeler, 52 M 205, 156 P 1080 (1916).

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 3, Ch. 445, L. 2005, repealed sec. 5, Ch. 498, L. 2003, which terminated this section June 30, 2005. Effective June 28, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 498 in (1)(a), (1)(b), and (1)(c) increased the surcharge from $5 to $10. Amendment effective June 28, 2003, and terminates June 30, 2005.

Termination Provision Extended: Section 5, Ch. 498, L. 2003, had the effect of extending the termination date of this section to June 30, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 257 in (4) substituted reference to department of revenue for reference to state treasurer; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Applicability: Section 49, Ch. 257, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to remittances of state money made to the department of revenue for fiscal years beginning after June 30, 2001."

Extension of Termination Date: Section 1, Ch. 71, L. 1999, amended sec. 4, Ch. 361, L. 1995, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 361 to June 30, 2003. Effective March 16, 1999.

Effective Date: Section 4(1), Ch. 361, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] is effective July 1, 1995."

Termination: Section 4(2), Ch. 361, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] terminates June 30, 1999."

Case Notes

Imposition of Statutory Surcharges and Court Technology Fee Incorrect: A District Court may not increase a defendant's orally imposed criminal sentence in the subsequent written judgment. Because the court failed to impose the $15 misdemeanor surcharge in its oral pronouncement of sentence, the surcharge was invalid. Further, the court information technology fee may be assigned only one time per case, not one time for each charge. St. v. Reynolds, 2017 MT 317, 390 Mont. 58, 408 P.3d 503.

Balancing Factors Applied — No Speedy Trial Violation — Witness Reading From Transcript Error Not Grounds for Reversal: The District Court did not err in balancing the four speedy trial factors as set out in St. v. Ariegwe, 2007 MT 204, 338 Mont. 442, 167 P.3d 815. The Supreme Court balanced the factors, finding no speedy trial violation. The defendant was charged and convicted for sexual intercourse without consent and burglary. Under Rule 801(d)(2) M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10), the District Court did not abuse its discretion to allow officers to read out loud from a transcript of the defendant's statements to refresh the witnesses' recollection. The Supreme Court did not conduct plain error review of the District Court's failure to instruct the jury on elements of theft, because the alleged error did not compromise the fairness of the trial or the judicial process. The District Court erred in imposing more than one surcharge under 3-1-317. St. v. Bullock, 2017 MT 182, 388 Mont. 194, 398 P.3d 881.

Alternative Sentencing Recommendation — No Breach of Plea Agreement — Information Technology Surcharges: The defendant was charged with four crimes related to a vehicle accident and agreed to a plea agreement recommending a deferred sentence. The parties subsequently received a presentence investigation report that was consistent with the plea agreement. At the sentencing hearing, the state expressed concerns about the defendant's housing when asked by the District Court. The defendant did not object to the state's testimony. The District Court rejected the plea agreement, sentenced the defendant to imprisonment, and imposed information technology surcharges per count under 3-1-317. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed in part, holding that the District Court's sentence was fashioned to help the defendant address her chemical dependency issues and that the state did not breach the plea agreement with its comments based on the circumstances of the case. The Supreme Court also reversed in part, finding that the District Court incorrectly imposed the information technology surcharges per count rather than per user under the language of 3-1-317. St. v. Ellison, 2017 MT 88, 387 Mont. 243, 393 P.3d 192, following St. v. Bartosh, 2007 MT 59, 336 Mont. 212, 154 P.3d 58, and distinguishing St. v. LaMere, 2000 MT 45, 298 Mont. 358, 2 P.3d 204, and St. v. Rardon, 2002 MT 345, 313 Mont. 321, 61 P.3d 132.

Surcharge to Be Assessed on Per User, Not Per Count, Basis: The District Court imposed the information technology user surcharge against the defendant for each count on which he was convicted. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, holding that the fee is to be charged on a per user basis. St. v. Pope, 2017 MT 12, 386 Mont. 194, 387 P.3d 870.

No Error in Allowing Parole Officer to Set Restitution Schedule — Refusal to Waive Administrative Fees Proper: Denham contended that it was error for the sentencing court to delegate the scheduling of monthly restitution payments to a parole officer because the version of 46-18-244 in effect at the time of the crime did not provide for that delegation of authority. The Supreme Court held that the amendments to the statute were purely procedural and did not constitute retroactive legislation, impair Denham's rights, or impose additional duties on Denham, so allowing the parole officer to set the restitution schedule was not error. Denham also appealed the $60,099 restitution and the 10% administrative fee and minimal surcharges. However, Denham assured the court at sentencing of his ability to pay the restitution amount, so it was reasonable to assume that he also had the ability to pay the administrative fee and surcharges. The sentencing court was affirmed. St. v. Denham, 2005 MT 26, 326 M 24, 107 P3d 1263 (2005).

Case Notes

Judge Not Required to Recuse Self — Claim Untimely — No Valid Claim of Personal Bias or Prejudice: The defendant argued for the first time on appeal that a District Court Judge should have recused himself from a case because he ruled on matters in a related guardianship and conservatorship proceeding. The defendant claimed that the same issues were dispositive of the defendant's guilt in the criminal case. The defendant further asserted that the judge had personal knowledge of the facts in dispute, had expressed bias against the defendant, and had presided as a judge in a guardianship proceeding that involved a matter at the heart of the state's case against the defendant. The defendant argued that his disqualification claim was not untimely because it was based on the judge's bias or prejudice and because the defendant was unaware of the judge's involvement in the prior proceedings until after the defendant's criminal proceedings concluded. The Supreme Court disagreed with the defendant, reasoning that if judges had to recuse themselves from every such case, they could not, as a practical matter, fulfill their duty to be available to decide matters that come before the courts. Because the defendant's disqualification claim was untimely, because he did not establish a valid claim of personal bias or prejudice, and because he did not raise a colorable claim that the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned, the Supreme Court concluded that the defendant's request for a disqualification hearing lacked merit and was not actionable under Rule 2.12(A) of the Code of Judicial Conduct. St. v. Strang, 2017 MT 217, 388 Mont. 428, 401 P.3d 690.

Disqualification of Judge Proper — Party in Similar, Ongoing Case: An insured person entered into a settlement agreement and stipulation for entry of judgment without the insurer's approval, although the insurer defended the insured person subject to a reservation of rights throughout the matter. The insurer filed a motion to intervene, but the judge concluded the stipulated settlement was reasonable. On appeal, the insurer argued that the judge had a conflict of interest stemming from a sexual harassment complaint in which the judge entered into a stipulated settlement without the authorization of the judge's insurer, which paid for his defense under a reservation of rights. On remand, the District Court correctly concluded that under Rule 2.12 of the Code of Judicial Conduct, the judge should have been disqualified because the judge was an active party in an unresolved and strikingly similar case, and the judge's participation reasonably raised concerns about his impartiality. In addition, the District Court did not improperly rely on statements from the Supreme Court's previous decision in the matter remanding the case to determine whether the disqualification was warranted because the District Court made specific findings concerning the case at hand, the case involving the judge, and overlap between the two cases. Draggin' Y Cattle Co., Inc. v. Junkermier, 2017 MT 125, 387 Mont. 430, 395 P.3d 497.

Legislative Referendum to Restructure Supreme Court Elections — Recusal of Nonretiring Judges Not Warranted — Potential for Bias Too Speculative: The Legislature passed a bill to put a referendum on the ballot to change elections for Supreme Court justices from statewide to regional. Prior to the election, citizens from each of the seven proposed regions filed an action against the Secretary of State, seeking a declaratory judgment that the proposed referendum was unconstitutional as well as an injunction to bar the Secretary of State from putting the measure on the ballot. The District Court granted the plaintiffs summary judgment and the state appealed. Seven legislators in favor of the bill, appearing as amici curiae, argued that those Supreme Court justices who were not retiring should recuse themselves from the case. The Supreme Court concluded that recusal was not warranted under Montana statutes, including the Montana Code of Judicial Conduct. Specifically, the Supreme Court ruled that the law presumes honesty and integrity of a justice and that in this case, the mere possibility of a justice running for reelection and being prevented from doing so by passage of the referendum did not constitute a "direct, personal, substantial, and pecuniary" interest that would obligate the justice to recuse himself. Reichert v. St., 2012 MT 111, 365 Mont. 92, 278 P.3d 455.

Disqualification of Chief Justice Who Was Formerly Attorney General From Certain Cases: Ellis moved to disqualify the Chief Justice from presiding over and participating in Ellis's appeal because the appeal was initiated while the Chief Justice was serving as Attorney General. The Supreme Court held that under Rule 2.12(A)(5)(b) of the Code of Judicial Conduct, a Chief Justice who previously served as Attorney General must be disqualified from cases in which the Chief Justice personally and substantially participated as Attorney General or expressed an opinion concerning the merits of the matter in controversy. However, the fact that the former Attorney General's name appeared on the state's answer brief did not, by itself, trigger a disqualification. In Ellis's case, as Attorney General, the Chief Justice oversaw and approved the filing of the criminal appeal by the state, which constituted personal and substantial participation under the Rule, so disqualification was appropriate. St. v. Ellis, 2009 MT 58, 349 M 317, 206 P3d 564 (2009).

Interruption of Closed Judicial Hearing — Reporter Liable for Contempt: When a probation revocation hearing was properly closed, a reporter who reentered the courtroom after being ordered by the judge to leave was guilty of contempt and subject to fine. State ex rel. Great Falls Tribune Co., Inc. v. District Court, 238 M 310, 777 P2d 345, 46 St. Rep. 1292 (1989).

Evidence — Witness Called by Judge: There was no merit to contention that due process was denied at suspended sentence revocation hearing when the judge called a witness to the stand to resolve a conflict in pertinent testimony, for a court may on its own motion call witnesses, and the asserted error was waived because it had not been objected to below. St. v. Sullivan, 197 M 395, 642 P2d 1008, 39 St. Rep. 412 (1982).

Injunctions Pendente Lite: Where an injunction pendente lite was granted without notice or hearing, after the lapse of a reasonable time it had spent its force, and to the extent that it attempted to restrain beyond a reasonable time, it was void for want of jurisdiction. State ex rel. Cook v. District Court, 105 M 72, 69 P2d 746 (1937), distinguished in State ex rel. McKenzie v. District Court, 111 M 241, 107 P2d 885 (1940).

Misdemeanor Contempt Not Enforceable More Than One Year After Sentence Expired: On April 9, 1998, Dexter was sentenced in Justice's Court to 1 year in jail for third offense DUI. The sentence was suspended on condition that Dexter serve 90 days in jail and pay a $770 fine, but Dexter did neither. Sentence revocation proceedings could have been instituted under 46-18-203 during the time of Dexter's sentence, but were not. About 3 years later, Dexter was arrested on an outstanding warrant after the suspended sentence had expired, and the Justice's Court invoked its contempt powers to sentence Dexter to jail time for failing to fulfill the conditions of the suspended sentence. The Justice of the Peace contended that under 3-10-401, contempt proceedings could be brought at any time, and the District Court concluded that the Justice's Court had the authority to enforce compliance with the lawful sentencing order, but on appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Under the penalties in 3-1-519 in effect at the time (repealed in 2001), contempt of court constituted a misdemeanor crime, which was required under 45-1-205(2)(b) to be prosecuted within 1 year of commission. The last day on which Dexter could have committed contempt was April 9, 1999, so prosecution was required to be commenced by April 9, 2000. Because the contempt prosecution did not commence until Dexter was arrested on January 23, 2002, the Justice's Court lacked jurisdiction to hold Dexter in contempt for failure to comply with the terms of a sentence that expired in April 1999. Dexter v. Shields, 2004 MT 159, 322 M 6, 92 P3d 1208 (2004). See also Milanovich v. Milanovich, 200 M 83, 655 P2d 959 (1982).

Criminal Contempt and Contempt of Court Distinguished — District Court Without Jurisdiction to Try Criminal Contempt: Criminal contempt, a misdemeanor crime defined in 45-7-309, is an offense against society prosecuted by the state, whereas contempt of court is a judicial power arising out of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., and Title 3 that allows a court to enforce its own judgments and maintain decorum in its proceedings. Thus, while only the District Court could have found the defendant in contempt of court for failure to pay a fine from a criminal proceeding of that court, it lacked jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor criminal contempt action for failure to pay the fine because criminal contempt, like most other misdemeanors, must be brought in Justice's Court. St. v. Abrams, 209 M 508, 680 P2d 585, 41 St. Rep. 871 (1984).

Personal Liability for Official Action Holding One in Contempt: Action against county officials in their personal capacity, arising out of plaintiffs' being held in contempt of court after refusing to leave court upon order of the Justice of the Peace, was properly dismissed as there was no basis for personal liability because the defendants acted in their official capacities only. Stickney v. St., 195 M 415, 636 P2d 860, 38 St. Rep. 1991 (1981).

Part Case Notes

Supervision and Enforcement of Pre-1973 Water Decree by District Court — No Due Process Violation: Plaintiff brought a contempt and injunction action in District Court to prevent defendant from interfering with plaintiff's appropriation rights under a 1940 water decree. Following a bench trial in District Court, plaintiff's petition was dismissed and plaintiff was enjoined from interfering with defendant's diversion works and conveyance system. Following a determination of the source and flow of the water, the District Court also ordered that defendant allow a specific amount of water through the diversion system to plaintiff. On appeal, plaintiff contended that the permanent modification of the 1940 decree by the District Court in a contempt and injunction action violated plaintiff's due process rights. The Supreme Court held that the District Court did not exceed its jurisdiction by supervising the distribution of previously adjudicated water, enforcing the 1940 decree, and filling in the pre-1973 decree with further delineations. Because the District Court did not permanently modify the 1940 decree, plaintiff's due process rights were not violated. Hidden Hollow Ranch v. Field, 2004 MT 153, 321 M 505, 92 P3d 1185 (2004).

Taxpayer Properly Held in Contempt for Refusal to File Income Tax Returns — Privilege Against Self-Incrimination No Defense: Gillispie failed to file an income tax return for 4 years. The District Court ordered her to file the returns or to show cause why she should not be required to file them. At the hearing, the Department of Revenue introduced Gillispie's W-2 forms, which showed that she had made the minimum income necessary to require her to file returns. The District Court ordered her to file the returns or be found in contempt. When Gillispie failed to file the returns, the District Court held her in contempt, and Gillispie filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus with the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held that the District Court had jurisdiction to order Gillispie to file the returns and jurisdiction to hold Gillispie in contempt and that the District Court also had sufficient evidence to do so. The Supreme Court also held that Gillispie's privilege against self-incrimination does not justify the outright refusal to file a return and cannot be used as a method of evading payment of lawful taxes. The Supreme Court held that she must demonstrate the specific parts of the returns that would result in self-incrimination. Gillispie v. Sherlock, 279 M 21, 929 P2d 199, 53 St. Rep. 507 (1996).

Contempt Order — Costs Award Proper — Attorney Fees Award Improper: In reviewing a contempt order that arose out of a water rights dispute, the Supreme Court ruled that an award of costs to the irrigation district as the prevailing party was proper, but that an award of attorney fees to the district was not proper. The court reasoned that no applicable statute or contractual provision provided for attorney fees and that the case did not fit within the exceptions recognized in Foy v. Anderson, 176 M 507, 580 P2d 114, 35 St. Rep. 811 (1978). State ex rel. Foss v. District Court, 216 M 327, 701 P2d 342, 42 St. Rep. 845 (1985).

Judgment Construed to Prevent Excavating That Causes Sloughing, Slumping, or Subsidence Within 30-Foot Buffer — District Court Erred in Denying Motion for Contempt: The defendant, who operates a gold mine on his property, was permanently enjoined from excavating within 30 feet of the plaintiffs' property boundary to ensure lateral support. After the defendant failed to abide by the order and a previous written agreement, the plaintiffs filed a motion for contempt to remediate for sloughing and ground cracking that occurred as a result of the excavating. The District Court denied the motion and awarded attorney fees to the defendant. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the defendant was prohibited from excavating in a way that caused sloughing, slumping, or subsidence into the 30-foot buffer. Levens v. Ballard, 2011 MT 153, 361 Mont. 108, 255 P.3d 195.

Standard of Review of Family Law Contempt Decisions: Because contempt is intended as a discretionary power necessary to enforce the dignity and authority of the court, in a family law matter, the Supreme Court will review the findings and decision not to hold a party in contempt for a blatant abuse of discretion. In the present case, the husband was essentially in compliance with previous orders regarding payment of child support, so the District Court's dismissal of contempt charges was not a blatant abuse of discretion. In re Marriage of Winters, 2004 MT 82, 320 M 459, 87 P3d 1005 (2004), following In re Marriage of Baer, 1998 MT 29, 287 M 322, 954 P2d 1125 (1998).

DUI Suspension or Revocation Clarified — Law of Case Doctrine and Collateral Estoppel Inapplicable — Contempt Order Refused: Sanders was arrested for a second DUI in a 5-year period and filed an action in District Court seeking review of the facts of the arrest. The District Court and the Supreme Court upheld the arrest and noted that a 6-month suspension of Sanders' license would take place. Later, after the Department of Justice refused to reinstate the license after the 6-month period expired because 61-8-402 applied and required a revocation of Sanders' license for 1 year, Sanders brought a contempt action in the District Court asking that the Department be held in contempt for failure to reinstate his license after expiration of the 6-month period. Sanders argued that the 6-month period had become the law of the case and that the failure of the Department to follow that law was a contempt of the District Court. After reviewing the records of the District Court and its own record in the previous DUI action, the Supreme Court held that the law of the case doctrine was inapplicable. Citing Haines Pipeline Constr., Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 265 M 282, 876 P2d 632 (1994), and Scott v. Scott, 283 M 169, 939 P2d 998 (1997), the Supreme Court explained that the law of the case doctrine applies only to the rulings of a court that are necessary to the decision and, in the case of the District Court's and Supreme Court's prior ruling in Sanders' DUI conviction, a determination that only a 6-month suspension was required under 61-8-402 was not necessary to either the District Court's or the Supreme Court's prior ruling. Those rulings, the Supreme Court said, concerned only whether the arresting officer had probable cause for the arrest. Thus, the Supreme Court held, the reference to a 6-month suspension in the previous opinions was dicta, there was no law of the case determined concerning the law governing license suspension or revocation, and therefore there could be no contempt for failure to reinstate Sanders' license. The Supreme Court also held that collateral estoppel was likewise inapplicable to require the Department to reinstate the license because collateral estoppel applies only to previously litigated issues and the period of license suspension or revocation of Sanders' license had not been previously litigated. Sanders v. St., 1998 MT 62, 288 M 143, 955 P2d 1356, 55 St. Rep. 272 (1998).

Distinguishing Between Civil and Criminal Contempt: Contempts are neither wholly civil nor wholly criminal, but classification of a contempt as one or the other is crucial, particularly when the person is sentenced to confinement, because the classification determines the procedures that the court must follow. There is nothing inherent in a contemptuous act or refusal to act that classifies it as civil or criminal. Rather, it is the character and purpose of the punishment that the court chooses to impose that serves to distinguish between civil and criminal contempt. If the sanction is intended to force compliance with the court's order, the contempt is properly classified as civil. If the purpose is to punish the contemnor for a specific act and to vindicate the authority of the court, the contempt is criminal. (See 2001 amendment.) Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Necessity of Criminal Charge and Due Process in Contempt Proceeding Resulting in Criminal Penalty: The District Court stated that the purpose of its sentence for contempt for practicing law without a license was to compel performance and that the court was thus acting under 3-1-520, which allows incarceration until performance occurs. However, in reality, the sentence, 30 days in jail, to be suspended upon paying a $500 fine within 10 days, was punishment for past acts. Therefore, the contempt proceeding was properly characterized as criminal rather than civil because a contempt is classified as criminal if the purpose of the sanction imposed is punishment and civil if the purpose of the sanction imposed is to compel compliance with a court order. A criminal contempt proceeding must be under the procedures in Title 46 to ensure that criminal penalties are not imposed without affording the proper protections. The lower court erred by imposing a criminal sentence when no criminal charges were brought under 45-7-309, creating the crime of criminal contempt, and defendant was not afforded the due process that is guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions. (See 2001 amendment.) Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Nonlawyer Filing Brief and Notice of Appearance for Civil Defendant: In the state's action against Brue for an injunction, alleging operation of an unlicensed and unshielded motor vehicle wrecking facility, Huffine filed a notice of appearance as counsel for Brue and a brief in support of the pleadings. Huffine advised the court that it should direct all further correspondence to him, "a private citizen having been designated to act as counsel by and for the Defendant". The actions of Huffine, who was not a licensed attorney, constituted the practice of law without a license and were a contempt of court. Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Contempt Order in Paternity Suit Upheld: Pedersen initiated a suit against Nordahl to establish that he was the father of her unborn twins and to obtain child support. During discovery, Nordahl stated that he knew of no other person who had had sexual intercourse with Pedersen during the period of the twins' conception. At the trial, when asked by the judge, Nordahl testified that a specific friend had sexual intercourse with Pedersen during the period of conception. On the basis of Nordahl's inconsistent answers, the District Court held him in contempt for a false answer. The Supreme Court ruled that a contempt order in a paternity action is subject to review and that Nordahl's falsehood was a sufficient legal basis for holding him in contempt. In re Pedersen v. Nordahl, 261 M 284, 862 P2d 411, 50 St. Rep. 1338 (1993).

Refusal to Allow Discovery in Criminal Case — Due Process and Standard of Proof — Contempt Upheld: Petitioner, a Yellowstone County Deputy Attorney, was ordered by the District Court in an omnibus hearing to allow discovery of the state witnesses and any written statements they had made. At the time of the hearing, petitioner knew of the existence of a 70-page statement by a drug informant but did not disclose it to the court or to the defendant in a criminal case because petitioner believed it to be "intelligence information" since the affidavit did not mention the defendant in the criminal case by name. Petitioner was held in contempt for failing to turn over the affidavit and petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari. The Supreme Court noted that at the District Court hearing on the contempt charge, while the petitioner's supervisors testified that they believed the decision of whether the affidavit was relevant and should therefore be turned over to defense counsel should be made by the District Court, petitioner testified that that decision was for her to make. The Supreme Court also held that petitioner received due process in the form of a show cause hearing and that the standard of proof applicable to the District Court's finding of contempt required the affirmance of that finding unless it was not supported by substantial evidence. Because the Supreme Court found substantial evidence in the transcripts that petitioner refused to recognize the District Court's authority, the Supreme Court affirmed the findings and conclusions and refused to issue the writ. (See 2001 amendment.) State ex rel. O'Connor v. District Court, 245 M 88, 799 P2d 1056, 47 St. Rep. 1844 (1990).

Standard of Review in Contempt Appeal: In reviewing a contempt appeal, the Supreme Court's standard of review is whether substantial evidence supports the judgment of contempt. Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989).

Contempt Proceeding Independent of Appeal of Judgment Sought to Be Enforced: A contempt proceeding is entirely independent of the civil action out of which it arose; therefore, the District Court has the authority to enforce its judgment even though an appeal is pending on that judgment. Further, the finding by a District Court Judge that relator was in contempt of an order which that judge had issued a year earlier was proper even though another judge had since been assigned to the proceeding. The power of contempt is to enforce the decorum of the court, not the dignity of any particular judge of the court. State ex rel. Foss v. District Court, 216 M 327, 701 P2d 342, 42 St. Rep. 845 (1985).

Criminal Contempt and Contempt of Court Distinguished — District Court Without Jurisdiction to Try Criminal Contempt: Criminal contempt, a misdemeanor crime defined in 45-7-309, is an offense against society prosecuted by the state, whereas contempt of court is a judicial power arising out of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., and Title 3 that allows a court to enforce its own judgments and maintain decorum in its proceedings. Thus, while only the District Court could have found the defendant in contempt of court for failure to pay a fine from a criminal proceeding of that court, it lacked jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor criminal contempt action for failure to pay the fine because criminal contempt, like most other misdemeanors, must be brought in Justice's Court. St. v. Abrams, 209 M 508, 680 P2d 585, 41 St. Rep. 871 (1984).

Contempt Proceeding Independent of Civil Matter: The filing of a notice of appeal to review the propriety of a contempt citation does not divest the District Court of jurisdiction over the underlying civil matter. Contempt proceedings are entirely independent of the civil action from which they arise. McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255, 35 St. Rep. 1191 (1978), following State ex rel. Enochs v. District Court, 113 M 227, 123 P2d 971 (1942).

Independent Proceeding: A contempt proceeding is entirely independent from the action out of which it arose. State ex rel. Enochs v. District Court, 113 M 227, 123 P2d 971 (1942).

Civil Contempt: A criminal contempt is conduct that is directed against the dignity and authority of the court; a civil contempt consists in failing to do something ordered to be done by a court in a civil action for the benefit of the opposing party therein and is therefore not an offense against the dignity of the court but against the party in whose behalf the violated order is made. Contempts prosecuted to preserve or restore the rights of private parties are civil and remedial in their nature. Pelletier v. Glacier County, 107 M 221, 82 P2d 595 (1938).

Direct and Constructive Contempt: A direct contempt is an open insult committed in the presence of the court; and a constructive contempt is an act done not in the presence of the court but at a distance that tends to belittle, to degrade, or to obstruct, interrupt, prevent, or embarrass the administration of justice. Pelletier v. Glacier County, 107 M 221, 82 P2d 595 (1938).

Criminal Contempt: The enumeration in this section of certain acts as contempts is not exclusive, since other acts constitute contempts by law. State ex rel. Metcalf v. District Court, 52 M 46, 155 P 278 (1916).

Nature of Proceedings: Contempt proceedings are sui generis and have most, if not all, of the characteristics of a criminal case and few, if any, of a civil action. Dunlavey v. Doggett, 38 M 204, 99 P 436 (1909); State ex rel. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co. v. Harney, 30 M 193, 76 P 10 (1904), distinguished in State ex rel. Nissler v. Donlan, 32 M 256, 80 P 244 (1905).

Inherent Power of Courts: The power to punish for contempt is inherent in the courts of record of this state. Territory v. Murray, 7 M 251, 15 P 145 (1887), distinguished in In re Shannon, 11 M 67, 27 P 352 (1891); State ex rel. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co. v. Clancy, 30 M 193, 76 P 10 (1904); In re Mettler, 50 M 299, 146 P 747 (1915); State ex rel. Metcalf v. District Court, 52 M 46, 155 P 278 (1916).

PROCEDURE IN CONTEMPT PROCEEDINGS

Misdemeanor Contempt Not Enforceable More Than One Year After Sentence Expired: On April 9, 1998, Dexter was sentenced in Justice's Court to 1 year in jail for third offense DUI. The sentence was suspended on condition that Dexter serve 90 days in jail and pay a $770 fine, but Dexter did neither. Sentence revocation proceedings could have been instituted under 46-18-203 during the time of Dexter's sentence, but were not. About 3 years later, Dexter was arrested on an outstanding warrant after the suspended sentence had expired, and the Justice's Court invoked its contempt powers to sentence Dexter to jail time for failing to fulfill the conditions of the suspended sentence. The Justice of the Peace contended that under 3-10-401, contempt proceedings could be brought at any time, and the District Court concluded that the Justice's Court had the authority to enforce compliance with the lawful sentencing order, but on appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Under the penalties in 3-1-519 in effect at the time (repealed in 2001), contempt of court constituted a misdemeanor crime, which was required under 45-1-205(2)(b) to be prosecuted within 1 year of commission. The last day on which Dexter could have committed contempt was April 9, 1999, so prosecution was required to be commenced by April 9, 2000. Because the contempt prosecution did not commence until Dexter was arrested on January 23, 2002, the Justice's Court lacked jurisdiction to hold Dexter in contempt for failure to comply with the terms of a sentence that expired in April 1999. Dexter v. Shields, 2004 MT 159, 322 M 6, 92 P3d 1208 (2004). See also Milanovich v. Milanovich, 200 M 83, 655 P2d 959 (1982).

Petition for Contempt of Court in Tribal Water Rights Case Dismissed: Despite prior holdings in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073 (1996), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244 (1999), that the state does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) granted a permit for the use of ground water on the Flathead Indian Reservation. The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, in a petition for original jurisdiction, sought to hold DNRC and the DNRC employees who were involved in the permitting process in contempt of court. The Supreme Court granted respondents' motion to dismiss the petition without prejudice, holding that the matter would more properly be raised in trial court where venue is established so that evidence could be presented and factual issues resolved. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Stults, 2002 MT 280, 312 M 420, 59 P3d 1093 (2002).

Time Bar on Writ of Certiorari to Review Contempt Proceedings: In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court was asked to establish a timeframe within which a petition for review of a contempt order must be filed. The issue was whether the time limitation should come from Title 25, which includes the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure and the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure, or from Title 27, which prescribes the various statutes of limitation for the commencement of actions. The court noted that there is no appeal, as such, from an order of contempt in a civil proceeding and that the exclusive method of review of civil contempt orders (with certain exceptions) is through a writ of certiorari or writ of review. That review is generally limited to jurisdictional questions and whether evidence supports the contempt. Therefore, the issue of timeliness for filing a petition for a writ of certiorari or review is not a statute of limitations issue, and to mechanically characterize those writs for the review of contempt proceedings as original proceedings governed by the 5-year statute of limitations in 27-2-231 would be to deny the basic nature of appellate review. Further, petitions for writs of certiorari to review contempt proceedings are fundamentally different from other original proceedings commenced in the Supreme Court and from petitions for writs of supervisory control, which do not so much involve appellate review of and a decision on the underlying proceedings as they involve the court dealing with discreet questions of law during the pendency of the underlying proceedings. Because the timeframe in which to file petitions for writs of certiorari to review contempt proceedings is a procedural issue analogous to the procedure for filing a notice of appeal, the Supreme Court held that former Rule 72, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), former Rule 1, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), former Rule 17, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), and 27-25-103 require that the timeframe for those petitions be determined by the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure. Specifically, pursuant to former Rule 5, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), a petition for a writ of certiorari to review contempt proceedings must be filed with the Clerk of the District Court within 30 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding, unless the state is a party, in which case the petition must be filed within 60 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding. This may not be construed to limit the Supreme Court's power to grant writs of supervisory control or to consider applications for other types of original proceedings. The Supreme Court chose not to establish a precedent that allows contempt proceedings to be delayed until the underlying cause is resolved. Jones v. District Court, 2001 MT 276, 307 M 305, 37 P3d 682 (2001), overruling Shaffroth v. Lamere, 104 M 175, 65 P2d 610 (1937), to the extent that Shaffroth holds that the general 5-year statute of limitations in 27-2-231 applies to all writs of review authorized in 27-25-102.

Clarification of Family Law Exception to Supreme Court Review of District Court Contempt Orders — When Writ of Certiorari Required — Ancillary Order Exception: Seeking to narrow and clarify the judicially created family law exception to the writ of certiorari requirement of 3-1-523 that was expressly extended to dissolution of marriage contempt proceedings in In re Marriage of Smith, 212 M 223, 686 P2d 912 (1984), and In re Marriage of Sessions, 231 M 437, 753 P2d 1306, 45 St. Rep. 744 (1988), and to balance the exception with the statute and longstanding Montana case law generally allowing no direct appeal from a contempt order unless the writ is granted, the Supreme Court concluded that it would be poor public policy to create circumstances whereby a District Court's contempt powers are diminished in any manner by one party's ability to file a direct appeal that in turn frivolously and needlessly delays that party's compliance with the lower court's judgments and orders. To cover contentious disputes that arise in family law, the court created the ancillary order exception, establishing that the family law direct appeal exception applies only when the judgment appealed from includes an ancillary order, meaning an order that determines the rights of the parties as a result of the contemptuous conduct—all under one judgment, that affects the substantial rights of the parties. The ancillary order may result from the proper exercise of the court's jurisdiction, in which case a writ of certiorari would necessarily be denied. However, a lone contempt order, regardless of the underlying law of the case, cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court on direct appeal. (See 2001 amendment to 3-1-523.) Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000), followed in In re Marriage of DeLude, 2000 MT 75, 299 M 123, 999 P2d 306, 57 St. Rep. 331 (2000). See also State ex rel. Zosel v. District Court, 56 M 578, 185 P 1112 (1919), and Milanovich v. Milanovich, 200 M 83, 655 P2d 959, 39 St. Rep. 1554 (1982).

Standard for Review of Family Law Contempt Orders — Jurisdiction and Evidence — Family Law Exception Clarified: The standard for review of contempt orders, pursuant to the granting of a writ of certiorari, is, first, to determine whether the court that found contempt acted within its jurisdiction. For a court to have acted within its jurisdiction: (1) it must have cognizance of the subject matter; (2) it must have presence of the proper parties; and (3) its action must be invoked by proper pleadings and the judgment must be within the issues raised. A court lacks or exceeds jurisdiction by any act that exceeds the defined power of the court, whether that power is defined by constitutional provision, statute, or court rule or under the doctrine of stare decisis. The second part of the standard for review of contempt orders is to determine whether substantial evidence exists to support the court's findings. The family law exception relevant to review on direct appeal of a District Court judgment and orders made in cases of contempt is subject to the same standard of review. (See 2001 amendment to 3-1-523.) Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000), following State ex rel. Porter v. First Judicial District, 123 M 447, 215 P2d 279 (1950), and Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715, 55 St. Rep. 1001 (1998), and followed in In re Marriage of Coward, 2000 MT 128, 300 M 1, 2 P3d 822, 57 St. Rep. 531 (2000). See also In re Marriage of Sullivan, 258 M 531, 853 P2d 1194, 50 St. Rep. 648 (1993).

When Summary Contempt Proceedings Appropriate — Entitlement to Due Process When Instant Action Not Necessary: Regardless of the type of contempt committed, direct or indirect, a court's primary consideration before subjecting a contemnor to summary contempt proceedings must be whether immediate corrective steps are necessary to restore order, maintain dignity and authority of the court, and prevent delay. However, in cases when it is not necessary for a court to take instant action, a contemnor is entitled to a full due process hearing traditionally associated with indirect contempt, a finding that the evidence establishes the contemnor's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt in instances when criminal punishment is a consequence, and a hearing in front of an unbiased court other than the court in which the misconduct occurred. In the present case, an attorney's conduct did not necessitate immediate District Court action, so the Supreme Court remanded the case for a hearing in front of a different judge to ensure the attorney's due process rights. (See 2001 amendment.) Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715, 55 St. Rep. 1001 (1998), followed in Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000).

Right of Allocution in Summary Contempt Proceedings: Following the rationale in State ex rel. Smith v. District Court, 210 M 344, 677 P2d 589 (1984), the Supreme Court held that in cases of direct contempt, the right to be heard, or right of allocution, should be afforded the accused contemnor in a summary contempt proceeding. The right of allocution is particularly strong when contempt is contained in a brief and the contemnor has no notice that the court considers the brief to be contemptuous prior to receiving the court's written order. Before being sentenced, the contemnor should be afforded the opportunity to explain or excuse the written filing. A trial is not required, but the contemnor should be allowed a reasonable opportunity to defend or explain the actions or present arguments in mitigation. Failure to provide for allocution constituted grounds for vacation of sentence and remand for the opportunity for allocution. (See 2001 amendment.) Malee v. District Court, 275 M 72, 911 P2d 831, 53 St. Rep. 44 (1996), following Groppi v. Leslie, 404 US 496, 30 L Ed 2d 632, 92 S Ct 582 (1971), and U.S. v. Lumumba, 741 F2d 12 (2nd Cir. 1984), and followed in Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715, 55 St. Rep. 1001 (1998).

Conclusion Regarding Absence of Serious Endangerment in Contempt Proceeding as Error — Substantial Rights Not Affected: At a contempt hearing to determine whether mother fabricated an incident of child sexual abuse in order to deprive father of visitation rights, the District Court entered a conclusion of law regarding the absence of serious endangerment under 40-4-217. That conclusion exceeded the scope of the show cause hearing but did not constitute reversible error because the substantial rights of the mother were not affected, in light of the fact that the contempt ruling was sufficiently supported. Woolf v. Evans, 264 M 480, 872 P2d 777, 51 St. Rep. 355 (1994).

Failure to Stay Contempt Proceedings Until Resolution of Criminal Charge Not Error: Husband never moved to stay contempt proceedings against him and, in fact, consented to proceed, but later contended that the District Court should have acted sua sponte to suspend criminal proceedings pending against him in another state. Proceeding absent objection and with consent was not error. In re Marriage of Prescott, 259 M 293, 856 P2d 229, 50 St. Rep. 801 (1993).

Nine Days Sufficient to Obtain Counsel in Contempt Proceeding: Unless an act constituting contempt occurs in open court, due process requires that the person charged have the right to be represented by counsel. The right to counsel, however, has generally been held to mean that one charged is entitled to a reasonable opportunity to employ counsel. In this case, a period of 9 days was held to be an adequate opportunity to employ counsel. Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989). See Lilienthal v. District Court, 200 M 236, 650 P2d 779 (1982), where a 1-day period was held to provide an inadequate opportunity to employ counsel, and In re Marriage of Prescott, 259 M 293, 856 P2d 229, 50 St. Rep. 801 (1993), in which a 7-day period was held sufficient to provide an adequate opportunity to provide counsel. (See 2001 amendment.)

Lack of Sufficient Notice — Opportunity to Obtain Counsel Denied: In an action for contempt (not occurring in open court), notice was received on Thursday to defend the action on the following Monday. The District Court was informed that the person charged with the contempt was unable to be represented because he was unable to reach his attorney on such short notice. The court erred in proceeding with the hearing because the notice did not comport with due process requirements affording a person charged with contempt reasonable opportunity to secure counsel and to defend himself. (See 2001 amendment.) Lilienthal v. District Court, 200 M 236, 650 P2d 779, 39 St. Rep. 1711 (1982).

Jurisdiction to Issue Contempt Order — Service of Witness Subpoena Proper: The subpoena was delivered by the Deputy Sheriff to the relator's secretary who, in turn, showed the relator the subpoena. Because the secretary was over 18 years of age and was not a party to the action, the requirements of this section were fulfilled and the District Court had jurisdiction to issue a contempt order for disobedience to the witness subpoena. There was sufficient evidence to support the finding of contempt. State ex rel. Anderson v. District Court, 188 M 77, 610 P2d 1183, 37 St. Rep. 916 (1980).

Contempt — Disobedience of Court Order — Enforcement: Where an alleged contempt by disobedience of an order of the court occurs during the pendency of an appeal, an action should be instituted in court because a contempt proceeding is entirely independent from the civil action out of which it arose. Myhre v. Myhre, 168 M 521, 548 P2d 1395 (1976).

Disqualification of Judge: District Judge committed error in citing one for direct contempt for attacking his personal integrity in a matter which arose out of past litigation, in presiding at the hearing in which he was personally interested instead of calling in another judge, and in testifying as a witness in his own behalf. (See 2001 amendment.) State ex rel. Moser v. District Court, 116 M 305, 151 P2d 1002 (1944), distinguished in In re Marriage of Prescott, 259 M 293, 856 P2d 229, 50 St. Rep. 801 (1993), in which the District Court offered to testify but never actually took the stand to testify on its behalf.

Review of Proceedings: The only way in which one adjudged guilty of contempt may have the proceedings reviewed by the Supreme Court under sec. 3, Art. VIII, Mont. Const., is by invoking the Writ of Review or, in a proper case, the Writ of Supervisory Control. State ex rel. Burns v. District Court, 83 M 200, 271 P 439 (1928).

Proof of Guilt: Contempt proceedings are criminal in their nature, and the evidence must show that the accused is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. State ex rel. Nett v. District Court, 72 M 206, 232 P 204 (1925).

Refusal of Process: The District Court may punish a defendant in an action in claim and delivery for contempt notwithstanding that technically it had not acquired jurisdiction over him. State ex rel. Bruce v. District Court, 33 M 359, 83 P 641 (1906).

Constitutional Limitations: A contempt of court is in a sense a public offense, yet it is not one a prosecution for which is exclusively controlled by constitutional limitations circumscribing methods of prosecution of strictly criminal offenses. State ex rel. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co. v. Clancy, 30 M 193, 76 P 10 (1904); State ex rel. Flynn v. District Court, 24 M 33, 60 P 493 (1900).

VIOLATION OF STATUTE

Unauthorized Distribution of Records — Standards for Attorneys: Attorney charged with contempt of court for violating statute prohibiting unauthorized dissemination of material in records of dependent and neglected child proceeding was a licensed professional and an officer of the court and was not subject to the "reasonable man" standard but to a higher standard, one dictated by the nature of his profession. Wyse v. District Court, 195 M 434, 636 P2d 865, 38 St. Rep. 2005 (1981).

Unauthorized Distribution of Records — Defense Barred: Attorney charged with contempt of court for unauthorized dissemination of information in records of dependent and neglected child proceeding, in violation of 41-3-205, could not argue the statute was vague where he admitted that he knew such a statute existed and that a court order was probably needed to obtain the information but did not bother to look up the statute prior to his dissemination. Wyse v. District Court, 195 M 434, 636 P2d 865, 38 St. Rep. 2005 (1981).

DISOBEYING COURT

Destruction of Items Awarded to Husband Damaged by Son in Wife's Home — Wife Properly Held in Contempt: The District Court issued an order dividing the parties' marital estate. Before the husband was able to get some of the items distributed to him that were in his wife's possession, their son set fire to them. The District Court held the wife in contempt and ordered her to pay attorney fees even though she did not damage the items herself. On appeal, the Supreme Court agreed that the wife was responsible for complying with the court's order regardless of who destroyed the items still in her possession. In re Marriage of Novak, 2014 MT 62, 374 Mont. 182, 320 P.3d 459.

Continued Obstruction of Property Settlement Agreement — Refusal to Comply with Court Order — Finding of Contempt Not Error — Award of Attorney Fees Proper: The divorcing parties entered into a property settlement agreement whereby the wife gave up her interest in the parties' two businesses in exchange for a promissory note and the right to request and receive financial information regarding the businesses. After the wife learned that the businesses were failing under the husband's control, the parties agreed that the wife would assume managerial and operational control of the businesses. The husband, however, obstructed the wife's ability to manage the businesses. Even after the District Court issued an order requiring the husband to cooperate with the wife and allow her access to the businesses' records, the husband sold business assets and had vendors pay him individually. Ultimately, the District Court found the husband in contempt and awarded the wife attorney fees. The husband appealed, arguing that the court erred by finding him in contempt and that the judge should have removed himself for bias against the husband. The Supreme Court affirmed, noting that an adverse ruling does not establish bias that would disqualify a judge, and that attorney fees were properly awarded as they were provided for in the property settlement agreement. In re Marriage of Cini, 2011 MT 295, 363 Mont. 1, 266 P.3d 1257.

Nonparty Subpoena Duces Tecum — Refusal to Purge Contempt Order — Arrest Warrant Vacated — Attorney Fees Remanded: The plaintiff in the underlying action served a subpoena duces tecum on a nonparty witness, the Animal Foundation (foundation), seeking documents related to its communications with the defendant. The foundation moved for a protective order and to quash the deposition of one its trustees. After numerous pleadings, the trustee appeared at his deposition with only a small redacted portion of the responsive documents. The District Court found the foundation and the trustee in contempt. However, the court allowed the foundation and the trustee the opportunity to purge the contempt finding by producing the responsive documents with minimal redaction. After they failed to produce the documents, the District Court issued an arrest warrant for the trustee and ordered the foundation, the trustee, and their counsel to pay $90,000 in attorney fees to the plaintiff. The sanctioned parties appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that although there was substantial evidence to support the contempt order, there was not sufficient evidence for the arrest warrant because the trustee attended his deposition. The Supreme Court also vacated the award of attorney fees and remanded the issue to the District Court, finding that the award exceeded the scope of the contempt order. Animal Foundation of Great Falls v. Eighth Judicial District Court, 2011 MT 289, 362 Mont. 485, 265 P.3d 659.

Contempt Appropriate for Failure of Party to Abide by Court-Ordered Stipulation — Penalty Reduced to Statutory Maximum: The District Court held defendant in contempt for failure to abide by a stipulation entered by the court ordering Boles to remove a metal roof from her barn because it violated a subdivision's restrictive covenants. The court further ordered that defendant would be charged $300 for each day past the deadline for removal of the roof. Defendant appealed on grounds that the court did not have jurisdiction because defendant was not a named party or served as an original party and because defendant was coerced into signing the stipulation under the guise of changing the covenants to accommodate the roof. The Supreme Court noted that defendant's motion would have been more appropriately framed as a motion seeking relief from judgment under former Rule 60(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), because the stipulation was a final order and agreed with the District Court's conclusion that there was no reason under former Rule 60(b) to relieve defendant from the final judgment. Even though defendant was not a named party or served as an original party, the District Court did have jurisdiction because defendant had appeared in the case many times without raising the jurisdiction issue at the initial appearance or response, and once defendant recognized the court's jurisdiction, the defense of no personal jurisdiction was waived. Additionally, there was no credible evidence that defendant was coerced into signing the stipulation. Therefore, the contempt conviction was affirmed. However, the Supreme Court did vacate the portion of the order that defendant would be charged $300 for each day past the deadline for removal of the roof because a sanction for contempt that seeks to compel the contemnor to perform an act may not exceed $500, so the sanction was remitted to a maximum of $500. El Dorado Heights Homeowners' Ass'n v. Dewitt, 2008 MT 199, 344 M 77, 186 P3d 1249 (2008).

Fabrication of Child Abuse Allegation to Deny Visitation as Contempt: A District Court's belief that mother fabricated an incident of child sexual abuse in order to deprive father of visitation rights granted pursuant to the dissolution decree, a lawful court order, is a sufficient basis for a contempt ruling necessary to preserve the dignity and authority of the court. The District Court properly considered the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony, which are matters not subject to Supreme Court review. Woolf v. Evans, 264 M 480, 872 P2d 777, 51 St. Rep. 355 (1994).

No Contempt of Court When Judgment Failed to Require or Prohibit Specific Acts — Contempt Order Vacated: Goodover obtained a judgment establishing the proper boundaries of his property near Seeley Lake. Lindey's Inc. then attempted to relitigate those boundaries and appealed. With the appeal pending, a surveyor filed certificates of survey marking the boundaries contrary to the boundaries established in the first judgment. Lindey's was cited for contempt because of this filing. Citing cases from other jurisdictions, the Supreme Court held that there could be no contempt of the first judgment in this instance because that judgment did nothing more than establish the proper boundaries of the property and did not require or prohibit any specific acts by Lindey's. Goodover v. Lindey's Inc., 257 M 38, 847 P2d 699, 50 St. Rep. 150 (1993), followed in Sanders v. St., 1998 MT 62, 288 M 143, 955 P2d 1356, 55 St. Rep. 272 (1998).

No Contempt in Denial of Visitation by Parent — Concern for Child's Health: The trial court properly denied a motion that the mother be held in contempt for denying visitation to the father on several occasions after it found that the mother's denials were based on concerns for the child's health and not a desire to restrict the father's access. In re Marriage of Jacobson, 228 M 458, 743 P2d 1025, 44 St. Rep. 1678 (1987).

Control of Pipeline System Against Court Order as Contempt: Appellant contended that a system of pipelines and culverts installed by agreement to settle a water dispute had engineering and operational shortcomings that became apparent shortly after installation and that his actions in regulating the water supply were efforts to remedy those shortcomings and to protect his property. The trial court, in a judgment nunc pro tunc, had ordered compliance with the agreement, which did not allow appellant any control over the system. Appellant was properly held in contempt for attempting to control the problems without express authority, in violation of the court order. Walker v. Warner, 228 M 162, 740 P2d 1147, 44 St. Rep. 1424 (1987).

Nonpayment of Child Support as Contempt: A noncustodial parent should not be held in contempt for nonpayment of child support when payments are made directly to the custodial parent and when the location of the custodial parent is concealed. However, when nonpayment occurred both before and after the period of concealment, contempt is proper. In re Marriage of Robbins, 219 M 130, 711 P2d 1347, 42 St. Rep. 1897 (1985).

No Finding of Willful Disobedience of Court Order — Contempt Not Found: The trial court adjusted the property settlement and the support and maintenance payment to allow the respondent to pay debts incurred in his name by the petitioner during a spending spree after separation but before the divorce. The case was remanded because the petitioner was penalized twice the amount of the spending spree. On remand, the court equalized the property distribution and adjusted the support and maintenance payments. There was no mention of the spending spree debts in the second decree. The petitioner is now being sued for the spending spree debts and brought this action seeking a contempt citation for respondent's failure to pay the debts. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's holding that the respondent was not in contempt. In re Marriage of Grenfell, 200 M 490, 652 P2d 1170, 39 St. Rep. 1891 (1982).

Personal Liability for Official Action Holding One in Contempt: Action against county officials in their personal capacity, arising out of plaintiffs' being held in contempt of court after refusing to leave court upon order of the Justice of the Peace, was properly dismissed as there was no basis for personal liability because the defendants acted in their official capacities only. Stickney v. St., 195 M 415, 636 P2d 860, 38 St. Rep. 1991 (1981).

Custody Agreement Interpreted as Contract — No Contempt Found Under Joint Custody Agreement: Where the plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement for the joint custody of their three children and the agreement was incorporated into a decree divorcing the parties, the trial court committed reversible error in finding, upon a later petition by the plaintiff for modification of the divorce decree, that the decree granted custody of the children to the defendant and in holding the plaintiff in contempt for her custody of one of the children. Agreements for the dissolution of marriage are to be interpreted by the law of contracts, and the language of the agreement controls if it is clear and unambiguous. The plaintiff committed no contemptuous act by retaining custody of one child under a joint custody agreement. Quinn v. Quinn, 191 M 133, 622 P2d 230, 38 St. Rep. 93 (1981).

Constructive Contempt: The District Court ordered two defendants to be taken to Warm Springs for mental evaluation. The County Attorney and a Deputy Sheriff were present when the order was made. The County Attorney, who was not acting under a court order, sent the defendants to Malta where other charges were pending. The County Attorney and the Deputy Sheriff were found in contempt of court. The contempt was committed outside the presence of the court and consisted of violating the order to take the defendants to Warm Springs. In constructive contempt, the essence of whether the court's order has been abused is whether the party accused had knowledge of the order. The record in this case supported the contempt holding, as both parties were present when the order was given. In re the Contempt of Graveley and Hammerbacker, 188 M 546, 614 P2d 1033, 37 St. Rep. 1261 (1980), followed in Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989).

Contempt — Valid Underlying Order Required: A party cannot be held in contempt for violating an invalid court order, and in order for a collateral attack of a contempt citation to be allowed, it must appear from the record that the underlying order is void. Here, where plaintiff had failed to comply with the statutory requirements to create liens of execution and attachment, a contempt citation based on violation of the Writs of Attachment and Execution was also invalid. Phillips v. Loberg, 186 M 331, 607 P2d 561, 37 St. Rep. 401 (1980).

Disobeying Order Forbidding Public Comment on Prosecutions: The Attorney General was found guilty of contempt under this subsection for a willful, knowing, and deliberate violation of a court order commanding him to cease and desist from all public out-of-court statements that might influence public opinion on pending criminal prosecutions. State ex rel. Angel v. Woodahl, 171 M 13, 555 P2d 501 (1976).

Disobedience of Court Order:

Where the Supreme Court granted an injunction forever restraining and enjoining the State Board of Equalization (now the State Tax Appeal Board) from levying or collecting certain taxes upon oil and gas produced under a lease of Indian land, but the Board believed that a later decision of the Supreme Court of the United States superseded and overruled the former decision and took steps to collect the taxes, the oil company should have proceeded for a finding of contempt under this section instead of instituting a proceeding for a new injunction. Santa Rita Oil & Gas Co. v. St. Bd. of Equalization, 112 M 224, 114 P2d 521 (1941).

Where an injunction pendente lite was granted without notice or hearing, to the extent that it attempted to restrain beyond a reasonable time, it was void for want of jurisdiction. State ex rel. Cook v. District Court, 105 M 72, 69 P2d 746 (1937), distinguished in State ex rel. McKenzie v. District Court, 111 M 241, 107 P2d 885 (1940).

Where a Writ of Mandate directed a Sheriff to levy upon and sell property on execution, an affidavit presented to the court charging contempt in that the officer had failed and refused to comply with the order was insufficient to meet the requirement that facts constituting the contempt must be alleged. State ex rel. Duggan v. District Court, 65 M 197, 210 P 1062 (1922).

For disobedience of a void order of court, a party cannot be adjudged guilty of contempt. State ex rel. O'Grady v. District Court, 61 M 346, 202 P 575 (1921).

Where a decree determining the relative rights of water users declared that the relator was not entitled to use water, use of a portion of the water constituted, prima facie, a violation of the decree and a contempt of the court. State ex rel. Zosel v. District Court, 56 M 578, 185 P 1112 (1919).

Where one pays out money in good faith to meet the just obligations of creditors and thereby incapacitates himself to obey an order of court, his failure to obey the order is not contempt. State ex rel. McLean v. District Court, 37 M 485, 97 P 841 (1908). See also Nixon v. Nixon, 15 M 6, 37 P 839 (1894), explained in State ex rel. Floch v. District Court, 107 M 185, 81 P2d 692 (1938).

One guilty of a contempt of court by a willful disobedience of an injunction order lawfully issued may be punished under the summary procedure provided for or he may be dealt with under the penal code (now Title 45, MCA). State ex rel. Flynn v. District Court, 24 M 33, 60 P 493 (1900).

Vacation Powers of Judge: Where an order made at a term of court has been disobeyed, the Judge at chambers in vacation has power to punish the same as a contempt. State ex rel. N. Pac. Ry. v. Loud, 24 M 428, 62 P 497 (1900).

INTERFERENCE WITH PROCESS

Failure to Comply With Dissolution Decree — Incarceration for Direct Contempt Proper: As part of the dissolution decree, the wife was ordered to return a quarterhorse and horse trailer to the husband. However, she sold both horse and trailer and used the proceeds for her own purposes, then failed to inform the husband, counsel, the District Court, or the Supreme Court that she had done so, all the while assuring or leading the respective tribunals to believe that the property would not be sold. The wife's conduct clearly fell within the elements of this section regarding deceit or abuse of the process, and the District Court was within its jurisdiction in charging the wife with contempt and sentencing her to 24 hours in the county jail. Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000). See also In re Marriage of Ensign, 227 M 357, 739 P2d 479, 44 St. Rep. 1146 (1987).

Interruption of Closed Judicial Hearing — Reporter Liable for Contempt: When a probation revocation hearing was properly closed, a reporter who reentered the courtroom after being ordered by the judge to leave was guilty of contempt and subject to fine. State ex rel. Great Falls Tribune Co., Inc. v. District Court, 238 M 310, 777 P2d 345, 46 St. Rep. 1292 (1989).

Delivery of Funds Not Deposited in Accordance With Court Order — No Interference With Process or Proceedings: Where the partner (Chilcote) of a contractor (defendant), against whose property the plaintiffs had obtained liens in satisfaction of a judgment requiring the defendant to complete construction of the plaintiffs' property, voluntarily provided the defendant with funds resulting indirectly from the sale of defendant's property after release of the liens and directed the defendant to take the funds to his lawyer in satisfaction of a trust established by court order for the benefit of the plaintiffs and the completion of their construction, the District Court erred in holding Chilcote in contempt of court for paying the funds directly to the defendant rather than to the defendant's lawyer. Although Chilcote knew of the establishment of the trust for the benefit of the plaintiffs' materialmen, he was under no court order to pay the funds to the defendant's lawyer and, upon payment to the defendant, did instruct him to take the money to his lawyer, and instead the defendant left the country. Chilcote therefore was under no order or process of the court and could not even be said to have frustrated any order or process of the court. Walters v. Campeau, 205 M 448, 668 P2d 1054, 40 St. Rep. 1419 (1983). See also Carl v. Chilcote, 255 M 526, 844 P2d 79, 49 St. Rep. 1109 (1992), in which summary judgment for Chilcote was properly granted as a matter of law because he was not named in either of the District Court's earlier orders, nor did the orders require or prohibit any conduct by him.

Corruption of Records:

The offer by defense counsel in a criminal case of a typewritten copy of a false statement did not constitute a contempt or an attempt to falsify court records. State ex rel. Hurley v. District Court, 76 M 222, 246 P 250 (1926).

Any act done for the purpose of corrupting the records of a court of justice, whether successful or not, constitutes an unlawful interference with the proceedings of the court, and when an attorney is the author of the act, he violates the duty enjoined by his position. State ex rel. Coleman v. District Court, 51 M 195, 149 P 973 (1915).

Repetitious Motions: Since a point once saved by exception is saved for all purposes of the case unless thereafter waived, an attorney who persisted in making the motion against the admonition of the court was properly adjudged guilty of contempt. State ex rel. Hurley v. District Court, 76 M 222, 246 P 250 (1926).

Suppression of Evidence: The action of a party in secreting and forcibly keeping in hiding a witness of his adversary until the trial was concluded constituted a contempt of court. Buntin v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 54 M 495, 172 P 330 (1918), distinguished in Bell v. Bell, 133 M 572, 328 P2d 115 (1958).

Withholding of Papers: Where a party litigant serves upon his adversary the original draft of his proposed bill of exceptions instead of a copy thereof, and if by withholding it the settlement of the bill is prevented, such act constitutes an unlawful interference with the trial proceedings and a contempt of court. State ex rel. Thelen v. District Court, 51 M 337, 152 P 475 (1915).

Corruption of Jury: An attempt to corruptly influence a member of a jury panel is punishable as a contempt, irrespective of whether such juror has been actually sworn to try a cause or not. State ex rel. Webb v. District Court, 37 M 191, 95 P 593 (1908).

Resistance to Officer: Resistance of or interference with an officer while endeavoring to take property into his possession is an interference with the proceedings of the court and constitutes a contempt. State ex rel. Bruce v. District Court, 33 M 359, 83 P 641 (1906).

DISORDERLY OR INSOLENT BEHAVIOR

"Disorderly, Contemptuous, or Insolent Behavior Toward the Judge": A lawyer's defiance of a judge's repeated order to sit down while another lawyer was speaking constitutes contempt within the meaning of this section in that the lawyer exhibited "disorderly, contemptuous, or insolent behavior toward the judge while holding the court tending to interrupt the due course of a trial or other judicial proceeding". State ex rel. Smith v. District Court, 210 M 344, 677 P2d 589, 41 St. Rep. 385 (1984), overruling In re Mettler, 50 M 299, 146 P 747 (1915), to the extent Mettler is inconsistent.

SCANDALOUS, UNTRUTHFUL, OR CRITICAL STATEMENTS

False Accusations of Abuse in Child Custody Case — Contempt Charge Proper: The trial court ordered supervised visitation in issuing its decision for joint custody. The mother decided that visitation would endanger the child's health and, without any limiting or restrictive authority, consistently frustrated father's visitation. She also levied false accusations of sexual and physical abuse against father without reasonable justification in a calculated attempt to deprive him of contact with his child and to gain advantage in the dissolution proceedings. Under these circumstances, the trial court properly found mother in contempt. In re Marriage of Dreesbach, 265 M 216, 875 P2d 1018, 51 St. Rep. 374 (1994).

Criticism of Decisions:

Bank president's statement that he was displeased with jury verdict against bank and that jurors could not expect to do business with bank did not constitute contempt, since statement could not have interfered with court proceedings. State ex rel. Polish v. District Court, 156 M 220, 478 P2d 270 (1970).

Criticism of a court's rulings or decisions is not improper and may not be restricted after the cause in which made has been finally disposed of and has ceased to be pending. State ex rel. Moser v. District Court, 116 M 305, 151 P2d 1002 (1944).

Scandalous Publications:

Where contempt was based on scandalous and defamatory allegations concerning the grand jury in pleading, which allegations were immaterial and irrelevant, the truth or falsity of the allegations is immaterial. State ex rel. Porter v. First Judicial District, 123 M 447, 215 P2d 279 (1950).

Neither libel nor slander constitutes contempt unless the attack on the character or the acts of the Judge interferes with the administration of justice by the Judge attacked. State ex rel. Moser v. District Court, 116 M 305, 151 P2d 1002 (1944).

Unauthorized Practice of Law: Where a person without a license to practice law employs all the customary methods to advertise himself as an attorney and counselor-at-law, he is guilty of contempt. In re Bailey, 50 M 365, 146 P 1101 (1915).

3-1-502. Order refused — subsequent applications prohibited.

Case Notes

Amended Complaint and Separate Proceeding Not Serial Litigation: The District Court erred in granting the defendant's motion to dismiss the plaintiff's amended complaint when it found that the action constituted improper serial litigation pursuant to this section. The plaintiff did not attempt to obtain different results by seeking the same order from another judge. Instead, the plaintiff filed a motion to amend and commenced a separate proceeding through the filing of a new complaint. This section only forbids a subsequent application for the same order to any other judge. McAtee v. Whitefish Credit Union, 2017 MT 268, 389 Mont. 218, 405 P.3d 70, distinguishing In re Stewart, 163 Mont. 432, 517 P.2d 879 (1974). See also Marvel Brute Steel Bldg., Inc. v. Motion Refiled After Suit Transferred to Another County: The suit was originally brought in Roosevelt County. The case was then transferred to Missoula County. A memorandum from the Roosevelt County Judge, which accompanied the transfer, stated that the matters which have been briefed, considered by the court, and ruled upon are the rule and law of the case and that the District Court in Missoula County is bound by the ruling of the transferring court. Disregarding the Judge's opinion, the defendant refiled in the Missoula County District Court motions that had been previously ruled upon in Roosevelt County. Such refiling constitutes a contempt. Hayes v. Aetna Fire Underwriters, 187 M 148, 609 P2d 257, 37 St. Rep. 485 (1980).

Disqualification of Judge: Motion for disqualification of Judge was a flagrant abuse of this section where affidavit was filed 3 weeks subsequent to denial of petition for restoration to capacity and petition for restoration was again filed and oral argument heard on same evidence. Application of Stewart, 163 M 432, 517 P2d 879 (1974).

Pending Motions and Proceedings: This section cannot have application to any motion or proceeding pending for hearing. State ex rel. Working v. District Court, 50 M 435, 147 P 614 (1915).

Restoration of Incompetent: Where a petition for the restoration of an incompetent person to capacity has been denied by one department of the District Court, this section forbids an application to another department of the same court for the release of the incompetent on habeas corpus proceedings. State ex rel. Carroll v. District Court, 50 M 428, 147 P 612 (1915). See Lutey Bros. v. Jackson, 55 M 556, 179 P 459 (1919).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 496 in first sentence inserted "and the contemptuous conduct requires immediate action in order to restore order, maintain the dignity or authority of the court, or prevent delay" and inserted third and fourth sentences requiring the person to be informed of the contempt and given an opportunity to defend before an order may be issued and providing for a fine, imprisonment, or both, and for reasonable conditions or restrictions on the person; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Case Notes

Attorney Found in Contempt and Sanctioned for Failing to Appear at Hearing — Sanctions Proper: The petitioner was found in direct contempt and sanctioned by the District Court for failing to appear for a termination hearing and was ordered to pay the costs of rescheduling the hearing. The petitioner appealed the sanctions to the Supreme Court, which affirmed, holding that the petitioner's actions had unreasonably multiplied the proceeding because the hearing had to be continued. Cross Guns v. 8th Judicial District Court, 2017 MT 144, 387 Mont. 525, 396 P.3d 133.

Jury Trial Not Required in Civil Contempt Case: O'Neil was enjoined from and held in civil contempt for the unauthorized practice of law. O'Neil appealed on grounds that due process required that he be granted a jury trial on the charges. The Supreme Court disagreed, noting that under federal law, there might be a right to a jury trial in criminal contempt cases that impose serious contempt penalties, but that there is no general federal constitutional right to a jury trial for criminal contempt in federal or state courts. However, O'Neil was charged with civil contempt, not criminal contempt, and the penalty under this section does not provide sanctions that rise to the level of a serious penalty. O'Neil was afforded adequate due process under 3-1-518, including a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel, to prepare a defense or explanation prior to hearing, to testify in his own behalf, and to call witnesses at the hearing. O'Neil was not entitled to a higher standard of due process that might require a jury trial, and the District Court did not err in holding that a jury trial was not required. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006), following Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715 (1998).

Improper Filing of Pro Se Motion Considered Direct Contempt — Community Service Penalty Affirmed: Christian's attorney notified him of the intent to withdraw as counsel of record, and Christian subsequently filed a motion to set trial in District Court, with the attorney's name as counsel and signing the motion himself. The court held Christian in contempt for signing the motion pro se in violation of former Rule 11, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and sentenced Christian to 1,000 hours of community service. Christian petitioned the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari, contesting the contempt order and the sentence. The Supreme Court noted that its review was limited to questions regarding jurisdiction and whether there was sufficient evidence to support the contempt finding. Christian argued that his conduct was at most an indirect contempt and that, as such, procedural due process was violated because there was no charging document filed against him. The Supreme Court disagreed. The offending document was within the immediate view and presence of the District Court and thus constituted direct contempt. The document was contemptuous on its face because Christian was acting as counsel without authority. The sentence was also affirmed. The District Court had considered requiring pro bono service and also noted that jail time was possible, but concluded that extensive community service was the appropriate penalty to dissuade Christian from similar future behavior. Christian's writ of certiorari was denied. Christian v. District Court, 2004 MT 1, 319 M 162, 83 P3d 811 (2004).

Standard for Review of Family Law Contempt Orders — Jurisdiction and Evidence — Family Law Exception Clarified: The standard for review of contempt orders, pursuant to the granting of a writ of certiorari, is, first, to determine whether the court that found contempt acted within its jurisdiction. For a court to have acted within its jurisdiction: (1) it must have cognizance of the subject matter; (2) it must have presence of the proper parties; and (3) its action must be invoked by proper pleadings and the judgment must be within the issues raised. A court lacks or exceeds jurisdiction by any act that exceeds the defined power of the court, whether that power is defined by constitutional provision, statute, or court rule or under the doctrine of stare decisis. The second part of the standard for review of contempt orders is to determine whether substantial evidence exists to support the court's findings. The family law exception relevant to review on direct appeal of a District Court judgment and orders made in cases of contempt is subject to the same standard of review. (See 2001 amendment to 3-1-523.) Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000), following State ex rel. Porter v. When Summary Contempt Proceedings Appropriate — Entitlement to Due Process When Instant Action Not Necessary: Regardless of the type of contempt committed, direct or indirect, a court's primary consideration before subjecting a contemnor to summary contempt proceedings must be whether immediate corrective steps are necessary to restore order, maintain dignity and authority of the court, and prevent delay. However, in cases when it is not necessary for a court to take instant action, a contemnor is entitled to a full due process hearing traditionally associated with indirect contempt, a finding that the evidence establishes the contemnor's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt in instances when criminal punishment is a consequence, and a hearing in front of an unbiased court other than the court in which the misconduct occurred. In the present case, an attorney's conduct did not necessitate immediate District Court action, so the Supreme Court remanded the case for a hearing in front of a different judge to ensure the attorney's due process rights. (See 2001 amendment.) Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715, 55 St. Rep. 1001 (1998), followed in Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000).

Application of Both Sanctions Under This Part for Same Contempt Prohibited: The sanctions in 3-1-519 (now repealed) and 3-1-520 may not both be imposed for the same contempt. Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Distinguishing Between Civil and Criminal Contempt: Contempts are neither wholly civil nor wholly criminal, but classification of a contempt as one or the other is crucial, particularly when the person is sentenced to confinement, because the classification determines the procedures that the court must follow. There is nothing inherent in a contemptuous act or refusal to act that classifies it as civil or criminal. Rather, it is the character and purpose of the punishment that the court chooses to impose that serves to distinguish between civil and criminal contempt. If the sanction is intended to force compliance with the court's order, the contempt is properly classified as civil. If the purpose is to punish the contemnor for a specific act and to vindicate the authority of the court, the contempt is criminal. Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Necessity of Criminal Charge and Due Process in Contempt Proceeding Resulting in Criminal Penalty: The District Court stated that the purpose of its sentence for contempt for practicing law without a license was to compel performance and that the court was thus acting under 3-1-520, which allows incarceration until performance occurs. However, in reality, the sentence, 30 days in jail, to be suspended upon paying a $500 fine within 10 days, was punishment for past acts. Therefore, the contempt proceeding was properly characterized as criminal rather than civil because a contempt is classified as criminal if the purpose of the sanction imposed is punishment and civil if the purpose of the sanction imposed is to compel compliance with a court order. A criminal contempt proceeding must be under the procedures in Title 46 to ensure that criminal penalties are not imposed without affording the proper protections. The lower court erred by imposing a criminal sentence when no criminal charges were brought under 45-7-309, creating the crime of criminal contempt, and defendant was not afforded the due process that is guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions. (See 2001 amendment to 3-1-501, 3-1-511, and 3-1-518.) Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Right of Allocution in Summary Contempt Proceedings: Following the rationale in State ex rel. Smith v. District Court, 210 M 344, 677 P2d 589 (1984), the Supreme Court held that in cases of direct contempt, the right to be heard, or right of allocution, should be afforded the accused contemnor in a summary contempt proceeding. The right of allocution is particularly strong when contempt is contained in a brief and the contemnor has no notice that the court considers the brief to be contemptuous prior to receiving the court's written order. Before being sentenced, the contemnor should be afforded the opportunity to explain or excuse the written filing. A trial is not required, but the contemnor should be allowed a reasonable opportunity to defend or explain the actions or present arguments in mitigation. Failure to provide for allocution constituted grounds for vacation of sentence and remand for the opportunity for allocution. (See 2001 amendment.) Malee v. District Court, 275 M 72, 911 P2d 831, 53 St. Rep. 44 (1996), following Groppi v. Leslie, 404 US 496, 30 L Ed 2d 632, 92 S Ct 582 (1971), and U.S. v. Lumumba, 741 F2d 12 (2nd Cir. 1984), and followed in Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715, 55 St. Rep. 1001 (1998).

Contempt Punishment Imposing Counseling Costs Affirmed: After finding mother in contempt for consistently frustrating father's visitation and for levying false accusations of sexual and physical abuse against father without reasonable justification, the District Court required her to seek ongoing professional counseling and to bear the costs of that counseling. Mother contended that requiring her to pay counseling costs amounted to an open-ended blank check in contravention of the statutory limitation of $500 on financial punishment for contempt. However, a District Court has equitable powers to punish a party for contempt beyond the confines of 3-1-519 (now repealed). The District Court was warranted in ordering the 2-year therapy requirement because: (1) the evidence supported the finding of contempt; (2) the court acted within its jurisdiction and equitable powers when imposing the punishment; and (3) contempt penalties imposed by the court had largely been previously imposed through separate findings. In re Marriage of Dreesbach, 265 M 216, 875 P2d 1018, 51 St. Rep. 374 (1994).

Nature of Contempt in Criminal Proceedings: Defendant asserted "unlawful predicate for contempt without jury". The court responded that contempt may be punished summarily and that contempt orders are not appealable. St. v. Campbell, 219 M 194, 711 P2d 1357, 42 St. Rep. 1948 (1985).

Contempt Order — Costs Award Proper — Attorney Fees Award Improper: In reviewing a contempt order that arose out of a water rights dispute, the Supreme Court ruled that an award of costs to the irrigation district as the prevailing party was proper, but that an award of attorney fees to the district was not proper. The court reasoned that no applicable statute or contractual provision provided for attorney fees and that the case did not fit within the exceptions recognized in Foy v. Anderson, 176 M 507, 580 P2d 114, 35 St. Rep. 811 (1978). State ex rel. Foss v. District Court, 216 M 327, 701 P2d 342, 42 St. Rep. 845 (1985).

Contemnor to Be Given Opportunity to Explain Conduct: In addition to this section's requirement of an order setting forth the facts of the contempt, the contemnor must be granted an opportunity to explain or excuse himself. However, the opportunity to be heard need not arise in a formal hearing, separate and distinct from the proceeding in which the contempt arose. (See 2001 amendment.) State ex rel. Smith v. District Court, 210 M 344, 677 P2d 589, 41 St. Rep. 385 (1984).

Compensatory Damages Not Authorized: Compensatory damages are not expressly authorized by law under contempt actions. Section 3-1-519 (now repealed) provides the exclusive monetary punishment a court may impose for contempt. Lilienthal v. District Court, 200 M 236, 650 P2d 779, 39 St. Rep. 1711 (1982).

Compensation Not Allowed for Unnecessary or Useless Services — Judge's Discretion: Judge did not abuse discretion in disallowing attorney's claim for services rendered for indigent defendant for time spent asking educational questions on voir dire over repeated protest from the court. Judge has discretion to disallow compensation for substantial time consumed in improper, unnecessary, or useless services. It was, however, an abuse of discretion to reduce compensation for other attorney's wasted time. State ex rel. Stephens v. District Court, 170 M 22, 550 P2d 385 (1976).

Excessive Penalty:

District Court's sentence of 10 days' imprisonment for contempt exceeded jurisdiction of such court (at the time, 5 days was the maximum allowable prison term). Fuchs v. District Court, 153 M 485, 458 P2d 776 (1969).

A judgment pronounced from the bench and imposing an excessive term of imprisonment was harmless error when corrected within the period of a stay of execution granted contemporaneously. Niewoehner v. District Court, 142 M 1, 381 P2d 464 (1963).

Under 3-1-519 (now repealed), one found guilty of contempt of court may be fined and ordered imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding 5 days, a longer term not being permissible except where it is sought to compel payment of the fine or the performance of a required act still in his power.

Imprisonment to Enforce Fine:

The payment of a fine imposed upon one adjudged guilty of contempt may be enforced by imprisonment, and imprisonment in excess of 5 days (under 3-1-519, now repealed) is permissible to compel such payment. State ex rel. Lay v. District Court, 122 M 61, 198 P2d 761 (1948).

Judgment of the District Court in a contempt proceeding arising out of the failure of defendant husband to pay alimony was proper. State ex rel. Murphy v. District Court, 99 M 209, 41 P2d 1113 (1935).

An attorney found guilty of contempt was properly subject to punishment by fine and imprisonment in the county jail until the fine was paid. State ex rel. Coleman v. District Court, 51 M 195, 149 P 973 (1915).

Purge Order: A purge order contained in a judgment for contempt is not coercive and beyond the jurisdiction of the court, since it is for the defendant's benefit. State ex rel. Lay v. District Court, 122 M 61, 198 P2d 761 (1948).

Privileges Denied for Contempt:

While the general rule is that a litigant in contempt of court will be denied any favors or privileges which the court may extend to litigants, it is limited in its application to the proceedings in the cause in which the contempt occurred. Davenport v. Davenport, 69 M 405, 222 P 422 (1924).

On the hearing of an order to show cause why an injunction should not issue, it was error to reject defendant's evidence and issue the injunction because defendant was in contempt for violating a restraining order. Such action on the part of the court was a denial of due process of law. Harley v. Mont. Ore Purchasing Co., 27 M 388, 71 P 407 (1903). See also King Tonopah Min. Co. v. Lynch, 232 F 485 (D.C. Nev. 1916).

Expenses of Proceedings: In the absence of statute on the subject, attorney's fees and other expenses incurred by the owner of a water right in instituting and prosecuting to a successful determination a contempt proceeding for the violation of a decree of court settling his rights are not recoverable as items in an action against the contemner. Dunlavey v. Doggett, 38 M 204, 99 P 436 (1909), distinguished in Smith v. Fergus County, 98 M 377, 39 P2d 193 (1934).

Indemnity for Private Wrong: Contempt proceedings do not furnish a remedy available to the plaintiff for the redress or prevention of a private wrong. Dunlavey v. Doggett, 38 M 204, 99 P 436 (1909).

Improper Penalty: An injunction to restrain a party from working in a mine, imposed as a punishment for an alleged contempt, is void because it attempts to denounce a penalty for a contempt not warranted by 3-1-519 (now repealed). In re Sutton, 26 M 557, 71 P 1131 (1902).

3-1-512. Procedure — contempt not in presence of the court.

Case Notes

Improper Filing of Pro Se Motion Considered Direct Contempt — Community Service Penalty Affirmed: Christian's attorney notified him of the intent to withdraw as counsel of record, and Christian subsequently filed a motion to set trial in District Court, with the attorney's name as counsel and signing the motion himself. The court held Christian in contempt for signing the motion pro se in violation of former Rule 11, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and sentenced Christian to 1,000 hours of community service. Christian petitioned the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari, contesting the contempt order and the sentence. The Supreme Court noted that its review was limited to questions regarding jurisdiction and whether there was sufficient evidence to support the contempt finding. Christian argued that his conduct was at most an indirect contempt and that, as such, procedural due process was violated because there was no charging document filed against him. The Supreme Court disagreed. The offending document was within the immediate view and presence of the District Court and thus constituted direct contempt. The document was contemptuous on its face because Christian was acting as counsel without authority. The sentence was also affirmed. The District Court had considered requiring pro bono service and also noted that jail time was possible, but concluded that extensive community service was the appropriate penalty to dissuade Christian from similar future behavior. Christian's writ of certiorari was denied. Christian v. District Court, 2004 MT 1, 319 M 162, 83 P3d 811 (2004).

Contemptuous Pleading or Brief Presented to Unseated Court — Direct Contempt: Malee submitted a brief to the District Court, while the court was not sitting, containing a contemptuous comment about opposing counsel. No accusatory affidavit was filed, nor was a hearing held on the matter. In deciding whether the comment constituted indirect or direct contempt, the Supreme Court held that because the contemptuous pleadings and briefs were in the immediate view and presence of the court or judge at chambers, they were considered direct contempt. The District Court had no need of testimony from third parties, an affidavit of facts, a confession from the contemnor, or other extrinsic evidence to gain knowledge of the offense. A judge's sanctioning authority is not limited to what is seen or heard in person. Contemptuous tactics and arguments can be as easily made on paper as in open court. Malee v. District Court, 275 M 72, 911 P2d 831, 53 St. Rep. 44 (1996), following Brownell v. McCormick, 7 M 12, 14 P 651 (1887), and Kunik v. Racine County, Wis., 946 F2d 1574 (7th Cir. 1991), and overruling contrary holdings in State ex rel. Stagg v. District Court, 76 M 495, 248 P 213 (1926), Porter v. District Court, 123 M 447, 215 P2d 279 (1950), and State ex rel. Kidder v. District Court, 155 M 442, 472 P2d 1008 (1970).

Nine Days Sufficient to Obtain Counsel in Contempt Proceeding: Unless an act constituting contempt occurs in open court, due process requires that the person charged have the right to be represented by counsel. The right to counsel, however, has generally been held to mean that one charged is entitled to a reasonable opportunity to employ counsel. In this case, a period of 9 days was held to be an adequate opportunity to employ counsel. Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989). See Lilienthal v. District Court, 200 M 236, 650 P2d 779 (1982), where a 1-day period was held to provide an inadequate opportunity to employ counsel, and In re Marriage of Prescott, 259 M 293, 856 P2d 229, 50 St. Rep. 801 (1993), in which a 7-day period was held sufficient to provide an adequate opportunity to provide counsel.

Contempt — Affidavit to State Facts: Plaintiff was found guilty of contempt for refusing to allow the wife her court-ordered visitation for Christmas of 1979 and the summer of 1981. The husband contended on appeal that it was error to hold him in contempt for the 1979 violation because it was not mentioned in the affidavit she presented to the court. The Supreme Court agreed, holding that where the affidavit does not include facts constituting contempt, a court is without jurisdiction to address that incident. The 1981 violation was addressed in the affidavit, however, and the District Court found the wife's testimony to be the most credible. By disobeying a lawful order of the court regarding visitation, the husband committed an act of contempt and could be punished therefor. In re Marriage of Milanovich, 201 M 332, 655 P2d 963, 39 St. Rep. 2146 (1982).

Lack of Sufficient Notice — Opportunity to Obtain Counsel Denied: In an action for contempt (not occurring in open court), notice was received on Thursday to defend the action on the following Monday. The District Court was informed that the person charged with the contempt was unable to be represented because he was unable to reach his attorney on such short notice. The court erred in proceeding with the hearing because the notice did not comport with due process requirements affording a person charged with contempt reasonable opportunity to secure counsel and to defend himself. Lilienthal v. District Court, 200 M 236, 650 P2d 779, 39 St. Rep. 1711 (1982).

Constructive Contempt: The District Court ordered two defendants to be taken to Warm Springs for mental evaluation. The County Attorney and a Deputy Sheriff were present when the order was made. The County Attorney, who was not acting under a court order, sent the defendants to Malta where other charges were pending. The County Attorney and the Deputy Sheriff were found in contempt of court. The contempt was committed outside the presence of the court and consisted of violating the order to take the defendants to Warm Springs. In constructive contempt, the essence of whether the court's order has been abused is whether the party accused had knowledge of the order. The record in this case supported the contempt holding, as both parties were present when the order was given. In re the Contempt of Graveley and Hammerbacker, 188 M 546, 614 P2d 1033, 37 St. Rep. 1261 (1980), followed in Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989).

Recital of Facts in Order: Order of contempt that failed to specify facts that constituted contempt before the court was deficient under this section, since it did not provide opportunity for appellate review. State ex rel. Shea v. District Court, 156 M 266, 479 P2d 281 (1971).

Affidavit Required:

The filing of a complaint in a civil action containing immaterial and irrelevant allegations of scandalous and defamatory matter concerning the lives and characters of the members of the grand jury constituted indirect contempt. State ex rel. Porter v. First Judicial District, 123 M 447, 215 P2d 279 (1950).

In the case of an "indirect" contempt—one committed without the immediate view and presence of the court—the court or judge acquires jurisdiction only by the filing of an affidavit or statement of the facts. State ex rel. Stagg v. District Court, 76 M 495, 248 P 213 (1926).

In all contempt proceedings not committed in the court's immediate presence, an affidavit is essential. State ex rel. Gemmell v. Clancy, 24 M 359, 61 P 987 (1900).

Sufficiency of Affidavit:

County Attorney's accusatory affidavit was not insufficient because made on information and belief. State ex rel. Porter v. First Judicial District, 123 M 447, 215 P2d 279 (1950).

Affidavit charging contempt was not insufficient by reason of the fact that some of its averments were made on information and belief or some of the violations trivial. State ex rel. Young v. District Court, 102 M 487, 58 P2d 1243 (1936).

A proceeding in contempt must be instituted by affidavit which must state facts sufficient to disclose that a contempt has been committed, no intendments or presumptions in favor of its averments being permissible. State ex rel. Bacorn v. District Court, 73 M 297, 236 P 553 (1925).

A general statement substantial enough to justify a conclusive inference of knowledge and intent in the contemner at the time it was alleged he willfully attempted to influence jurors was sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the District Court. State ex rel. Webb v. District Court, 37 M 191, 95 P 593 (1908).

Review of Proceedings:

If in adjudging one guilty of contempt the court acts without jurisdiction, the proceedings may be reviewed on certiorari; and in cases where the court acts within jurisdiction but in a manner so arbitrary and unlawful as to be tyrannical, the Supreme Court may intervene by virtue of its constitutional power of supervisory control over inferior courts. State ex rel. Young v. District Court, 102 M 487, 58 P2d 1243 (1936).

On certiorari to review an order of the District Court adjudging one guilty of a direct contempt, the Supreme Court may not look beyond the order adjudging the contemner guilty, which constitutes the record of the case, to determine from the facts whether the judgment was proper. State ex rel. Breen v. District Court, 34 M 107, 85 P 870 (1906).

Discretion of Court: The power of the District Court to punish as contempt disobedience of a lawful order or judgment is not arbitrary; it must be exercised only when the necessity arises and then with intelligent discretion. State ex rel. Middleton v. District Court, 85 M 215, 278 P 122 (1929).

Findings of Fact: While in a proceeding for constructive contempt the affidavit, the process, the answer of the contemner, and the evidence, together with the judgment, constitute the record, the court should make findings of fact in its order of commitment showing as a matter of law that the accused is in fact guilty of contempt. State ex rel. Burns v. District Court, 83 M 200, 271 P 439 (1928).

Recital of Facts in Order:

Where the trial court having had under consideration the question of a direct contempt recites the facts as occurring in its immediate view or presence, the reviewing court cannot look to the counterstatement of the person found guilty but must rely upon the recitation of the court. State ex rel. Hurley v. District Court, 76 M 222, 246 P 250 (1926).

The participial expression "as occurring" is equivalent to "which occurred" and does not merely relate to time and place. State ex rel. Rankin v. District Court, 58 M 276, 191 P 772 (1920).

An order declaring a person guilty of a direct contempt must recite the facts upon which the conclusion that the contemner is guilty is based. State ex rel. Breen v. District Court, 34 M 107, 85 P 870 (1906), distinguished in State ex rel. Cheadle v. District Court, 92 M 94, 10 P2d 586 (1932).

Hearing Required:

A direct contempt may be punished summarily, but a constructive contempt can be punished only after a hearing upon an affidavit showing the facts constituting the contempt and the answer thereto. In re Mettler, 50 M 299, 146 P 747 (1915), distinguished in State ex rel. Cheadle v. District Court, 92 M 94, 10 P2d 586 (1932).

It was improper to refuse to allow relator to move to dissolve a temporary injunction or to be heard in opposition to the motion to continue it on the ground that he was in contempt for violating the injunction when no contempt proceedings had been instituted. State ex rel. Gemmell v. Clancy, 24 M 359, 61 P 987 (1900). See also Harley v. Mont. Ore Purchasing Co., 27 M 388, 71 P 407 (1903).

Notice of Proceedings: In cases where the alleged contempt consists in the violation by a party of an order made in a civil suit still pending, such party is entitled to a separate and distinct notice of the contempt proceedings in order that he may be afforded an opportunity to prepare his defense. State ex rel. Gemmell v. Clancy, 24 M 359, 61 P 987 (1900).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 496 in first sentence after "warrant" deleted "of attachment", after "charged to" inserted "the court to", and at end substituted "the charge" for "or, without a previous arrest, a warrant of commitment may, upon notice or upon an order to show cause, be granted. No warrant of commitment can be issued without such previous attachment to answer or notice or order to show cause" and inserted second and third sentences requiring an adequate statement of the charge to accompany the warrant and providing for a hearing under 3-1-518. Conflicting Evidence Whether Indemnity Note on Bail Bond Considered Valid Contract — District Court's Finding Not Clearly Erroneous: Rohrich signed an indemnity agreement with Anderson, who owned a bail bond business, to secure a bond posted for the release of Brummer. When signing the indemnity note, Rohrich did not question Anderson about the note and signed it without discussion regarding the effect of his signature. The note provided that should Anderson become liable for the forfeiture of the bail bond, the indemnitor would indemnify Anderson, with interest, and also pay reasonable attorney fees in the event that a suit was necessary to collect the amount owed. Brummer subsequently fled the state, and the County Attorney moved for bail forfeiture. The District Court ordered that judgment in the full amount of bail be entered against Brummer and against Anderson as the surety. After Anderson satisfied the judgment, he waited to see if Rohrich would indemnify him, but Rohrich did not do so; therefore, Anderson brought an action to enforce the indemnity note. At trial, Rohrich maintained that the note was blank when he signed it and that therefore he did not sign a valid contract. Rohrich also contended that the date on the note, which was 1 year after Brummer was released from prison, was further evidence that Anderson did not complete the terms of the note prior to Rohrich's signature. Anderson testified that the note did contain all essential terms when Rohrich signed it, and that testimony was affirmed by Anderson's assistant. Anderson also testified that the date was a typographical error and that as a matter of business practice, he would not provide an indemnitor with a blank note. Further, Rohrich was familiar with indemnity notes, having signed notes on three prior occasions with Anderson, including two that he signed for himself. After weighing the conflicting evidence, the District Court ordered Rohrich to pay the full amount, plus attorney fees, interest, and costs. Rohrich appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed, paying substantial deference to the trial court because as the factfinder, the trial court was in the best position to evaluate the testimony and judge the credibility of the witnesses. Anderson v. Rohrich, 2001 MT 106, 305 M 274, 26 P3d 99 (2001).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 496 in (1) in first sentence inserted "for a contempt not committed in the immediate view and presence of the court or judge at chambers" and substituted "shall schedule and hold a hearing on" for "must hear" and inserted second sentence forbidding the complaining judge from being the one who investigates and hears the charge unless the contempt arose from violation of an order of the complaining judge issued after a hearing on the merits and the complaining judge can impartially address the contempt; inserted (2) requiring a reasonable opportunity for the person to obtain counsel and prepare a defense and granting the right to testify and call witnesses; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Case Notes

Probation Officer's Motion to Dismiss Contempt Proceeding Granted — Supervisory Control Appropriate: The petitioner was a probation officer who prepared the presentence investigation report for a Montana State Prison inmate who had pleaded guilty to vehicular homicide while under the influence and to criminal endangerment and had received a 30-year commitment to the Department of Corrections (DOC). Three years after sentencing, the inmate moved the District Court to hold the petitioner in contempt on the basis of her use of falsified information for his initial DOC placement at the prison, which delayed his placement in an addiction treatment program and impeded his parole eligibility. The petitioner filed a motion to dismiss the contempt proceedings, which was denied by the District Court. The petitioner then asked the Supreme Court to intervene via supervisory control. After determining supervisory control was appropriate in this case, the court held that while it was unclear what type of contempt motion was filed, the inmate's contempt motion failed under the standard for indirect criminal contempt, because only the state can prosecute such a motion, and likewise failed under the indirect civil contempt standard, because a cognizable claim under this standard must seek to compel the contemnor to perform an act within the contemnor's power to perform but the inmate merely sought a contempt citation and sanction against the probation officer in her individual capacity as a DOC employee without the authority to determine or alter a placement within the context of a court-ordered DOC commitment. VanSkyock v. 20th Judicial District Court, 2017 MT 99, 387 Mont. 307, 393 P.3d 1068.

Jury Trial Not Required in Civil Contempt Case: O'Neil was enjoined from and held in civil contempt for the unauthorized practice of law. O'Neil appealed on grounds that due process required that he be granted a jury trial on the charges. The Supreme Court disagreed, noting that under federal law, there might be a right to a jury trial in criminal contempt cases that impose serious contempt penalties, but that there is no general federal constitutional right to a jury trial for criminal contempt in federal or state courts. However, O'Neil was charged with civil contempt, not criminal contempt, and the penalty under 3-1-511 does not provide sanctions that rise to the level of a serious penalty. O'Neil was afforded adequate due process under this section, including a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel, to prepare a defense or explanation prior to hearing, to testify in his own behalf, and to call witnesses at the hearing. O'Neil was not entitled to a higher standard of due process that might require a jury trial, and the District Court did not err in holding that a jury trial was not required. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006), following Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715 (1998).

Punishment for Contempt by Judge Who Issues Order Not Erroneous Absent Showing of Impartiality — No Due Process Violation: Drew was appointed to represent a criminal defendant but failed to file an amended petition for postconviction relief as ordered. Following several months of missed deadlines, the District Court held that Drew had failed to provide any plausible explanation for the failure to comply with the court's orders. Drew was then removed from the case, charged with contempt, and sentenced to jail time and a fine. The day before the jail term was to begin, Drew filed a writ of certiorari and a motion for an emergency stay order, contending that the District Court's action constituted a deprivation of Drew's due process right, including the right to allocution, a hearing before a neutral magistrate, and the opportunity to present testimony through witnesses by way of defense or explanation. The stay was issued, but in an original proceeding, the Supreme Court disagreed, denied the writ, and lifted the stay. Under this section, the judge who issues a contempt order is authorized to punish the contempt, and the only proviso against the court's punishment authority is if it is shown that the judge would not be impartial. The statute itself provides that the charged person is entitled to a hearing and to examine witnesses and also takes into account the issue of partiality by allowing the charged person to demonstrate that the sitting judge could not be impartial, in which case the neutral magistrate requirement will be imposed. This section contains its own due process safeguards. Thus, due process is not offended by allowing a District Court Judge to preside over a contempt hearing when the contempt arose from violation of an order of that court issued after a hearing on the merits on the subject of the order. In these situations, the judge who conducted the hearing and issued the order retains the authority to punish that violation by contempt proceedings, as long as the other due process protections in the statute and enunciated by the Montana and U.S. Supreme Courts are met and honored, unless it is shown that the judge could not be impartial. Drew v. District Court, 2004 MT 154, 321 M 520, 92 P3d 1195 (2004). See also Animal Foundation of Great Falls v. Eighth Judicial District Court, 2011 MT 289, 362 Mont. 485, 265 P.3d 659.

Burden of Proof: In action for contempt for failure to pay alimony pendente lite, it is not necessary for the wife to show the husband's ability to pay, but lack of ability to perform is a defense to be advanced and to be proved by the accused. State ex rel. Houtchens v. District Court, 122 M 76, 199 P2d 272 (1948).

Defenses Permitted: A person charged with constructive contempt may make answer by affidavit, by a verified answer, or by a verbal plea of not guilty, and on the hearing should be permitted to present every defense to show that he is not guilty of the contempt charged. State ex rel. Nett v. District Court, 72 M 206, 232 P 204 (1925).

3-1-520. Penalty to compel performance.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 496 in first sentence substituted "sanction imposed for a contempt seeks to compel the contemnor to perform" for "contempt consists in the omission to perform", and substituted "incarcerated, subjected to a fine in an amount not to exceed $500, or both" for "imprisoned"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Contempt Appropriate for Failure of Party to Abide by Court-Ordered Stipulation — Penalty Reduced to Statutory Maximum: The District Court held defendant in contempt for failure to abide by a stipulation entered by the court ordering Boles to remove a metal roof from her barn because it violated a subdivision's restrictive covenants. The court further ordered that defendant would be charged $300 for each day past the deadline for removal of the roof. Defendant appealed on grounds that the court did not have jurisdiction because defendant was not a named party or served as an original party and because defendant was coerced into signing the stipulation under the guise of changing the covenants to accommodate the roof. The Supreme Court noted that defendant's motion would have been more appropriately framed as a motion seeking relief from judgment under former Rule 60(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), because the stipulation was a final order and agreed with the District Court's conclusion that there was no reason under former Rule 60(b) to relieve defendant from the final judgment. Even though defendant was not a named party or served as an original party, the District Court did have jurisdiction because defendant had appeared in the case many times without raising the jurisdiction issue at the initial appearance or response, and once defendant recognized the court's jurisdiction, the defense of no personal jurisdiction was waived. Additionally, there was no credible evidence that defendant was coerced into signing the stipulation. Therefore, the contempt conviction was affirmed. However, the Supreme Court did vacate the portion of the order that defendant would be charged $300 for each day past the deadline for removal of the roof because a sanction for contempt that seeks to compel the contemnor to perform an act may not exceed $500, so the sanction was remitted to a maximum of $500. El Dorado Heights Homeowners' Ass'n v. Dewitt, 2008 MT 199, 344 M 77, 186 P3d 1249 (2008).

Jury Trial Not Required in Civil Contempt Case: O'Neil was enjoined from and held in civil contempt for the unauthorized practice of law. O'Neil appealed on grounds that due process required that he be granted a jury trial on the charges. The Supreme Court disagreed, noting that under federal law, there might be a right to a jury trial in criminal contempt cases that impose serious contempt penalties, but that there is no general federal constitutional right to a jury trial for criminal contempt in federal or state courts. However, O'Neil was charged with civil contempt, not criminal contempt, and the penalty under 3-1-511 does not provide sanctions that rise to the level of a serious penalty. O'Neil was afforded adequate due process under 3-1-518, including a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel, to prepare a defense or explanation prior to hearing, to testify in his own behalf, and to call witnesses at the hearing. O'Neil was not entitled to a higher standard of due process that might require a jury trial, and the District Court did not err in holding that a jury trial was not required. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006), following Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715 (1998).

Application of Both Sanctions Under This Part for Same Contempt Prohibited: The sanctions in 3-1-519 (now repealed) and this section may not both be imposed for the same contempt. Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Distinguishing Between Civil and Criminal Contempt: Contempts are neither wholly civil nor wholly criminal, but classification of a contempt as one or the other is crucial, particularly when the person is sentenced to confinement, because the classification determines the procedures that the court must follow. There is nothing inherent in a contemptuous act or refusal to act that classifies it as civil or criminal. Rather, it is the character and purpose of the punishment that the court chooses to impose that serves to distinguish between civil and criminal contempt. If the sanction is intended to force compliance with the court's order, the contempt is properly classified as civil. If the purpose is to punish the contemnor for a specific act and to vindicate the authority of the court, the contempt is criminal. (See 2001 amendment.) Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Necessity of Criminal Charge and Due Process in Contempt Proceeding Resulting in Criminal Penalty: The District Court stated that the purpose of its sentence for contempt for practicing law without a license was to compel performance and that the court was thus acting under this section, which allows incarceration until performance occurs. However, in reality, the sentence, 30 days in jail, to be suspended upon paying a $500 fine within 10 days, was punishment for past acts. Therefore, the contempt proceeding was properly characterized as criminal rather than civil because a contempt is classified as criminal if the purpose of the sanction imposed is punishment and civil if the purpose of the sanction imposed is to compel compliance with a court order. A criminal contempt proceeding must be under the procedures in Title 46 to ensure that criminal penalties are not imposed without affording the proper protections. The lower court erred by imposing a criminal sentence when no criminal charges were brought under 45-7-309, creating the crime of criminal contempt, and defendant was not afforded the due process that is guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions. (See 2001 amendment.) Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Ability to Comply:

A person may be sentenced for contempt under this section for failure to pay alimony pendente lite although he has no money and no income, where it is shown that the defendant has the ability to obtain such funds by his labor. State ex rel. Houtchens v. District Court, 122 M 76, 199 P2d 272 (1948).

Under this section, inability to perform is a good defense unless the inability has been brought on contumaciously by the individual himself. State ex rel. Murphy v. District Court, 99 M 209, 41 P2d 1113 (1935).

Where the evidence in a contempt proceeding does not show that it was within the power of the contemner to perform an act required of him by an order of court or that he voluntarily and contumaciously brought the disability upon himself, he may not be punished by imprisonment in jail until he does perform it. State ex rel. Burns v. District Court, 83 M 200, 271 P 439 (1928).

One adjudged guilty of contempt for failure to pay alimony and imprisoned in the county jail under this section until he shall have performed is, upon proof of inability to pay, entitled to his release from confinement. State ex rel. Cash v. District Court, 78 M 92, 252 P 388 (1927).

The commitment of a person to jail for failure to pay alimony under this section is void, where the record shows that at the time of the contempt proceeding it was not within the power of the contemner to comply with the order of the court. State ex rel. Scott v. District Court, 58 M 355, 192 P 829 (1920).

Inability to render obedience to an order of court is a good defense to a charge of contempt. State ex rel. McLean v. District Court, 37 M 485, 97 P 841 (1908).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 136 in (1) in second sentence at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (2) providing condition for appeal of contempt judgment or order in family law proceeding; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 136, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, in Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 996 P.2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000), the Montana Supreme Court formally adopted the "family law" exception for appeals of contempt orders."

Case Notes

Attorney Found in Contempt and Sanctioned for Failing to Appear at Hearing — Sanctions Proper: The petitioner was found in direct contempt and sanctioned by the District Court for failing to appear for a termination hearing and was ordered to pay the costs of rescheduling the hearing. The petitioner appealed the sanctions to the Supreme Court, which affirmed, holding that the petitioner's actions had unreasonably multiplied the proceeding because the hearing had to be continued. Cross Guns v. 8th Judicial District Court, 2017 MT 144, 387 Mont. 525, 396 P.3d 133.

Finding of Contempt for Parent Who Acquiesces to Child's Wishes Instead of Abiding by Parenting Plan — Affirmed: The mother, who had primary custody of the parties' child, stopped making her available for the father's scheduled visitation. The mother explained that the child, now 14, did not want to spend time with the father. The mother's spouse also filed a petition for stepparent adoption, which included an affidavit in support from the mother. The father moved to hold the mother in contempt and the District Court granted the motion, noting that the mother's actions in supporting her spouse's stepparent petition were contrary to her claim that she was willing to help the father repair his relationship with their child. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the finding of contempt, concluding that when a parent fails to make reasonable efforts to require a recalcitrant child to attend visitation, the parent has not made a good faith effort to comply with the parenting plan. In re Marriage of Marez/Marshall, 2014 MT 333, 377 Mont. 304, 340 P.3d 520.

Contempt Order Including Ancillary Order Affecting Parties' Rights Appealable: The Supreme Court generally rejects the direct appeal of a contempt order in a marriage dissolution case that goes purely to the District Court's contempt power and that does not adjudicate any ancillary matters falling within the District Court's continuing jurisdiction over the rights of the parties. In the present case, in ruling on the wife's request for contempt, the District Court adjudicated additional matters relating to federal preemption of division of the husband's federal disability benefits. Thus, the ruling on the contempt order was appealable. In re Marriage of Lutes, 2005 MT 242, 328 M 490, 121 P3d 561 (2005). See also In re Marriage of Coward, 2000 MT 128, 300 M 1, 2 P3d 822 (2000).

Voluntary Agreement by Spouse to Pay Portion of Federal Disability Benefits as Part of Dissolution — No Contempt When Spouse Fails to Pay Federally Preempted Division of Benefits: As part of the equitable distribution of the marital estate, the husband agreed in the dissolution decree to pay the wife a portion of his federal veterans disability benefits. The husband made the payments for several years, but then stopped making the payments. The wife moved to hold the husband in contempt, but the District Court denied the motion based on In re Marriage of Strong, 2000 MT 178, 300 M 331, 8 P3d 763 (2000), in which it was held that federal law preempts the state from distributing Veterans Benefits Administration benefits as part of the marital estate. The Supreme Court affirmed. Even though the husband violated the terms of the decree by withholding payment of the wife's share of the disability benefits, federal law preempted the District Court from enforcing the decree in regard to division of those benefits, and thus the District Court did not err in refusing to hold the husband in contempt for failing to pay a portion of the benefits to the wife. A District Court may not order the division or allocation of any Veterans Benefits Administration benefits to satisfy any marital obligation, be it maintenance or division of the marital estate, regardless of whether the parties agreed to do so in a property settlement agreement. In re Marriage of Lutes, 2005 MT 242, 328 M 490, 121 P3d 561 (2005).

Failure to Show That Justice's Court Exceeded Its Jurisdiction in Holding Defendant in Contempt in DUI Case — Writ of Review Properly Denied: Schaefer was charged in Justice's Court with repeat misdemeanor DUI per se and sentenced to a chemical dependency course, but he did not complete all conditions of the course, so the court held him in contempt. Schaefer then filed a writ of review in District Court, but the writ was dismissed because the court concluded that a petition for postconviction relief provided Schaefer with a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy, so the court lacked jurisdiction. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed denial of the writ, but not because a petition for postconviction relief was more appropriate, but rather because the Justice's Court properly exercised its jurisdiction and because the conflicting evidence issue of aftercare remained in the exclusive jurisdiction of the Justice's Court. Although the District Court incorrectly found that a writ of review was not appropriate, denial of the petition was nevertheless affirmed because Schaefer failed to satisfy the first prong of the test in 27-25-102 by showing that the Justice's Court exceeded its jurisdiction by holding him in contempt. Schaefer v. Egeland, 2004 MT 199, 322 M 274, 95 P3d 724 (2004).

Misdemeanor Contempt Not Enforceable More Than One Year After Sentence Expired: On April 9, 1998, Dexter was sentenced in Justice's Court to 1 year in jail for third offense DUI. The sentence was suspended on condition that Dexter serve 90 days in jail and pay a $770 fine, but Dexter did neither. Sentence revocation proceedings could have been instituted under 46-18-203 during the time of Dexter's sentence, but were not. About 3 years later, Dexter was arrested on an outstanding warrant after the suspended sentence had expired, and the Justice's Court invoked its contempt powers to sentence Dexter to jail time for failing to fulfill the conditions of the suspended sentence. The Justice of the Peace contended that under 3-10-401, contempt proceedings could be brought at any time, and the District Court concluded that the Justice's Court had the authority to enforce compliance with the lawful sentencing order, but on appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Under the penalties in 3-1-519 in effect at the time (repealed in 2001), contempt of court constituted a misdemeanor crime, which was required under 45-1-205(2)(b) to be prosecuted within 1 year of commission. The last day on which Dexter could have committed contempt was April 9, 1999, so prosecution was required to be commenced by April 9, 2000. Because the contempt prosecution did not commence until Dexter was arrested on January 23, 2002, the Justice's Court lacked jurisdiction to hold Dexter in contempt for failure to comply with the terms of a sentence that expired in April 1999. Dexter v. Shields, 2004 MT 159, 322 M 6, 92 P3d 1208 (2004). See also Milanovich v. Milanovich, 200 M 83, 655 P2d 959 (1982).

Improper Filing of Pro Se Motion Considered Direct Contempt — Community Service Penalty Affirmed: Christian's attorney notified him of the intent to withdraw as counsel of record, and Christian subsequently filed a motion to set trial in District Court, with the attorney's name as counsel and signing the motion himself. The court held Christian in contempt for signing the motion pro se in violation of former Rule 11, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and sentenced Christian to 1,000 hours of community service. Christian petitioned the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari, contesting the contempt order and the sentence. The Supreme Court noted that its review was limited to questions regarding jurisdiction and whether there was sufficient evidence to support the contempt finding. Christian argued that his conduct was at most an indirect contempt and that, as such, procedural due process was violated because there was no charging document filed against him. The Supreme Court disagreed. The offending document was within the immediate view and presence of the District Court and thus constituted direct contempt. The document was contemptuous on its face because Christian was acting as counsel without authority. The sentence was also affirmed. The District Court had considered requiring pro bono service and also noted that jail time was possible, but concluded that extensive community service was the appropriate penalty to dissuade Christian from similar future behavior. Christian's writ of certiorari was denied. Christian v. District Court, 2004 MT 1, 319 M 162, 83 P3d 811 (2004).

Time Bar on Writ of Certiorari to Review Contempt Proceedings: In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court was asked to establish a timeframe within which a petition for review of a contempt order must be filed. The issue was whether the time limitation should come from Title 25, which includes the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure and the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure, or from Title 27, which prescribes the various statutes of limitation for the commencement of actions. The court noted that there is no appeal, as such, from an order of contempt in a civil proceeding and that the exclusive method of review of civil contempt orders (with certain exceptions) is through a writ of certiorari or writ of review. That review is generally limited to jurisdictional questions and whether evidence supports the contempt. Therefore, the issue of timeliness for filing a petition for a writ of certiorari or review is not a statute of limitations issue, and to mechanically characterize those writs for the review of contempt proceedings as original proceedings governed by the 5-year statute of limitations in 27-2-231 would be to deny the basic nature of appellate review. Further, petitions for writs of certiorari to review contempt proceedings are fundamentally different from other original proceedings commenced in the Supreme Court and from petitions for writs of supervisory control, which do not so much involve appellate review of and a decision on the underlying proceedings as they involve the court dealing with discreet questions of law during the pendency of the underlying proceedings. Because the timeframe in which to file petitions for writs of certiorari to review contempt proceedings is a procedural issue analogous to the procedure for filing a notice of appeal, the Supreme Court held that former Rule 72, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), former Rule 1, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), former Rule 17, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), and 27-25-103 require that the timeframe for those petitions be determined by the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure. Specifically, pursuant to former Rule 5, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), a petition for a writ of certiorari to review contempt proceedings must be filed with the Clerk of the District Court within 30 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding, unless the state is a party, in which case the petition must be filed within 60 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding. This may not be construed to limit the Supreme Court's power to grant writs of supervisory control or to consider applications for other types of original proceedings. The Supreme Court chose not to establish a precedent that allows contempt proceedings to be delayed until the underlying cause is resolved. Jones v. District Court, 2001 MT 276, 307 M 305, 37 P3d 682 (2001), overruling Shaffroth v. Lamere, 104 M 175, 65 P2d

610 (1937), to the extent that Shaffroth holds that the general 5-year statute of limitations in 27-2-231 applies to all writs of review authorized in 27-25-102.

Certiorari to Review Proceedings:

The standard for review of contempt orders, pursuant to the granting of a writ of certiorari, is, first, to determine whether the court that found contempt acted within its jurisdiction. For a court to have acted within its jurisdiction: (1) it must have cognizance of the subject matter; (2) it must have presence of the proper parties; and (3) its action must be invoked by proper pleadings and the judgment must be within the issues raised. A court lacks or exceeds jurisdiction by any act that exceeds the defined power of the court, whether that power is defined by constitutional provision, statute, or court rule or under the doctrine of stare decisis. The second part of the standard for review of contempt orders is to determine whether substantial evidence exists to support the court's findings. The family law exception relevant to review on direct appeal of a District Court judgment and orders made in cases of contempt is subject to the same standard of review. (See 2001 amendment.) Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000).

In reviewing a contempt citation by Writ of Certiorari, the Supreme Court is limited to the following considerations: (1) whether the lower court had jurisdiction to issue the order; and (2) whether there was evidence supporting the order. State ex rel. Foss v. District Court, 216 M 327, 701 P2d 342, 42 St. Rep. 845 (1985).

The Writ of Certiorari is discretionary and is granted only when there has been a showing that the tribunal making the judgment of contempt acted in excess of jurisdiction. State ex rel. Porter v. First Judicial District, 123 M 447, 215 P2d 279 (1950).

Where in a contempt proceeding relator challenged the jurisdiction of the trial court, certiorari is the proper remedy. Supervisory control concedes jurisdiction. State ex rel. Enochs v. District Court, 113 M 227, 123 P2d 971 (1942).

A judgment or order of the District Court made in a contempt proceeding is reviewable by the Supreme Court on Writ of Certiorari, the review going no further than to determine whether the lower court regularly pursued its authority; the Writ cannot be used to correct errors committed in the exercise of jurisdiction. State ex rel. Murphy v. District Court, 99 M 209, 41 P2d 1113 (1935).

Clarification of Family Law Exception to Supreme Court Review of District Court Contempt Orders — When Writ of Certiorari Required — Ancillary Order Exception: Seeking to narrow and clarify the judicially created family law exception to the writ of certiorari requirement of this section that was expressly extended to dissolution of marriage contempt proceedings in In re Marriage of Smith, 212 M 223, 686 P2d 912 (1984), and In re Marriage of Sessions, 231 M 437, 753 P2d 1306, 45 St. Rep. 744 (1988), and to balance the exception with the statute and longstanding Montana case law generally allowing no direct appeal from a contempt order unless the writ is granted, the Supreme Court concluded that it would be poor public policy to create circumstances whereby a District Court's contempt powers are diminished in any manner by one party's ability to file a direct appeal that in turn frivolously and needlessly delays that party's compliance with the lower court's judgments and orders. To cover contentious disputes that arise in family law, the court created the ancillary order exception, establishing that the family law direct appeal exception applies only when the judgment appealed from includes an ancillary order, meaning an order that determines the rights of the parties as a result of the contemptuous conduct—all under one judgment, that affects the substantial rights of the parties. The ancillary order may result from the proper exercise of the court's jurisdiction, in which case a writ of certiorari would necessarily be denied. However, a lone contempt order, regardless of the underlying law of the case, cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court on direct appeal. (See 2001 amendment.) Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000), followed in In re Marriage of DeLude, 2000 MT 75, 299 M 123, 999 P2d 306, 57 St. Rep. 331 (2000). See also State ex rel. Zosel v. District Court, 56 M 578, 185 P 1112 (1919), and Milanovich v. Milanovich, 200 M 83, 655 P2d 959, 39 St. Rep. 1554 (1982).

Standard for Review of Family Law Contempt Orders — Jurisdiction and Evidence — Family Law Exception Clarified: The standard for review of contempt orders, pursuant to the granting of a writ of certiorari, is, first, to determine whether the court that found contempt acted within its jurisdiction. For a court to have acted within its jurisdiction: (1) it must have cognizance of the subject matter; (2) it must have presence of the proper parties; and (3) its action must be invoked by proper pleadings and the judgment must be within the issues raised. A court lacks or exceeds jurisdiction by any act that exceeds the defined power of the court, whether that power is defined by constitutional provision, statute, or court rule or under the doctrine of stare decisis. The second part of the standard for review of contempt orders is to determine whether substantial evidence exists to support the court's findings. The family law exception relevant to review on direct appeal of a District Court judgment and orders made in cases of contempt is subject to the same standard of review. (See 2001 amendment.) Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000), following State ex rel. Porter v. First Judicial District, 123 M 447, 215 P2d 279 (1950), and Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715, 55 St. Rep. 1001 (1998), and followed in In re Marriage of Coward, 2000 MT 128, 300 M 1, 2 P3d 822, 57 St. Rep. 531 (2000). See also In re Marriage of Sullivan, 258 M 531, 853 P2d 1194, 50 St. Rep. 648 (1993).

Exception for Contempt Review in Family Law Cases: Although contempt orders are generally final and not reviewable on appeal, except by writ of certiorari, the Supreme Court has created an exception in family law cases. In such cases, the review is limited to examining the record to determine whether the District Court acted within its jurisdiction and whether the evidence supports the District Court's contempt findings. (See 2001 amendment.) In re Marriage of Heath, 272 M 522, 901 P2d 590, 52 St. Rep. 915 (1995), followed in In re Marriage of Nevin, 284 M 468, 945 P2d 58, 54 St. Rep. 981 (1997).

Fabrication of Child Abuse Allegation to Deny Visitation as Contempt: A District Court's belief that mother fabricated an incident of child sexual abuse in order to deprive father of visitation rights granted pursuant to the dissolution decree, a lawful court order, is a sufficient basis for a contempt ruling necessary to preserve the dignity and authority of the court. The District Court properly considered the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony, which are matters not subject to Supreme Court review. Woolf v. Evans, 264 M 480, 872 P2d 777, 51 St. Rep. 355 (1994).

Placement of Child Support in Escrow Pending Modification of Support Order as Contempt of Court — Limited Review of Contempt Order: After Gordon and Annette dissolved their marriage, Gordon made a motion to modify the order for child support payments. Pending judicial action on that motion, he placed the arrearages in escrow with the Clerk of the District Court. The Supreme Court held that the District Court order holding him in contempt for failure to pay the arrearages directly to Annette could be reviewed by the Supreme Court for limited purposes and that the facts supported the District Court's finding of contempt. In re Marriage of Sullivan, 258 M 531, 853 P2d 1194, 50 St. Rep. 648 (1993).

Sanctions and Contempt Imposed on Attorney by City Court Invalid: A City Court imposed sanctions on an attorney for failing to appear to defend a client in a DUI case. The attorney argued that he had been required to attend a hearing in District Court and had diligently tried to inform the City Court of the conflict. The City Court refused to revoke the sanctions, adding instead a contempt charge. The Supreme Court ruled that the sanctions were improper in that the City Court acted arbitrarily in imposing them. The Supreme Court went on to reverse the contempt, finding on the basis that the sanctions did not constitute a lawful order and therefore the attorney could not be found in contempt for failing to pay the sanctions. Doran v. City Court of Whitefish, 239 M 94, 779 P2d 68, 46 St. Rep. 1539 (1989).

Jurisdiction of Contempt Case Not Lost Despite Bankruptcy Filing: A bankruptcy proceeding does not divest a state court of jurisdiction over a contempt matter; it only stays or suspends the contempt proceedings. A writ of certiorari seeking review of a contempt order was denied upon a finding that despite petitioner's bankruptcy filing, the District Court had not lacked or exceeded its jurisdiction. Valley Unit Corp. v. Bozeman, 232 M 52, 754 P2d 822, 45 St. Rep. 860 (1988).

Exception in Review of Marriage Dissolution Proceedings: Although contempt of court orders by a District Court are final and usually unreviewable by the Supreme Court in any manner except by writ of certiorari, an exception is made in dissolution of marriage proceedings. In re Marriage of Sessions, 231 M 437, 753 P2d 1306, 45 St. Rep. 744 (1988). See also In re Marriage of Prescott, 259 M 293, 856 P2d 229, 50 St. Rep. 801 (1993), In re Marriage of Jurgens/Turner, 260 M 528, 861 P2d 186, 50 St. Rep. 1202 (1993), In re Marriage of Dreesbach, 265 M 216, 875 P2d 1018, 51 St. Rep. 374 (1994), and Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000).

Contempt Order Not Subject to Appeal: A contempt order is not appealable. The power to inflict punishment by contempt is inherent in the courts. This power must be exercised by the courts with the knowledge that it will not be upset on appeal. This is necessary to preserve the dignity and authority of the court. St. v. Campbell, 219 M 194, 711 P2d 1357, 42 St. Rep. 1948 (1985); In re the Marriage of O'Neill, 184 M 415, 603 P2d 257, 36 St. Rep. 2154 (1979), following State ex rel. Rankin v. District Court, 58 M 376, 191 P 772 (1920). See also Jones v. District Court, 2001 MT 276, 307 M 305, 37 P3d 682 (2001).

When Issue of Constitutionality Not Properly Before Court: The issue of constitutionality of this section was not properly before the Supreme Court when it was not first raised in the District Court and when a notice of constitutional challenge was not properly filed as required by former Rule 38, M.R.App.P. (now superseded). In re Marriage of Robbins, 219 M 130, 711 P2d 1347, 42 St. Rep. 1897 (1985).

Certiorari — Review of Contempt Order: The judgment and orders of the District Court in contempt cases are "final and conclusive", and no appeal may be taken from them. The Supreme Court will not consider matters of contempt on direct appeal. The proper avenue to use to gain review of a contempt order is a Writ of Certiorari. In re Marriage of Milanovich, 201 M 332, 655 P2d 959, 39 St. Rep. 1554 (1982), followed in In re Marriage of Robbins, 219 M 130, 711 P2d 1347, 42 St. Rep. 1897 (1985), Traders St. Bank of Poplar v. Mann, 258 M 226, 852 P2d 604, 50 St. Rep. 509 (1993), and in In re Marriage of Jurgens/Turner, 260 M 528, 861 P2d 186, 50 St. Rep. 1202 (1993).

Challenge to Contempt Citation Improperly Presented on Appeal: If the Gordons wish this court to consider the propriety of the District Court's action regarding the contempt proceedings and to review any underlying supportive findings, conclusions, or orders, it will be necessary to file an appropriate Writ of Review. In re Gordon, 192 M 499, 628 P2d 1117, 38 St. Rep. 887 (1981).

Record Required for Contempt Review: Defendant was held in contempt of court for failure to comply with a judgment entered against him. Contempt of a District Court is reviewable only by application for a Writ of Certiorari to the Supreme Court. Where an indirect contempt is involved, as here, the Writ would command the District Court to transmit its record of the contempt proceedings. The Supreme Court's review would be limited to an examination of the record to determine whether the District Court acted within its jurisdiction and whether the evidence supported the finding and order of contempt. In this case, no transcript of the contempt proceeding was made. The Supreme Court set aside the contempt order for lack of a record. Schneider v. Ostwald, 190 M 29, 617 P2d 1293, 37 St. Rep. 1728 (1980).

Writ of Certiorari Not Proper — Writ of Supervisory Control Proper: Because the Supreme Court did not have a fully certified transcript of the record and proceedings pursuant to 27-25-202, a Writ of Certiorari was not a proper remedy to review a contempt order. But under Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., the Supreme Court may exercise supervisory power since the relator is barred from using a Writ of Certiorari. State ex rel. Anderson v. District Court, 188 M 77, 610 P2d 1183, 37 St. Rep. 916 (1980). See also Jones v. District Court, 2001 MT 276, 307 M 305, 37 P3d 682 (2001).

Contempt Proceeding Independent of Civil Matter: The filing of a notice of appeal to review the propriety of a contempt citation does not divest the District Court of jurisdiction over the underlying civil matter. Contempt proceedings are entirely independent of the civil action from which they arise. McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255, 35 St. Rep. 1191 (1978), following State ex rel. Enochs v. District Court, 113 M 227, 123 P2d 971 (1942). See also In re Marriage of Sessions, 231 M 437, 753 P2d 1306, 45 St. Rep. 744 (1988).

Presumption of Validity: District Court judgments whose prima facie authority extends to questions of the kind purported to have been adjudicated are entitled to every presumption of validity. State ex rel. Enochs v. District Court, 113 M 227, 123 P2d 971 (1942).

Proof Required for Punishment: Contempt proceedings are essentially criminal in character, and before a court may render a judgment imposing punishment for contempt, the evidence must establish the contemner's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. State ex rel. Tague v. District Court, 100 M 383, 47 P2d 649 (1935).

Dismissal of Contempt Proceedings:

An attempted appeal from an order dismissing a proceeding in contempt after a hearing will be dismissed. Hanson v. Hanson, 83 M 428, 272 P 543 (1928).

Where the District Judge dismissed contempt proceedings, holding that he was not authorized to entertain them, mandamus to compel him to hear and determine them was the proper remedy. State ex rel. N. Pac. Ry. v. Loud, 24 M 428, 62 P 497 (1900).

Supervisory Control by Supreme Court:

The only way in which one adjudged guilty of contempt may have the proceedings reviewed by the Supreme Court under Art. VIII, sec. 3, Mont. Const., is by invoking the Writ of Review or, in a proper case, the Writ of Supervisory Control. State ex rel. Burns v. District Court, 83 M 200, 271 P 439 (1928).

If a District Court acts, but in a manner so arbitrary and unlawful as to be tyrannical, the Supreme Court may intervene by virtue of the power of supervisory control. But in such a case the court is limited to an examination of the record to ascertain whether there is substantial evidence to justify the order adjudging the accused guilty. State ex rel. Zosel v. District Court, 56 M 578, 185 P 1112 (1919).

The Supreme Court is not limited to review a judgment of contempt by Writ of Certiorari but may also do so by Writs of Supervisory Control. State ex rel. Sutton v. District Court, 27 M 128, 69 P 988 (1902).

Exclusive Power of Court: Contempt proceedings are sui generis, and for the violation of a lawful judgment of the District Court, that court alone has authority to inflict punishment. State ex rel. Zosel v. District Court, 56 M 578, 185 P 1112 (1919).

Case Notes

Municipal Ordinance Prohibiting Outside Employment by Municipal Judge Void: The city of Bozeman passed municipal ordinance 2.06.050 prohibiting the Municipal Court Judge from obtaining outside employment. The city contended that under 3-6-202, it was allowed to enact an ordinance governing the qualifications of the judge, as long as the ordinance did not violate Art. VII, sec. 9, Mont. Const., and also argued that the ordinance was consistent with 3-1-604, which precludes a Municipal Court Judge from practicing law in that judge's own court. The Supreme Court agreed with the District Court that the ordinance was void because it conflicted with 3-1-604 when read in conjunction with this section. The legislative history also demonstrated that the statutes are intended to allow Municipal Court Judges to practice law in courts other than their own in order to supplement their income. Although the constitutional provision prohibits a District Court Judge from the outside practice of law and 3-6-202 requires a Municipal Court Judge to have the same qualifications as a District Court Judge, qualifications should not be confused with restrictions. Although 3-1-604 does not affirmatively declare that Municipal Court Judges can practice law outside their own courts, its intent is clear. The ordinance conflicted with the statutes and was therefore void. Carlson v. Bozeman, 2001 MT 46, 304 M 277, 20 P3d 792 (2001).

Right of Sitting Judge to Run for Another Judicial Office Without Resigning: Article VII, sec. 10, Mont. Const., providing that one holding a judicial position forfeits that position by filing for an elective public office other than a judicial position, requires a Judge to forfeit his judicial office if he files for either a legislative or executive office. While it does not affirmatively declare that a Judge does not forfeit his judicial office by filing for another judicial office, that is its intent as shown by the minutes of the Constitutional Convention and that is what it means. Sections 3-1-607 and 3-1-608 forbid what Art. VII, sec. 10, Mont. Const., authorizes and are therefore unconstitutional as being in direct conflict with Art. VII, sec. 10, Mont. Const. (The unconstitutional provision was deleted from 3-1-607 by a 1985 amendment. Amendment to 3-1-608 was not necessary.) The Comm. for an Effective Judiciary v. Disqualification and Substitution of Judges
Supreme Court Rule

Part Compiler's Comments

Final Form of Rules Adopted — Effective Date: The Supreme Court order dated September 13, 1988, provided, in part, as follows: "1. The final form of the rules promulgated by this Court for the disqualification and substitution of judges [codified as 3-1-803 through 3-1-805, MCA] shall be as attached hereto and set forth therein.

2. The effective date of said rules shall continue to be September 1, 1987."

Former Rules Superseded — Effective Dates: Supreme Court Order dated June 17, 1987, provided, in part, as follows: "By the authority of Article VII, Section 2, of the 1972 Montana Constitution, this rule supersedes and is to be used to the exclusion of the rule on disqualification and substitution of judges adopted by Supreme Court Order dated June 29, 1981, and published as sections 3-1-801 and 3-1-802, MCA.

This rule shall take effect on September 1, 1987."

Supreme Court Order dated June 29, 1981, provided, in part, as follows: "By the authority of Article VII, Section 2, of the 1972 Montana Constitution, this rule supersedes and is to be used to the exclusion of the rule on disqualification and substitution of judges adopted by Supreme Court Order dated December 29, 1976, and published as section 3-1-801, MCA.

This rule shall take effect on July 1, 1981."

Effect of Publication: Section 2, Ch. 1, L. 1979, which adopted the MCA, provided that publication of a Supreme Court Rule is done for the benefit of code users. The publication of this section should not be construed as a legislative attempt to readopt or promulgate the rule.

Statutes Superseded — Effective Date: Subsection 9 of the Supreme Court's order dated Dec. 29, 1976 (now superseded), provided in part: "This rule supersedes and is to be used to the exclusion of sections 93-901, 93-2906(4), 93-2907, 93-6602(2), 95-1709, and 95-2010, R.C.M. 1947.

This rule shall be effective on March 1, 1977, it to apply to all actions filed on or after that date."

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Jurisdiction of Original Judge Retained Following Motion for Substitution — Applicability of 1985 Law: On March 27, 1987, plaintiff moved for a substitution of judge, but the Clerk of Court did not give notice to either the judge or the opposing parties, nor was a notice of substitution filed as required by 3-1-802, the law in effect at the time the motion was filed. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that 3-1-804 did not apply to the unique circumstances of the case because that statute was not in effect until 3-1-802 was superseded on June 29, 1987. Because the requirements of 3-1-802 were not met, the original judge retained jurisdiction. Also, the judge could not obtain jurisdiction through stipulation of the parties. Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Failure to File Certificate of Good Faith: The defendant, acting pro se, in seeking to have the judge disqualified, did not file a timely and sufficient affidavit alleging facts showing personal bias or prejudice. Therefore, the challenge was properly treated as a preemptory disqualification and his attempt to disqualify the second judge by preemptory challenge was void because defendant had exhausted the one preemptory challenge allowed in a criminal case. St. v. Hoch, 234 M 405, 763 P2d 1119, 45 St. Rep. 2007 (1988).

Disqualification Motion at Sentencing Hearing: Defendant filed a motion to disqualify at his sentencing hearing, which was held later than the statutory 20 days before the original date of trial. The motion was denied by the District Judge, who found that it was not timely filed and that no cause was shown for failure to timely file. Citing St. v. Harvey, 219 M 402, 713 P2d 517, 43 St. Rep. 46 (1986), the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the timeliness of a motion to disqualify a judge for cause is an initial matter for the District Court to determine. St. v. Lattin, 222 M 382, 722 P2d 622, 43 St. Rep. 1349 (1986).

Disqualification Motion Three Months After Judgment: In a per curiam decision, the Supreme Court dismissed as untimely respondent's motion asking the District Judge to disqualify himself when the motion was not made until 3 months after trial and judgment had been entered. In re Marriage of Cole, 222 M 370, 722 P2d 624, 43 St. Rep. 1339 (1986).

Disqualification of Judge Upon Failure of Pretrial Settlement Negotiations: Where a judge is to be the trier of fact and he participates in pretrial settlement negotiations that subsequently fail, he should, upon request, disqualify himself from sitting as the trial judge. Shields v. Thunem, 220 M 449, 716 P2d 217, 43 St. Rep. 518 (1986), followed in In re Marriage of Cole, 224 M 207, 729 P2d 1276, 43 St. Rep. 2136 (1986).

Allegations of Improper Conduct of Counsel — No Disqualification of Judge: In statements made to a presentence investigator and ultimately to the District Judge, Gleed alleged improper conduct by his trial counsel. On appeal, he argued that the seriousness of the charges could have caused the judge to take a negative view in sentencing him and that therefore the judge should have disqualified himself. The proper procedure for disqualifying a judge is outlined in 3-1-802; however, none of the circumstances for disqualification were present in this case. Gleed did not follow the statutory procedure for disqualification, nor did he attempt to have his sentence reviewed by the sentence review division under Title 46, ch. 18, part 9. Instead, he raised the issue on appeal, alleging in a conclusory fashion that the judge was biased against him. The Supreme Court held that there was no merit to Gleed's argument that the judge was biased and should have disqualified himself. Sentence was affirmed. St. v. Gleed, 220 M 56, 713 P2d 543, 43 St. Rep. 169 (1986).

Disqualification Motion Ten Days Before Trial: This section requires that a motion to disqualify a judge be filed not less than 20 days before the original date of trial. Where defendant filed a motion just 10 days prior to the rescheduled trial date, the District Court was correct in denying the motion. St. v. Harvey, 219 M 402, 713 P2d 517, 43 St. Rep. 46 (1986).

Affidavit Alone Not Sufficient to Disqualify Judge for Bias: On August 31, the petitioner filed a petition for dissolution of marriage and child custody. A judge was assigned to the case that day. When, on September 12, the petitioner filed a motion for substitution of the judge, it was denied as untimely because unless a peremptory challenge is filed within 10 days of the date the judge is assigned, the party's right to move for peremptory substitution of the judge is considered waived. The petitioner then, on September 15, filed an affidavit for disqualification of the judge for bias. At the subsequent disqualification proceeding, the petitioner failed to present evidence to demonstrate bias. His motion was properly denied because he did not satisfy the requisite burden of proof by raising a strong presumption of actual bias. In re Marriage of Gahr, 212 M 481, 689 P2d 257, 41 St. Rep. 1879 (1984).

No Explicit Authority for Award of Attorney Fees in Disqualification Action: As there is no provision in this section that allows a judge to award attorney fees to a party or damages to a nonparty, such award is improper. Unless a statute provides explicitly for an award of attorney fees to the prevailing party, a court cannot make such an award. In re Marriage of Gahr, 212 M 481, 689 P2d 257, 41 St. Rep. 1879 (1984).

Lower Court Judge Sitting on Lower Court Case in Which He Was Involved: On appeal from dismissal of a disqualification hearing, the court rejected appellant's contention that under this section a lower court judge may not sit on a lower court case when he rendered or made the judgment. The section applies to trial court judges substituting for appellate judges. The court also rejected appellant's attempt to analogize that the judge should be disqualified for bias. Under 46-16-304 (renumbered 46-16-115), the judge could not sit as a juror on the case because he was an adversary in a federal case instituted by the appellant. Thus, appellant argued the judge should be disqualified to sit as a judge. The court, however, held that disqualification for cause is controlled by this section and not by other MCA sections by analogy. Downs v. Smyk, 211 M 374, 685 P2d 347, 41 St. Rep. 1424 (1984).

District Judge Who Had Represented Petitioners in Criminal Case — Disqualification Required in Postconviction Relief Proceeding Involving Same Criminal Case: A petition for postconviction relief was filed in the District Court before a judge who, 7 years earlier, had been involved as defense counsel in the preliminary stages of the criminal prosecution. The petition was denied, and petitioners appealed. The Supreme Court ruled that the District Judge had committed error in not disqualifying himself. The case was remanded for a postconviction hearing before another District Judge. St. v. Hintz, 205 M 295, 667 P2d 434, 40 St. Rep. 1280 (1983).

Relinquishment of Jurisdiction — Reassumption of Jurisdiction: A District Court Judge experiencing a heavy workload invited a second judge to assume jurisdiction. The second judge assumed jurisdiction; defendant moved for substitution of another judge, and a third judge assumed jurisdiction. State then moved for substitution of another judge, and the original judge, no longer under a disability of heavy workload, by order reassumed jurisdiction. Where there are no problems involving two judges concurrently having jurisdiction, the original judge is not prevented from reassuming full jurisdiction by timely order showing that the prior reason for relinquishing jurisdiction was removed. State ex rel. McKendry v. District Court, 201 M 244, 653 P2d 847, 39 St. Rep. 2085 (1982).

Application to City Court Judges: A defendant in an action involving dog licensing citations in City Court submitted an affidavit of disqualification of the City Judge because of bias and prejudice. City Court Judges can be disqualified for cause under this section, even though it does not specifically refer to them. State ex rel. Joslyn v. City Court, 198 M 223, 645 P2d 428, 39 St. Rep. 884 (1982).

Two Judge Disqualifications Unavailable to Postconviction Petitioner: Although a postconviction petition filed under the provisions of Title 46, ch. 21, is civil in nature, the petitioner is not entitled to two substitutions of presiding judges as allowed in 3-1-801 (superseded by 3-1-802). An applicant for postconviction relief is directed by the more specific provisions of the postconviction statute to bring the petition in the Supreme Court or in the court that sentenced him. A specific statute controls over a general statute. Coleman v. St., 194 M 428, 633 P2d 624, 38 St. Rep. 1352 (1981).

Timeliness of Motion to Substitute Judge: On appeal from his conviction for sexual intercourse without consent and for sexual assault, the defendant claimed that the District Judge's refusal to grant his motion for substitution of a judge was error. Although he was on notice that a particular judge would preside over the proceedings both before and after the severance of the codefendants' cases, the defense motion was not filed until 52 days after the defense was informed which judge had been assigned to the case. The substitution motion was clearly untimely, as defense had 10 days after learning of judge's assignment in which to file its motion. The defense urged that the filing of a separate information after severance of a criminal trial revived the right to peremptorily disqualify the judge. The Supreme Court noted that no authority for that argument was cited and said it found none to support it. St. v. Camitsch, 192 M 124, 626 P2d 1250, 38 St. Rep. 563 (1981). (Annotator's note: Case decided under 3-1-801, which was superseded by 3-1-802, but which had same filing period for substitution motion as 3-1-802.) See also In re S.L.T., 215 M 289, 697 P2d 472, 42 St. Rep. 366 (1985).

Affidavit of Actual Prejudice — Jurisdiction to Proceed: Where a defendant previously convicted of deceptive practices and the sale of unregistered securities filed an affidavit alleging specific acts of prejudice against him by a court scheduled to preside over a postconviction relief hearing, and another court found there existed no actual prejudice on the part of the first court, the first court erred in then proceeding with the postconviction relief hearing. The Supreme Court's rule on disqualification is clear that when an affidavit alleging actual prejudice is filed, the trial court may proceed no further. At that point the case comes under the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and the power to assign a judge to hear the Court, and the power to assign a judge to hear the disqualification motion rested solely with the Chief Justice of the Montana

Supreme Court. St. v. Duncan, 191 M 253, 623 P2d 953, 38 St. Rep. 202 (1981). (Annotator's note: Case decided under 3-1-801, which is superseded but is substantially similar to 3-1-802 in portions relevant to this case.)

Disqualification of Judge After Entry of Findings and Conclusions: Defendants filed affidavits of disqualification of the District Judge in a property dispute case after the entry of the judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law. Defendants contend that this precludes the judge from entering judgment in accordance with his findings and conclusions. The disqualification was attempted under section 93-901, R.C.M. 1947 (superseded by this section), which was in effect at the time. The findings and conclusions entered by the judge, prior to the filing of the affidavit of disqualification, expressly directed that a judgment be prepared "in accordance with" the findings and conclusions. Under these circumstances, the judgment was a part of the findings and conclusions. Accordingly, although the disqualification prevented the District Judge from ruling on posttrial motions under former Rules 59 and 60, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and from withdrawing the findings and conclusions previously entered, it was not effective to prevent entry of judgment in favor of plaintiff in accordance with findings and conclusions entered prior to the filing of the affidavit for disqualification. Macpherson v. Smoyer, 191 M 53, 622 P2d 188, 37 St. Rep. 2079 (1980).

No Duty to Inform Defendant of Procedure: Defendant was acting as his own counsel. The District Court Judge had no duty to inform him of the law concerning disqualification. Defendant was aware of who was presiding and failed to challenge him within the proper time limits. The Judge properly denied the affidavit because it was not timely. The Judge could not be disqualified for cause after the time limit because defendant's affidavit alleging bias was not accompanied by a certificate of good faith, as required by statute. St. v. Poncelet, 187 M 528, 610 P2d 698, 37 St. Rep. 760 (1980).

Disqualification of Trial Judge: Membership on a commission which drafted Montana's criminal code did not per se constitute grounds for disqualification of a trial Judge for cause, nor did the acquisition of information during the plea bargaining process or the drafting of preliminary instructions to the jury. Whatever knowledge the Judge obtained was during the course of legal proceedings in the case and not from any outside source. As long as the Judge's preliminary instructions are a correct statement of the law, it is immaterial whether they are drafted by the Judge or given over the objections of one or both adversary counsel. None of these things will support a disqualification. St. v. McKenzie, 186 M 481, 608 P2d 428, 37 St. Rep. 325 (1980).

Conviction Overturned When Rule on Disqualification and Substitution of Judges Not Followed: No published local court rule was discovered, so the Supreme Court rule on disqualification and substitution of Judges applied. There was no evidence that Judge Freebourn (the original Judge) specifically called in Judge Olsen or that Judge Olsen filed an acceptance of jurisdiction as required by the Supreme Court rule. Judge Olsen decided the case. The conviction was overturned because Judge Olsen was presiding in violation of the rule and did not have the power to hear the case. St. v. Daugherty, 184 M 474, 603 P2d 1041, 36 St. Rep. 2180 (1979).

Applicability of Supreme Court Order: When the filing date of the original complaint preceded the effective date of the Supreme Court order for disqualification and substitution of Judges, that order is inapplicable. Town Pump, Inc. v. District Court, 180 M 358, 590 P2d 1126, 36 St. Rep. 282 (1979).

Statutory Time Limit: Under former law, any attempt to disqualify a District Judge more than 3 days after notification that he had assumed jurisdiction was a nullity and did not have the effect of depriving the Judge of jurisdiction. Town Pump, Inc. v. District Court, 180 M 358, 590 P2d 1126, 36 St. Rep. 282 (1979).

Filing Motion for Disqualification Before Motion for New Trial: A Judge may be disqualified after return of verdict but before new trial motion was made. State ex rel. Bellon v. District Court, 140 M 447, 373 P2d 314 (1962); Russell v. Sunburst Ref. Co., 83 M 452, 272 P 998 (1928); Hill v. Nelson Coal Co., 40 M 1, 104 P 876 (1909); State ex rel. Carelton v. District Court, 33 M 138, 82 P 789 (1905). But see State ex rel. Cline v. District Court, 142 M 278, 384 P2d 490 (1963); State ex rel. Peery v. District Court, 145 M 287, 400 P2d 648 (1965), where the doctrine was criticized and the statute was considered improperly construed when disqualification is permitted pending a motion for a new trial. And, see State ex rel. Wilson v. District Court, 143 M 543, 393 P2d 39 (1964), where the Supreme Court refused to follow the interpretation given the civil statute and declined to permit the disqualification of a Judge in a criminal case following verdict and before hearing upon a motion for a new trial.

2000 Amendment: In item 2 substituted "third degree" for "fourth degree". Amendment effective January 1, 2001.

1987 Amendment: In first unnumbered paragraph inserted "listed in section 3-1-101 except a court of impeachment in the state senate"; in second unnumbered paragraph inserted "municipal court judge or city court judge"; in paragraph 2 inserted "or any attorney or member of a firm of attorneys of record for a party" and before "degree" substituted "fourth" for "sixth"; in paragraph 3 inserted "sitting in a case on appeal" and "as a judge in the lower court"; and made minor changes in phraseology and punctuation.

Case Notes

Judge Not Required to Recuse Self — Claim Untimely — No Valid Claim of Personal Bias or Prejudice: The defendant argued for the first time on appeal that a District Court Judge should have recused himself from a case because he ruled on matters in a related guardianship and conservatorship proceeding. The defendant claimed that the same issues were dispositive of the defendant's guilt in the criminal case. The defendant further asserted that the judge had personal knowledge of the facts in dispute, had expressed bias against the defendant, and had presided as a judge in a guardianship proceeding that involved a matter at the heart of the state's case against the defendant. The defendant argued that his disqualification claim was not untimely because it was based on the judge's bias or prejudice and because the defendant was unaware of the judge's involvement in the prior proceedings until after the defendant's criminal proceedings concluded. The Supreme Court disagreed with the defendant, reasoning that if judges had to recuse themselves from every such case, they could not, as a practical matter, fulfill their duty to be available to decide matters that come before the courts. Because the defendant's disqualification claim was untimely, because he did not establish a valid claim of personal bias or prejudice, and because he did not raise a colorable claim that the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned, the Supreme Court concluded that the defendant's request for a disqualification hearing lacked merit and was not actionable under Rule 2.12(A) of the Code of Judicial Conduct. St. v. Strang, 2017 MT 217, 388 Mont. 428, 401 P.3d 690.

Judge Who Previously Served as Counsel in Case — Recusal Required — Remanded for Hearing Before Different Judge: A mother appealed the termination of her parental rights by a judge who had earlier served as counsel for the guardian ad litem in the same case. She argued that the judge should have recused himself under this section. The Supreme Court reversed, agreeing that the judge was required to recuse himself as a matter of law, and remanded the matter for a new hearing on the petition before a different judge. In re B.W.S., 2014 MT 198, 376 Mont. 43, 330 P.3d 467.

Denial of Petition for Postconviction Relief Reversed: The plain language of Rule 2.12 of the Code of Judicial Conduct is more narrow than 3-1-803, and requires recusal when a judge has personal knowledge of the facts as a result of previous representation in a separate and related matter. Bullman v. State, 2014 MT 78, 374 Mont. 323, 321 P.3d 121.

Legislative Referendum to Restructure Supreme Court Elections — Recusal of Nonretiring Judges Not Warranted — Potential for Bias Too Speculative: The Legislature passed a bill to put a referendum on the ballot to change elections for Supreme Court justices from statewide to regional. Prior to the election, citizens from each of the seven proposed regions filed an action against the Secretary of State, seeking a declaratory judgment that the proposed referendum was unconstitutional as well as an injunction to bar the Secretary of State from putting the measure on the ballot. The District Court granted the plaintiffs summary judgment and the state appealed. Seven legislators in favor of the bill, appearing as amici curiae, argued that those Supreme Court justices who were not retiring should recuse themselves from the case. The Supreme Court concluded that recusal was not warranted under Montana statutes, including the Montana Code of Judicial Conduct. Specifically, the Supreme Court ruled that the law presumes honesty and integrity of a justice and that in this case, the mere possibility of a justice running for reelection and being prevented from doing so by passage of the referendum did not constitute a "direct, personal, substantial, and pecuniary" interest that would obligate the justice to recuse himself. Reichert v. St., 2012 MT 111, 365 Mont. 92, 278 P.3d 455.

Failure of Judge to Recuse Based on Prepetition Consultation Not Grounds for Equitable Relief: The wife, following a dissolution proceeding, contended that the judge should have recused herself based on a prepetition consultation with the wife prior to the judge's taking the bench and sought relief under former Rule 60(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). The judge did not recall the consultation and stated that the consultation had no effect on the dissolution proceedings. The Supreme Court found no impropriety and affirmed. The wife could not prove that she was entitled to relief under former Rule 60(b)(2) because the consultation could not be considered newly discovered evidence, nor was the wife entitled to relief under former Rule 60(b)(6) because she was not prevented from presenting her case for reasons of fairness or equity because the judge was never an attorney or counsel in the dissolution proceeding. In re Marriage of Markegard, 2006 MT 111, 332 M 187, 136 P3d 532 (2006), overruling Shultz v. Hooks, 263 M 234, 867 P2d 1110 (1994), to the extent that Shultz states that subsection (3) of this section precludes a judge from sitting on a case in which the judge has rendered services for a person before an action is filed or has acted as a party's attorney in a separate related case.

Judge's Alleged Interest in Outcome of Case — Off-the-Record Discussion — Failure to Recuse or Grant Mistrial Not Error: In a situation in which a judge, upon assuming the bench, referred several cases to other attorneys, including the plaintiff's attorney in this case, on a fee-splitting basis, the judge did not abuse his discretion by not recusing himself or by not granting a motion for mistrial. Defendant failed to demonstrate that the judge had any interest in the outcome of the case or that the judge and plaintiff's attorney had engaged in any wrongdoing. Further, when defendant failed to ask the court to admonish the jury or to question it to determine if anyone overheard off-the-record discussion between counsel and the judge, defendant failed to preserve the right to appeal the issue. Lutz v. Nat'l Crane Corp., 267 M 368, 884 P2d 455, 51 St. Rep. 810 (1994).

Disqualification in Malpractice Action of Judge Who Represented Plaintiff in Underlying Matter: A judge who had represented plaintiff on the underlying guardianship accounting matter prior to the time that the attorney being sued for malpractice began to represent plaintiff as to the accounting should have disqualified himself from presiding over the malpractice action. A judge may preside over a matter involving a former client if the action over which the judge presides involves a matter different from the one as to which the judge represented the client. In this case, the malpractice action is technically a separate action from the underlying accounting proceeding; however, the malpractice action arose from the legal representation in the accounting proceeding. Default judgment for plaintiff for failure of attorney to plead or in any manner appear was reversed and remanded for a ruling, before another judge, on attorney's motion for relief from judgment for excusable neglect. Shultz v. Hooks, 263 M 234, 867 P2d 1110, 51 St. Rep. 34 (1994), overruled in In re Marriage of Markegard, 2006 MT 111, 332 M 187, 136 P3d 532 (2006), to the extent that Shultz states that subsection (3) of this section precludes a judge from sitting on a case in which the judge has rendered services for a person before an action is filed or has acted as a party's attorney in a separate related case.

Judge Involved in Pretrial Negotiations That Ultimately Fail — Disqualification Upon Request: The Supreme Court held that although it approved of the lower court's attempt to mediate a settlement between the parties, the judge should have disqualified himself when requested by one of the parties because the pretrial negotiations ultimately failed. Schellin v. N. Chinook Irrigation Ass'n, 257 M 262, 848 P2d 1043, 50 St. Rep. 260 (1993).

Disqualification Unwarranted but Writ of Supervisory Control Granted Because of Aura of Possible Bias: Defendant mining company sought a writ of supervisory control disqualifying a presiding judge based on the fact that: (1) the judge's son was employed by plaintiff's counsel of record as a legal intern; and (2) the judge knew and associated with the partners of that counsel's law firm on a social basis, in particular at a university football game where he was invited to the firm's stadium box for a drink and conversed only about football. The Supreme Court found these facts insufficient to disqualify the judge under the criteria of this section. However, the court exercised its power of supervisory control under Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., to disqualify the judge because the facts when viewed in light of other circumstances, including the appearance of another attorney from the law firm as a witness and a newspaper article describing the meeting at the football game, rendered the realization of the standard that a judge's conduct should be free from the appearance of impropriety a virtual impossibility. Washington v. Mont. Min. Properties, Inc., 243 M 509, 795 P2d 460, 47 St. Rep. 1366 (1990).

Attorney General's Opinions

When Substitute Justice of the Peace May Be Called — Reliance on Letters of Unavailability: How a substitute Justice of the Peace is selected depends on the reasons for the absence of the sitting Justice of the Peace. If the sitting Justice of the Peace is disqualified pursuant to 3-1-805 or this section, only another Justice of the Peace may be called in and the substitute may not be a person qualified pursuant to 3-10-231(2). If the sitting Justice of the Peace is sick, disabled, or absent, another Justice of the Peace or City Judge may be called in if available or a person may be called in who is qualified pursuant to 3-10-231(2) if another Justice of the Peace or City Judge is not readily available. If the sitting Justice of the Peace is on vacation or in training, the substitute is to be chosen in the same manner as if the sitting Justice of the Peace is sick, disabled, or absent, as long as there is not another Justice of the Peace from the county of the sitting Justice of the Peace. In determining who is available to act as a substitute, the sitting Justice of the Peace may rely on letters from other Justices of the Peace and City Judges that they are unavailable. However, after a reasonable time, the sitting Justice of the Peace should contact those who wrote the letters to determine if they are still unavailable. 48 A.G. Op. 11 (2000). See also 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983), and Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319 (1994).

3-1-804. Substitution of district judges.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Substituted current (1)(b) and (1)(c) for former (1)(b) that read: "(b) In a criminal action; a child abuse and neglect proceeding under Title 41, chapter 3; a youth court act proceeding under Title 41, chapter 5; or a mental health commitment proceeding under Title 53, chapter 21, part 1, a motion for substitution by the prosecution or the state must be filed within 10 calendar days after the district judge is assigned pursuant to subsection (2)(a). A motion for substitution by the defendant, parent, youth, or respondent must be filed within 10 calendar days after the defendant, parent, youth, or respondent makes an initial appearance in the district court"; substituted current (3) for former (3) that read: "(3) In civil cases, the motion for substitution is not effective for any purpose unless the filing fee for a motion for substitution required by 25-1-201 is paid to the clerk of the district court. No filing fee is required in criminal cases or by parties who have qualified for representation at public expense"; in (9) substituted "parties to proceed" for "parties to the proceeding"; in (12) at end substituted "remanded for sentencing" for "remanded for resentencing"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

2009 Amendment: In first sentence inserted last clause concerning a judge supervising water distribution including supervising water commissioners; in (1), deleted former first sentence that read: "A motion for substitution of a district judge may be made by any party to a proceeding only in the manner set forth herein." and in first sentence at beginning deleted "In a civil or criminal case"; inserted (1)(a) and (1)(b) concerning motion for substitution; inserted (2)(a) concerning stamping of initial pleading; inserted (3) concerning payment of filing fee; inserted (4) concerning untimely motion; in (5) at end, substituted "except as provided in subsection (10)" for "and shall call in another judge" and deleted former second sentence that read: "However, a resident district judge who has previously been substituted from the case may agree to set the calendar, draw a jury, conduct all routine matters including arraignments, preliminary pretrial conferences in civil cases, and other matters which do not go to the merits of the case, if the judge in jurisdiction authorizes the same."; in (6) deleted former third sentence that read: "It shall be the duty of the clerk of court to stamp the name of the judge to whom the case is assigned on the face of the initial pleading, complaint, order to show cause, or information, and all copies thereof."; substituted (7) concerning assumption of jurisdiction for former text that read: "When a judge is assigned to a cause for 30 consecutive days after service of a summons, or 10 consecutive days after service of an order to show cause, information or other initiating document, and no motion for substitution of judge has been filed within said time period, the plaintiff or the party filing the order, information or other initiating document, and the party upon whom service has been made shall no longer have a right of substitution. Any party named in a summons who is subsequently served shall have 30 consecutive days after such service in which to move for a substitution of judge. Any person subsequently served in connection with an order to show cause, information or other initiating document, shall have 10 consecutive days after such service in which to move for a substitution of judge."; in (8) near beginning substituted "recuses" for "removes", near middle after "jurisdiction" substituted "in any action" for "of the cause by virtue of the internal operating rules of a multi-judge court", and at end of second sentence inserted "from the date of service of notice or other document identifying the new district judge"; substituted (9) concerning restriction on joined or intervening parties for former text that read: "After the time period shall have run as to the original parties to the proceeding, no party who is joined or intervenes thereafter shall have any right of substitution, except that one third party defendant who is not an original party in any pending case may have a right of one substitution within 30 consecutive days after the service upon the third party defendant of a third party complaint."; deleted former (d) through (f) that read: "(d) The motion for substitution shall not be effective for any purpose unless a filing fee is paid to the clerk of the district court in the amount set by law. No filing fee is required by law in criminal cases.

(e) Any motion for substitution which is not timely filed is void for all purposes. The judge for whom substitution is sought shall have jurisdiction to determine timeliness, and if the motion for substitution is untimely, shall make an order declaring the motion void.

(f) When a new judge has accepted jurisdiction, the clerk of court shall mail a copy of the assumption of jurisdiction to the original judge and to each attorney or party of record. The certificate of service shall be attached to the assumption of jurisdiction form in the court file."; inserted (10) concerning setting calendar, calling jury, and all routine matters; in (11) inserted second sentence concerning time for filing motion and paying fee; in (12) in second sentence after "fee" deleted "in civil cases" and after "days after" deleted "a new trial has been ordered by the district court or after"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1995 Amendment: In (1)(c), in three places, substituted reference to 30 consecutive days for reference to 20 consecutive days. Amendment effective June 1, 1995.

1994 Amendment: In (1)(c), in first sentence after "10", inserted "consecutive" and after "time period" inserted remainder of sentence concerning no longer having right of substitution, inserted second sentence concerning party named in summons, inserted third sentence concerning 10-day period for subsequently served person, and in last sentence, after "20", inserted "consecutive". Amendment effective February 1, 1995.

1989 Amendment: By Supreme Court order dated November 20, 1989, effective on that date, in (1)(a), at end of motion form, substituted "case" for "cause" and in first sentence of last paragraph inserted "and the first judge in jurisdiction, if there has already been a substitution"; in (1)(b) inserted second sentence relating to adherence to internal operating rules in multi-judge court; and made minor change in grammar.

1987 Amendment: In opening paragraph inserted "it does not . . . Workers' Compensation Court judge"; in second paragraph of paragraph 1(a) inserted "or to decide legal issues therein", after "including arraignments" deleted "omnibus hearings in criminal cases", inserted "in civil cases", and at end substituted reference to judge in jurisdiction for reference to sitting judge; in paragraph 1(c) inserted "or herself, or a new judge . . . multi-judge court", inserted "in the cause by the moving party", and inserted exception at end relating to right of one substitution by a third party defendant who is not an original party; in paragraph 1(d), at end, substituted "No filing fee is required by law in criminal cases" for "This filing fee is waived in criminal cases where the defendant has received a court-appointed counsel or in civil cases where there has been an affidavit and order waiving filing fees"; in paragraph 1(e) substituted "for whom substitution . . . is untimely" for "having jurisdiction"; in paragraph 1(g) substituted present language regarding substitution of judge for former language that read: "When a new trial is ordered in any case, whether by order of the district court or the supreme court, each adverse party shall be entitled to one additional motion for substitution of judge in the manner provided herein. Such motion must be filed, with the required filing fee, within twenty (20) days after a new trial has been ordered by the district court or after the remittitur has been filed with the district court clerk. No right of further substitution shall arise in cases remanded by the supreme court which call for additional hearings, but not a new trial"; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Case Notes

District Court's Failure to Comply With Notice — No Violation of Due Process — Plaintiffs Had Actual Notice: The plaintiffs argued that the District Court did not provide them with proper notice of a retired judge's assumption of jurisdiction, in violation of both 3-1-804 and their constitutional right to due process, and that the retired judge therefore should have granted their motion for substitution. On appeal, the Supreme Court determined that the District Court failed to comply with either 3-1-804 or the Chief Justice's order by not serving on the plaintiffs' counsel notice of the retired judge's assumption of jurisdiction when the order was issued. However, the Supreme Court reasoned that this procedural irregularity did not prejudice the plaintiffs because they had actual notice of the retired judge's involvement in the case. The plaintiffs could not reasonably have concluded, based on these facts, that anyone other than the retired judge presided over their case. The court record at all relevant times clearly identified the retired judge as the presiding judge, and no other judge participated in any hearing or entered any rulings. The purpose of the notice rule in 3-1-804 is to ensure that parties are informed when a new judge assumes jurisdiction. As applied, the District Court's failure to comply with 3-1-804 did not prejudice the plaintiffs, because the plaintiffs had actual notice when the retired judge assumed jurisdiction in the case. Absent prejudice, the Supreme Court would not disturb the District Court's denial of the plaintiffs' motion for substitution. Labair v. Carey, 2017 MT 286, 389 Mont. 366, 405 P.3d 1284.

Last-Minute Motion to Recuse Denied: At the request of an elderly woman's guardian and co-conservators, the District Court granted a preliminary injunction enjoining two of her children from engaging in activities that were believed to be detrimental to her health. One of the children, who was an attorney and representing herself pro se, later requested that the District Court judge recuse himself. She alleged that the judge had violated Rule 2.12 of the Montana Rules of Judicial Conduct because of his association with the co-conservator. The District Court denied her motion and she appealed to the Supreme Court. The court affirmed, noting that the defendant had failed to file a requisite affidavit alleging bias or prejudice in support of her request. In re Guardianship and Conservatorship of A.M.M., 2016 MT 213, 384 Mont. 413, 380 P.3d 736.

Appointed Retired Judge Subject to Substitution Under 3-1-804: The plaintiff filed a lawsuit in Lake County. The defendant moved for substitution under 3-1-804 and a second judge assumed jurisdiction. The second judge then requested a retired District Court Judge to preside over the case, who was appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. The plaintiff then moved to substitute the retired judge under 3-1-804. The judges then issued an order returning jurisdiction to the original judge or the Chief Justice. The petitioner sought supervisory control, arguing that 3-1-804 does not apply to sitting retired judges. The Supreme Court held that specific assignments of retired District Judges under 19-5-103 are contemplated by the language of 3-1-804. Cushman v. 20th Judicial District Court, 2015 MT 311, 381 Mont. 324, 360 P.3d 492.

Substitution of Judge Not Appropriate After Case Remanded for Additional Findings — Mining Claim: In an action regarding a disputed mining claim, the District Court granted summary judgment and granted an injunction. The Supreme Court remanded, concluding that the lower court had not made sufficient findings to support the granting of the injunction and to permit appellate review. A party subsequently moved for substitution of the judge under 3-1-804. The District Court denied the motion for substitution because the Supreme Court had not reversed the District Court's prior determination. The Supreme Court agreed, holding that its remand did not adjudicate all claims of the parties and did not address the merits of the injunction itself. As a result, the motion for substitution was improper. Mines Mgmt. Inc. v. Fus, 2014 MT 256, 376 Mont. 375, 334 P.3d 929.

Informal Probate Not Civil Action — Motion to Substitute Judge Premature: The daughter of the decedent was appointed the personal representative and her application for an informal probate was accepted by the clerk of the court. Her brother's attorney moved for substitution of the judge and subsequently moved for supervised administration of the probate. The Supreme Court held that an informal probate is not a civil action because it is not subject to the jurisdiction of a District Court. After a probate is designated as subject to supervised administration, the probate is subject to the District Court's jurisdiction and is a civil action. The Supreme Court ruled that the brother's attorney's motion to substitute the judge was untimely as it was premature and that it should have been filed after the probate became subject to supervised administration. In re Estate of Greene, 2013 MT 174, 370 Mont. 490, 305 P.3d 52.

Motion for Substitution — Deadline Triggered When Informal Probate Proceeding Converted to Formal Proceeding: When an informal probate proceeding is converted to a formal probate proceeding, the 30-day deadline for filing a motion for substitution of a judge is triggered on the date the petition for formal probate is filed. The District Court correctly concluded that the motion for substitution was untimely, but it wrongly concluded that the 30-day deadline was triggered on the date that notice of informal probate was issued to the heirs and devisees. In re Estate of Quirin, 2013 MT 231, 371 Mont. 284, 309 P.3d 975, following In re Estate of Greene, 2013 MT 174, 370 Mont. 490, 305 P.3d 52.

Unnamed Class Member Not Adverse Party — No Substitution: In a class action lawsuit, an unnamed class member is not an adverse party for the purposes of substituting a District Court judge. Pallister v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Mont., 2013 MT 149, 370 Mont. 335, 302 P.3d 106.

Abuse and Neglect Cases — "Initial Appearance" for Purposes of Filing Motion to Substitute — Show Cause Hearing — Dismissal of Motion to Substitute as Untimely Reversed: A parent was served with a show cause order and notice of show cause hearing regarding abuse and neglect of her child. Two days later, a public defender filed a notice of appearance on her behalf. The parent filed a motion to substitute the District Court judge 1 day before the show cause hearing, but more than 10 days after the notice of appearance of counsel had been filed. The District Court denied her motion as untimely, reasoning that the parent had 10 days from counsel's appearance to file her motion. Citing D.H. v. Fourth Judicial District Court, 2012 MT 106, 365 Mont. 82, 278 P.3d 1010, as controlling, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court's denial of the motion.

For purposes of filing a motion to substitute the judge in an abuse and neglect case, a parent's "initial appearance" is the show cause hearing. A.C. v. 10th Judicial District Court, 2012 MT 110, 365 Mont. 87, 278 P.3d 1013.

Appeal on the Record From Justice's Court — No Right to Substitute District Judge: The defendant filed a notice of appeal of her guilty plea in Justice's Court. She then filed a motion to substitute the District Court judge before whom her appeal would be heard. The District Court denied the motion to substitute as untimely. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that 3-1-804 does not grant a defendant the right to substitute a District Court judge on an appeal from a Justice's Court of record. D.H. v. Fourth Judicial District Court, 2012 MT 106, 365 Mont. 82, 278 P.3d 1010.

"Initial Appearance" for Purposes of Filing Motion to Substitute — Youth's First Appearance — Dismissal of Motion to Substitute Judge as Untimely Reversed: A youth who was charged as a delinquent youth filed a motion to substitute the District Court judge pursuant to 3-1-804, which requires a motion to substitute be filed within 10 days of the youth's "initial appearance". The District Court denied the motion to substitute, ruling that it had not been filed within 10 days of the youth's detention hearing and therefore was untimely. The District Court determined that a youth's detention hearing constitutes the youth's initial appearance. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court, concluding that a detention hearing is not a youth's initial appearance because the hearing is to establish whether the state may charge the youth as a delinquent in the first place. Rather, the Supreme Court concluded that a youth's "first appearance," which is referred to in the Montana Youth Court Act and is held after a detention hearing, serves as a youth's "initial appearance" for purposes of filing a motion to substitute the District Court judge. D.H. v. Fourth Judicial District Court, 2012 MT 106, 365 Mont. 82, 278 P.3d 1010.

Motion to Transfer Case From Tribal Court to District Court Dismissed — Order to File New Complaint With District Court — Motion to Substitute Judge Untimely Filed: After the plaintiff filed a complaint in tribal court and a federal court concluded that the tribal court lacked jurisdiction, the plaintiff attempted to transfer her case to a District Court instead of filing a new complaint. The defendants moved to dismiss the case, which the District Court granted. The plaintiff then filed a new complaint in District Court along with a motion to substitute the judge. The District Court denied the motion to substitute as untimely and the plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court ruled that the 30-day timeframe for moving to substitute the judge started on the day the plaintiff filed a pleading to transfer her case from tribal court to the District Court, and not on the day she filed her new complaint. The Supreme Court concluded that the plaintiff could not reset the 30-day deadline by filing a new complaint and affirmed the District Court's denial of the motion for substitution of the judge as untimely. LaPlante v. Town Pump, Inc., 2012 MT 63, 364 Mont. 323, 274 P.3d 724.

Postconviction Proceedings — Recusal of Trial Judge — Right to Substitute Judge Available: A criminal defendant filed a petition for postconviction relief. The judge who presided over his trial and sentencing recused herself and the matter was transferred to another judge. The state filed a motion to substitute the new judge under 3-1-804, which was granted. The defendant appealed and argued that under 46-21-101, the right to substitute a judge does not apply to postconviction proceedings. After providing an extensive and entertaining history on the origins of the right to substitute a judge in civil cases in Montana, the Supreme Court agreed that a petition for postconviction relief must be filed in the same court that sentenced the defendant. However, the court also concluded that if that judge then recuses herself, the parties are entitled to substitute the new judge pursuant to 3-1-804. Patrick v. St., 2011 MT 169, 361 Mont. 204, 257 P.3d 365.

No Right to Substitution of Judge on Remand From Ruling on Writ of Supervisory Control: Defendant filed a writ of supervisory control on the issue of whether the District Court should allow defendant to respond to a guardian ad litem's motion for a protective order regarding defendant's child's medical records. The Supreme Court agreed to exercise supervisory control and remanded the case to the District Court with the limited instruction that defendant be allowed to respond to the guardian ad litem's motion. Immediately upon remand, defendant moved for a substitution of the District Court Judge. The motion was denied and defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed after holding that 3-1-804 did not apply. The statute allows each party to move for substitution of the judge when a case is remanded to the District Court on appeal, but defendant's petition for a writ of supervisory control was not an appeal of a District Court judgment or order that was reversed and remanded by the Supreme Court. Therefore, the criteria for a motion for a substitute judge were not met and the District Court did not err in denying the motion. Kulstad v. Maniaci, 2009 MT 403, 353 M 467, 221 P3d 127 (2009).

No Authority for District Judge to Substitute for Workers' Compensation Court Judge Upon Recusal: There is no statutory authority for a District Court Judge to substitute for a Workers' Compensation Court Judge upon recusal, nor does an administrative rule, of itself, provide a source of authority by which a District Court Judge may assume jurisdiction over a case in Workers' Compensation Court. Absent that authority, a District Court Judge who assumed jurisdiction over a workers' compensation case had no more authority than any member of the general public, and all orders issued by the District Court Judge in the case were of no legal effect. Pinnow v. Mont. St. Fund, 2007 MT 332, 340 M 217, 172 P3d 1273 (2007).

Sentencing Judge to Preside Over Postconviction Proceedings: A District Court judge was substituted for the original judge early in Jordan's criminal proceedings and ultimately sentenced Jordan. When Jordan petitioned for postconviction relief, the original judge handled the proceedings and dismissed Jordan's petition. The Supreme Court held that the sentencing judge should preside over postconviction proceedings. Substitution of a trial judge does not suddenly evaporate in subsequent postconviction proceedings involving the same parties, witnesses, and factual background as the underlying case from which a judge was previously removed. In this case, the original judge's substitution in Jordan's criminal action also prevented the original judge from presiding over Jordan's postconviction proceedings. The postconviction claim was remanded for consideration by the sentencing judge. Jordan v. St., 2007 MT 165, 338 M 113, 162 P3d 863 (2007), following Coleman v. St., 194 M 428, 633 P2d 624 (1981).

Validity of Search Warrant Issued by Previously Substituted Judge: A search warrant was issued by a judge who had previously been substituted from the case. Defendant contended that the warrant was void ab initio because the substituted judge had no jurisdiction to issue the warrant. The Supreme Court disagreed. Pursuant to 46-5-220, a search warrant may be issued by any District Judge within the state. The judge therefore had general authority to issue the warrant, and the warrant was not void. St. v. Dasen, 2007 MT 87, 337 M 74, 155 P3d 1282 (2007), distinguishing Erickson v. Hart, 231 M 7, 750 P2d 1089 (1988), and St. v. Vickers, 1998 MT 201, 290 M 356, 964 P2d 756 (1998).

Right to Substitute Judge Not Considered Structural Issue of Constitutional Dimension — No Ineffective Assistance of Trial Counsel for Failure to Move for Automatic Substitution of Trial Judge: In a petition for postconviction relief, Swan contended that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to move for an automatic substitution of the trial judge and that this structural error entitled Swan to a new trial. However, structural error is typically of constitutional dimensions, precedes the trial, and undermines the fairness of the entire trial proceeding. Although lack of an impartial judge would be considered a structural error, failure to exercise the statutory right to substitute a trial judge is not of constitutional dimension and is not presumed prejudicial. Having failed to establish that counsel's failure to timely move for an automatic substitution of the trial judge was an error of constitutional dimension, Swan's postconviction argument failed. Swan v. St., 2006 MT 39, 331 M 188, 130 P3d 606 (2006), following St. v. Peplow, 2001 MT 253, 307 M 172, 36 P3d 922 (2001).

No Entitlement to New Judge on Resentencing: Although a disparity exists in law regarding whether a defendant is entitled to a new judge on remand for resentencing, the disparity issue was not briefed, and the Supreme Court declined to address it. Nevertheless, defendant in this case was not entitled to a new judge on remand under either standard, so that request was denied. St. v. Mason, 2003 MT 371, 319 M 117, 82 P3d 903 (2003).

Period for Substitution of Judge in Criminal Cases to Run From Time of Personal Service of Information on Defendant: On September 4, while incarcerated, Dusek was served by the state with a criminal information, supporting affidavit, and motion and order for leave to file direct and was arraigned on the same day. On September 9, Dusek filed for substitution of judge, but the motion was denied because the District Court concluded that both the state and Dusek had been notified of which judge had been assigned to the case on August 26, when the date for the arraignment was set, and on August 27, when the bail hearing was set. Under that rationale, Dusek's motion on September 9 was beyond the 10-day limit for requesting substitution pursuant to this section. The Supreme Court concluded that the District Court was proceeding under a mistake of law because the plain meaning of this section provides that the right of substitution extends for 10 days after service of an order to show cause, information, or other initiating document, not from the time that a defendant receives notice of assignment of a judge. Further, service means personal service upon a defendant at the instigation of the state, so service cannot be satisfied by a defendant obtaining a copy of the information through other means such as discovery. If, as in this case, personal service does not occur until arraignment, then the 10-day period for substitution does not begin to run until the arraignment. State ex rel. Dusek v. District Court, 2003 MT 303, 318 M 166, 79 P3d 292 (2003).

Supervisory Control Accepted When District Court Proceeding Under Mistake of Law Regarding Time Period for Substitution of Judge: The exercise of supervisory control was appropriate when the District Court was proceeding under a mistake of law regarding the period of time within which a motion must be filed for substitution of a judge pursuant to this section. State ex rel. Dusek v. District Court, 2003 MT 303, 318 M 166, 79 P3d 292 (2003).

Petition for Postconviction Relief Required to Be Filed in Sentencing Court — General Provisions Regarding Substitution of Judge Inapplicable in Postconviction Proceedings: Harris moved to substitute the judge in a proceeding for postconviction relief, citing this section, which allows each adverse party one substitution of a District Judge in civil and criminal proceedings. The motion was denied, and Harris appealed. The Supreme Court held that the general provisions of this part do not apply to the substitution of a District Judge in postconviction proceedings because the more specific provisions of 46-21-101 require that petitions for postconviction relief be filed in the court that imposed the sentence. Harris v. St., 2003 MT 258, 317 M 406, 77 P3d 272 (2003).

Motion to Modify Child Custody Not Considered New Proceeding Vesting New Right to Substitute Judge: More than 19 months after commencement of a dissolution action, the father petitioned to modify the parenting plan, at which point the mother moved for substitution of the presiding judge, contending that the petition for modification was a new action entitling her to a change of venue to her latest county of residence. The District Court denied the substitution motion, and the Supreme Court affirmed. A motion to modify child custody is not considered the commencement of a new proceeding and cannot result in the vesting of a new right to substitute a District Court Judge. In re Marriage of Toavs, 2002 MT 230, 311 M 455, 56 P3d 356 (2002).

Joined or Substituted Party Denied Substitution Without Cause Once Thirty-Day Deadline for Original Parties to Substitute Judge Has Passed: Mattson filed a complaint against Montana Power Co. and, more than 30 days following service, moved without objection to join PPL Montana, LLC (PPL), as an additional party defendant. PPL moved to substitute the District Court Judge without cause, but the motion was denied, so PPL appealed, citing Challinor v. Glacier Nat'l Bank, 266 M 396, 880 P2d 1327 (1994), for the proposition that this section entitles each party in a civil or criminal suit to one judicial substitution and contending that the statutory exclusion from the right of substitution pertained only to voluntary intervenors. The Supreme Court affirmed, clarifying Challinor and Taylor v. Matejovsky, 261 M 514, 863 P2d 1022 (1993), to the extent that those cases infer that each adverse party is entitled to one substitution without cause. This section effectively affords an original party 30 days from service of summons to move for substitution, but once the time has expired for the original parties to move for substitution, subsequently joined parties may not move for substitution without objection. Mattson v. Mont. Power Co., 2002 MT 113, 309 M 506, 48 P3d 34 (2002).

Limitation on Right of Subsequently Joined Party to Substitute Judge Without Cause Not Violative of Substantive Due Process: Mattson filed a complaint against Montana Power Co. and, more than 30 days following service, moved without objection to join PPL Montana, LLC (PPL), as an additional party defendant. PPL moved to substitute the District Court Judge without cause, but the motion was denied. PPL contended that this section violated substantive due process by distinguishing between three classes of parties—original parties, subsequently joined parties and intervenors, and third-party defendants—and that no rational basis existed for treating the three classes of parties differently for purposes of substituting a District Court Judge without cause. The Supreme Court disagreed and affirmed. Because the state may not use its power to take unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious action against an individual, a statute must be reasonably related to a permissible government objective in order to satisfy the guarantees of substantive due process. In this case, there is not only a rational basis for distinguishing the classes, but responsible judicial administration requires doing so. Subsequently joined parties and intervenors often appear at a much later stage of the proceedings, and to allow a joined or substituted defendant to remove the presiding judge without cause, after the judge has presided over the case for what could be a substantial period, would disrupt the continuity of litigation, precipitate delay, cause duplication of effort, and waste time and expense while providing little corresponding benefit. The right of a subsequently joined party to move for substitution for cause is preserved under 3-1-805. Mattson v. Mont. Power Co., 2002 MT 113, 309 M 506, 48 P3d 34 (2002), followed in Eisenhart v. Puffer, 2008 MT 58, 341 M 508, 178 P3d 139 (2008).

No Error in Denial of Request for Substitution of Judge Following Remand: Defendants appealed a District Court summary judgment, and the Supreme Court concluded that the trial court ruling was not appealable, dismissed the appeal without prejudice, ordered the District Court to vacate its prior findings, conclusions, and order, and remanded the matter to the District Court for an evidentiary hearing pursuant to the parties' stipulation. On remand, defendants moved for substitution of the judge. The District Court concluded that the Supreme Court's dismissal was not a reversal of the summary judgment ruling, so defendants were not entitled to substitution of the judge. Defendants appealed, contending that the remand effectively set aside the District Court's prior judgment, allowing substitution of the judge under this section. The Supreme Court held that its orders did not involve any judgment on the merits or reverse the summary judgment ruling, thus there was no basis for defendants to seek substitution of the District Court Judge, and the District Court did not err in denying the request for substitution. Williams v. Schwager, 2002 MT 107, 309 M 455, 47 P3d 839 (2002).

Cases Involving Multiple Parties — Showing of Adversity Required to Trigger Independent Right of Substitution: To invoke the right of substitution in cases involving multiple parties, the moving party must demonstrate adversity with a coparty to the action that has already exercised its right of substitution. To conclude otherwise based on the language in subsection (1)(c) of this section, which refers to the right of any party to substitute a judge, would effectively nullify the adversity requirement. The adversity requirement must be satisfied before reaching the classification and timeliness requirements in subsection (1)(c) of this section. The determination of adversity is based solely on the allegations set forth in the complaint. In the present case, rather than demonstrating adversity between the defendants, the complaint simply alleged that all the defendants were privy to and part of a strategy to transfer corporate assets without shareholder approval, which indicated that plaintiffs lumped all defendants together for purposes of culpability without demonstrating adversity. Although the District Court used the term "hostility" rather than "adversity", the court nevertheless properly interpreted this section in requiring adversity among the codefendants in order for the right of substitution to be exercised. Goldman Sachs Group, Inc. v. District Court, 2002 MT 83, 309 M 287, 46 P3d 606 (2002). See also Ratliff v. Pearson, 2011 MT 241, 362 Mont. 163, 261 P.3d 1037, in which the Supreme Court, relying on Goldman Sachs and Eisenhart v. Puffer, 2008 MT 58, 341 Mont. 508, 178 P.3d 139, held that the District Court erred in denying a motion by one of the defendants to substitute a judge because the defendants qualified as adverse parties under 3-1-804(1).

Right of Substitution in Cases Involving Multiple Parties — Supervisory Control Appropriate: The question of whether a District Court properly interpreted this section, to require a defendant to demonstrate its adversity to another defendant that had already exercised its right of substitution in order to invoke an independent right of substitution, was an issue of both first impression and statewide importance. Based on these extraordinary circumstances and a particular need to keep an injustice from occurring, the Supreme Court accepted supervisory control to address the issue. The District Court's interpretation was held to be proper. Goldman Sachs Group, Inc. v. District Court, 2002 MT 83, 309 M 287, 46 P3d 606 (2002).

Time Limits Applicable to Request for Substitution of District Judge: Under this section, a party who files an initiating document has 10 consecutive days after service of that document to move for substitution of the presiding judge, but a party who is served with a summons has 30 consecutive days thereafter to move for substitution of the presiding judge. If no motion for substitution has been filed within the time period applicable to the particular party, that party no longer has a right of substitution. In re Marriage of Archibald, 1999 MT 258, 297 M 20, 993 P2d 653, 56 St. Rep. 1030 (1999).

Ineffective Assistance Claims Denied — No Prejudice Shown Under Strickland Test: Applying the Strickland test for determining effectiveness of counsel, the Supreme Court dismissed defendant's claims that he was ineffectively represented at trial, during the penalty phase proceedings, and during the course of direct appeal, including claims based on: (1) failure to object to prosecutor's statements that defendant was intoxicated at the time of the crime, when that was in fact true, and to object to an intoxication instruction that was based on statutory language; (2) failure to object to closing arguments during which the prosecutor portrayed himself as the victim and narrated in the first person (following U.S. v. Necoechea, 986 F2d 1273 (9th Cir. 1993)); (3) failure to object to the lack of corroborating evidence regarding a witness's testimony when the objection lacked merit and would have been properly overruled (following St. v. Rodgers, 257 M 413, 849 P2d 1028 (1993)); (4) failure to investigate and pursue a mental defect defense after defendant's own psychologist of choice found him capable of going to trial (see Harris v. Vasquez, 949 F2d 1497 (9th Cir. 1990)); (5) failure to move for a substitute judge when there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have differed with another judge presiding; (6) failure to request a change of venue absent evidence of juror bias and failure to adequately voir dire the jury when there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have differed had voir dire been conducted more thoroughly; (7) ineffectiveness in investigating a witness's background when counsel's investigation fell within the wide range of competent assistance; (8) failure to investigate defendant's suicide attempt; (9) failure to object to certain jury instructions allowing inference of the existence of the requisite mental state from the acts of the accused (following St. v. Cowan, 260 M 510, 861 P2d 884 (1993)); (10) failure to object to instructions setting out the elements of aggravated kidnapping when defendant did not specify which of the alternatives in the instruction were objectionable (following Schad v. Ariz., 501 US 624, 115 L Ed 2d 555, 111 S Ct 2491 (1991)); (11) failure to object to the absence of Native Americans on the jury when, given recent census data, counsel could not have demonstrated that Native Americans were underrepresented on the panel; and (12) failure to object to the presence of armed officers in the courtroom (following Holbrook v. Flynn, 475 US 560, 89 L Ed 2d 525, 106 S Ct 1340 (1986)). Kills On Top v. St., 273 M 32, 901 P2d 1368, 52 St. Rep. 608 (1995).

Authority of Replacement Judge to Reset Execution Date: McKenzie argued that the judge presiding over the resetting of McKenzie's execution date had no jurisdiction to do so because the original presiding judge or that judge's successor did not enter an order conferring jurisdiction. However, 46-19-103 rather than this section controls in this situation. Section 46-19-103 reposes the act of setting the execution date and signing the death warrant in the court in which the defendant was sentenced. Because both judges preside in the same district, resetting of the execution by the subsequent judge was proper and the requirement in this section, which relates to the substitution of District Court Judges, did not apply. St. v. McKenzie, 271 M 32, 894 P2d 289, 52 St. Rep. 312 (1995).

Judge May Preside Over Second Capital Case When Judge Sentenced Defendant to Death in Previous Case: Langford, imprisoned on a capital offense and sentenced to death, was tried for a second capital offense stemming from a homicide during a prison riot. Langford alleged that the trial judge had erred in not recusing himself since he had previously sentenced Langford to death in an unrelated case. The Supreme Court held that Langford waived his right to one substitution by failing to file in time, that he had failed to file his affidavit alleging bias in time, and that there was no appearance of impropriety for a trial judge to preside over a potential capital case when the judge had previously sentenced the defendant to death in an unrelated case. St. v. Langford, 267 M 95, 882 P2d 490, 51 St. Rep. 962 (1994), distinguishing Shields v. Thunem, 220 M 449, 716 P2d 217 (1986).

No Waiver of Judicial Substitution Until Completion of Service of Process: Each adverse party in a civil or criminal case is entitled to one substitution of a District Court Judge. Under this section, a motion for substitution must be brought within 20 consecutive days after service of summons. The judge for whom substitution is sought has jurisdiction to determine timeliness, and if the motion is untimely, that judge shall issue an order declaring the motion void. While the time period for exercising the right of substitution is not clear with regard to multiple defendants, the Supreme Court held that the phrase "after service of summons" contemplates that the time should run from the completion of service of process. The right of any party to move for judicial substitution, whether the party is one named in the original complaint or in any complaint amended without order of the court, is not waived until a judge is assigned to a cause for 20 consecutive days after all of the defendants have been served. Consequently, a motion made by any party within 20 days after completion of service of process is timely. Thus, it was error for a District Court to dismiss a motion for substitution made 3 days after summons was served on a codefendant, and because the court was without jurisdiction to act on the merits of the case after the timely filing of the motion, subsequent court actions were vacated and the case remanded for a new hearing after substitution of the judge. Challinor v. Glacier Nat'l Bank, 266 M 396, 880 P2d 1327, 51 St. Rep. 863 (1994), clarified in Mattson v. Mont. Power Co., 2002 MT 113, 309 M 506, 48 P3d 34 (2002), regarding the inference that "each" adverse party, not just an original party, is entitled to one substitution without cause because once the time has expired for the original parties to move for substitution, a subsequently joined party may not move for substitution without objection. In response to Challinor, the Supreme Court recognized that such a time period for substitution could result in misuse in multiple party actions or proceedings and thus adopted an amendment to subsection (1)(c) of this section, effective February 1, 1995. See In re Rules for Disqualification & Substitution of Judges, 51 St. Rep. 1123 (1994).

Timely Substitution — Error in Disallowing Motion: When a motion for substitution of a judge was made within the time allowed and granting of the motion would not have had the effect of causing a violation of the statute in question, it was error for the trial court to disallow exercise of the statutory right to substitution of the judge. Once the motion was timely filed, the judge was without jurisdiction to act on the merits of the case, and a subsequent order by the judge was vacated. Taylor v. Matejovsky, 261 M 514, 863 P2d 1022, 50 St. Rep. 1434 (1993), clarified in Mattson v. Mont. Power Co., 2002 MT 113, 309 M 506, 48 P3d 34 (2002), regarding the inference that "each" adverse party, not just an original party, is entitled to one substitution without cause because once the time has expired for the original parties to move for substitution, a subsequently joined party may not move for substitution without objection.

No Substitution of Judge Upon Remand for Resentencing: This section does not allow for substitution of a District Court Judge when a cause of action is remanded for resentencing. On resentencing, a defendant is not entitled to a new judge or to move for substitution of a sentencing judge. St. v. Willson, 250 M 241, 818 P2d 1199, 48 St. Rep. 907 (1991).

Jurisdiction of Original Judge Retained Following Motion for Substitution — Applicability of 1985 Law: On March 27, 1987, plaintiff moved for a substitution of judge, but the Clerk of Court did not give notice to either the judge or the opposing parties, nor was a notice of substitution filed as required by 3-1-802, the law in effect at the time the motion was filed. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that this section did not apply to the unique circumstances of the case because that statute was not in effect until 3-1-802 was superseded on June 29, 1987. Because the requirements of 3-1-802 were not met, the original judge retained jurisdiction. Also, the judge could not obtain jurisdiction through stipulation of the parties. Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Motion to Reinstate Original Judge Denied: Upon remand of the first case, the defendant moved for substitution of the original judge and the motion was granted in contravention of this section. This section was subsequently amended and applied retroactively to a period commencing before the second judge denied the plaintiff's motion to reinstate the first judge. Under the amended statute, the defendant's motion to remove the first judge was proper. Young v. Flathead County, 241 M 223, 786 P2d 658, 47 St. Rep. 226 (1990).

Timely Motion for Substitution — No Jurisdiction for Order: Defendant timely moved for substitution of a District Judge under 3-1-802 (superseded by 3-1-804 in 1987); therefore, subsequent findings and order by that judge were made without proper jurisdiction. Erickson v. Hart, 231 M 7, 750 P2d 1089, 45 St. Rep. 388 (1988).

2003 Amendment: In an order dated June 19, 2003, the Supreme Court in 1 at beginning of third sentence inserted requirement for affidavit to comply with subsections (a) through (c); at end of second sentence of 1(b) substituted "which can be addressed in an appeal from the final judgment" for "made by the challenged judge and from which an appeal could have been taken"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective June 19, 2003.

1994 Amendment: The Supreme Court, in an order dated January 6, 1994, in (c), after "allege", inserted "facts". Amendment effective January 6, 1994.

1987 Amendment: In opening paragraph inserted reference to City Courts; in paragraph 1, near end, inserted two references to City Court and inserted "presiding in the district of the court involved"; in paragraph 1(a) deleted provisions that the party filing the affidavit must pay a filing fee, that failure to pay the fee rendered the affidavit void, and that the fee was waived in criminal cases in which defendant had court-appointed counsel and in civil cases in which there was an affidavit and order waiving the fee; in paragraph 1(c), after "does not allege", deleted "facts"; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Case Notes

Judge's Orders Vacated After Judicial Disqualification — No Error: The District Court did not err in relying on Rule 2.12 of the Code of Judicial Conduct to vacate a judge's orders issued after the judge should have disqualified himself. Draggin' Y Cattle Co., Inc. v. Junkermier, 2017 MT 125, 387 Mont. 430, 395 P.3d 497.

Last-Minute Motion to Recuse Denied: At the request of an elderly woman's guardian and co-conservators, the District Court granted a preliminary injunction enjoining two of her children from engaging in activities that were believed to be detrimental to her health. One of the children, who was an attorney and representing herself pro se, later requested that the District Court Judge recuse himself. She alleged that the judge had violated Rule 2.12 of the Montana Rules of Judicial Conduct because of his association with the co-conservator. The District Court denied her motion and she appealed to the Supreme Court. The court affirmed, noting that the defendant had failed to file a requisite affidavit alleging bias or prejudice in support of her request. In re Guardianship and Conservatorship of A.M.M., 2016 MT 213, 384 Mont. 413, 380 P.3d 736.

Disqualification Claim Timely Raised for First Time on Appeal: A District Court Judge presided over a hearing questioning the reasonableness of a stipulated settlement at the same time as the reasonableness of his own stipulated settlement was being questioned by his insurer. The issue regarding disqualification was not raised until the appeal because the insurer did not learn of the judge's personal situation until the appellate phase of the case. The Supreme Court held that the insurer did not waive its disqualification claim and that the judge should have disclosed the circumstances surrounding his own stipulated settlement because it could cause his impartiality to be questioned. Draggin' Y Cattle Co., Inc., v. Addink, 2016 MT 98, 383 Mont. 243, 371 P.3d 970.

Denial of Motion to Disqualify Judge in City Court — Interim Order — No Right to Appeal Prior to Judgment: The city of Dillon filed a civil action in city court to recover from the defendant the costs of installing a water meter. After the first judge resigned and the second judge recused himself, the defendant filed a motion to disqualify the third judge; a fourth judge denied the motion and ordered the third judge to maintain jurisdiction. The defendant then filed an appeal in District Court. After the District Court dismissed the appeal, the defendant filed an appeal with the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court also dismissed the appeal, stating that a ruling on a motion to disqualify a city court judge is an interim order and cannot be appealed to the District Court. Dillon v. Warner, 2012 MT 17, 363 Mont. 383, 272 P.3d 41.

Continued Obstruction of Property Settlement Agreement — Refusal to Comply with Court Order — Finding of Contempt Not Error — Award of Attorney Fees Proper: The divorcing parties entered into a property settlement agreement whereby the wife gave up her interest in the parties' two businesses in exchange for a promissory note and the right to request and receive financial information regarding the businesses. After the wife learned that the businesses were failing under the husband's control, the parties agreed that the wife would assume managerial and operational control of the businesses. The husband, however, obstructed the wife's ability to manage the businesses. Even after the District Court issued an order requiring the husband to cooperate with the wife and allow her access to the businesses' records, the husband sold business assets and had vendors pay him individually. Ultimately, the District Court found the husband in contempt and awarded the wife attorney fees. The husband appealed, arguing that the court erred by finding him in contempt and that the judge should have removed himself for bias against the husband. The Supreme Court affirmed, noting that an adverse ruling does not establish bias that would disqualify a judge, and that attorney fees were properly awarded as they were provided for in the property settlement agreement. In re Marriage of Cini, 2011 MT 295, 363 Mont. 1, 266 P.3d 1257.

Right to Substitute Judge Not Considered Structural Issue of Constitutional Dimension — No Ineffective Assistance of Trial Counsel for Failure to Move for Automatic Substitution of Trial Judge: In a petition for postconviction relief, Swan contended that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to move for an automatic substitution of the trial judge and that this structural error entitled Swan to a new trial. However, structural error is typically of constitutional dimensions, precedes the trial, and undermines the fairness of the entire trial proceeding. Although lack of an impartial judge would be considered a structural error, failure to exercise the statutory right to substitute a trial judge is not of constitutional dimension and is not presumed prejudicial. Having failed to establish that counsel's failure to timely move for an automatic substitution of the trial judge was an error of constitutional dimension, Swan's postconviction argument failed. Swan v. St., 2006 MT 39, 331 M 188, 130 P3d 606 (2006), following St. v. Peplow, 2001 MT 253, 307 M 172, 36 P3d 922 (2001).

Limitation on Right of Subsequently Joined Party to Substitute Judge Without Cause Not Violative of Substantive Due Process: Mattson filed a complaint against Montana Power Co. and, more than 30 days following service, moved without objection to join PPL Montana, LLC (PPL), as an additional party defendant. PPL moved to substitute the District Court Judge without cause, but the motion was denied. PPL contended that 3-1-804 violated substantive due process by distinguishing between three classes of parties—original parties, subsequently joined parties and intervenors, and third-party defendants—and that no rational basis existed for treating the three classes of parties differently for purposes of substituting a District Court Judge without cause. The Supreme Court disagreed and affirmed. Because the state may not use its power to take unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious action against an individual, a statute must be reasonably related to a permissible government objective in order to satisfy the guarantees of substantive due process. In this case, there is not only a rational basis for distinguishing the classes, but responsible judicial administration requires doing so. Subsequently joined parties and intervenors often appear at a much later stage of the proceedings, and to allow a joined or substituted defendant to remove the presiding judge without cause, after the judge has presided over the case for what could be a substantial period, would disrupt the continuity of litigation, precipitate delay, cause duplication of effort, and waste time and expense while providing little corresponding benefit. The right of a subsequently joined party to move for substitution for cause is preserved under this section. Mattson v. Mont. Power Co., 2002 MT 113, 309 M 506, 48 P3d 34 (2002), followed in Eisenhart v. Puffer, 2008 MT 58, 341 M 508, 178 P3d 139 (2008).

Denial of Motion to Disqualify Judge Proper Absent Failure to Allege Bias or Prejudice: Plaintiff's attorney moved to disqualify a District Court Judge. The motion was denied, and the court went on to assess sanctions against the attorney for discovery abuses. The attorney contended on appeal that when he filed the motion to dismiss, the court was divested of jurisdiction to order sanctions under this section. The Supreme Court disagreed. Failure to allege bias or prejudice in the motion to dismiss rendered the motion inappropriate and without merit, and denial of the motion was not error. Dambrowski v. Champion Int'l Corp., 2000 MT 149, 300 M 76, 3 P3d 617, 57 St. Rep. 581 (2000).

Judge May Preside Over Second Capital Case When Judge Sentenced Defendant to Death in Previous Case: Langford, imprisoned on a capital offense and sentenced to death, was tried for a second capital offense stemming from a homicide during a prison riot. Langford alleged that the trial judge had erred in not recusing himself since he had previously sentenced Langford to death in an unrelated case. The Supreme Court held that Langford waived his right to one substitution by failing to file in time, that he had failed to file his affidavit alleging bias in time, and that there was no appearance of impropriety for a trial judge to preside over a potential capital case when the judge had previously sentenced the defendant to death in an unrelated case. St. v. Langford, 267 M 95, 882 P2d 490, 51 St. Rep. 962 (1994), distinguishing Shields v. Thunem, 220 M 449, 716 P2d 217 (1986).

Case Remanded to Different Judge to Eliminate Any Question of Impropriety: The wife asked that the District Court Judge be disqualified because a newspaper article criticizing the judge cited his handling of her divorce case. The newspaper had also printed the judge's letter and her letter replying to the article. The Supreme Court held that it did not find it necessary to rule on the disqualification issue but stated that on remand, the case was to be heard by a different judge. In re Marriage of Miller, 239 M 12, 778 P2d 888, 46 St. Rep. 1471 (1989).

Failure to Follow Statutory Procedure — Motion to Disqualify Properly Denied: On the opening day of trial an attorney verbally moved for a District Court Judge to remove himself for cause based on an off-the-record comment by the judge 3 weeks before trial that he was acquainted with the parents of one of the parties 13 years earlier. Failure to follow the procedure outlined in this section, coupled with counsel's failure to act immediately, warranted denial of the motion for disqualification. In re Marriage of Eklund, 236 M 77, 768 P2d 340, 46 St. Rep. 194 (1989).

Motion for Disqualification Not Filed Within Statutory Limit: Under former 3-1-802, defendant claimed he was unable to make a motion to disqualify the District Court Judge because the motion had to be filed not less than 20 days before trial, and defense counsel was substituted at a later date so as to preclude the motion to disqualify. However, while the case was pending, 3-1-802 was superseded by this section, which requires a 30-day filing. The change was effective September 1, 1987. Defense counsel was substituted September 29, 1987, and hearing was set for November 4, 1987. Therefore, counsel had 5 days in which to properly file for disqualification. St. v. Shaver, 233 M 438, 760 P2d 1230, 45 St. Rep. 1617 (1988).

When Substitute Justice of the Peace May Be Called — Reliance on Letters of Unavailability: How a substitute Justice of the Peace is selected depends on the reasons for the absence of the sitting Justice of the Peace. If the sitting Justice of the Peace is disqualified pursuant to 3-1-803 or this section, only another Justice of the Peace may be called in and the substitute may not be a person qualified pursuant to 3-10-231(2). If the sitting Justice of the Peace is sick, disabled, or absent, another Justice of the Peace or City Judge may be called in if available or a person may be called in who is qualified pursuant to 3-10-231(2) if another Justice of the Peace or City Judge is not readily available. If the sitting Justice of the Peace is on vacation or in training, the substitute is to be chosen in the same manner as if the sitting Justice of the Peace is sick, disabled, or absent, as long as there is not another Justice of the Peace from the county of the sitting Justice of the Peace. In determining who is available to act as a substitute, the sitting Justice of the Peace may rely on letters from other Justices of the Peace and City Judges that they are unavailable. However, after a reasonable time, the sitting Justice of the Peace should contact those who wrote the letters to determine if they are still unavailable. 48 A.G. Op. 11 (2000). See also 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983), and Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319 (1994).

Appointment of Judges: The Senate confirmation of an individual appointed by the Governor to the office of District Judge is required before that office may be placed on the ballot for election. 37 A.G. Op. 115 (1978).

3-1-1002. Staggered terms of members.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendment: At beginning of (1) substituted "Members of" for "All original members named to" and after "serve" substituted "staggered" for "until January 1, 1976. Their successors shall serve as follows: (a) The members appointed by the governor shall serve"; deleted (1)(b) and (1)(c) that read: "(b) The attorneys appointed by the supreme court shall serve 2-year terms.

(c) The judge elected shall serve a 2-year term"; and in (2) substituted "A member may not serve more than two full 4-year terms" for "Thereafter all members shall serve terms of 4 years".

Implementation of Staggered Terms: Section 5, Ch. 810, L. 1991, provided: "In order to implement the staggering of terms required in 3-1-1002, the initial appointment of members must be as follows:

(1) the governor shall appoint members to replace the members whose terms expire December 31, 1991, to terms of 1, 2, 3, and 4 years;

(2) the two attorney members appointed by the supreme court whose terms expire December 31, 1994, shall be appointed to a 2-year and a 3-year term, respectively; and

(3) the judicial member elected under 3-1-1001(1)(d)[c] shall serve a 4-year term."

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 810, L. 1991, provided: "The limitation on terms contained in 3-1-1002(2) applies to terms commencing after October 1, 1991."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 377 in (1) substituted first sentence that read: "If an appointment subject to 3-1-1013(1) is confirmed by the senate, the appointee shall serve until the appointee or another person elected at the first general election after confirmation is elected and qualified" for "An appointee confirmed by the senate serves until the next succeeding general election"; inserted (2) and (3) that read: "(2) If an appointment is subject to 3-1-1013(2), the appointee shall serve until the day before the first Monday of January following the first general election after appointment. The candidate elected at that election holds the office for the full term to which elected or for the remainder of the unexpired term, as applicable.

(3) If an incumbent judge or justice files for election to the office to which the judge or justice was elected or appointed and no other candidate files for election to that office, the name of the incumbent must nevertheless be placed on the general election ballot to allow voters of the district or state to approve or reject the incumbent. If an incumbent is rejected at an election for approval or rejection, the incumbent shall serve until the day before the first Monday of January following the election, at which time the office is vacant and another selection and appointment must be made"; and made minor changes in style. Term of Office Unaffected by Tenure of Appointed Officer: The fact that an appointed officer's tenure necessarily extends beyond the end of a statutory term or impinges on the following term does not lengthen or shorten the term of office. Tenure of Judge Nominated When Senate Not in Session — Succession in Cases of Overlapping Terms: When the tenure of an individual nominated by the Governor to fill a vacancy in the office of District Court Judge runs into a next term of office, this fact does not shorten the length of the next term. At the next general election for District Court Judge, a successor is elected to serve the remainder of the unexpired term of office. (See 1993 amendment.) 42 A.G. Op. 31 (1987).

Term of Judge Nominated When Senate Not in Session: If the Governor nominates an individual to fill a vacancy in the office of District Court Judge when the Senate is not in session, the individual serves until the end of the next legislative session. If confirmed at the next session, he or she continues to serve until the next general election for which the statutory filing deadline has not passed. (See 1993 amendment.) 42 A.G. Op. 31 (1987).

1981 Amendment: Inserted "Except as provided in 3-1-1107 and 3-1-1121 through 3-1-1126" at the beginning of (1); combined (1) and (2) relating to confidentiality and privileged communications regarding proceedings and filed papers; and added a provision in (2) that the Judicial Standards Commission shall make rules for the enforcement of confidentiality consistent with this part.

Commissioner Correction: The exception clause added to subsection (1) by the 1981 amendment did not include section 8 of the amending session law chapter, which corresponds to 3-1-1126.

The Code Commissioner included 3-1-1126 in the clause because it had been section 7 of the introduced bill, which was included in the clause; when section 7 was renumbered section 8 during the legislative process, the exception clause, by apparent oversight, was not changed accordingly.

Case Notes

Jurisdictional Challenge to Judicial Standards Commission's Authority to Recommend and Supreme Court's Authority to Impose Costs and Attorney Fees in Judicial Discipline Case: In Harris v. Smartt, 2002 MT 239, 311 M 507, 57 P3d 58 (2002), Smartt was ordered to pay all costs of a judicial ethics proceeding. Pursuant to the order, the Judicial Standards Commission assessed Smartt $52,539.02. Smartt challenged the assessment. The Commission contended that Smartt was precluded from challenging the award because he failed to object to the Commission's recommendation or to the court's order. The Supreme Court disagreed. A party can never waive or consent to subject matter jurisdiction when there is no basis for the court to exercise jurisdiction. Thus, a jurisdictional challenge cannot be waived and may be raised at any time, so Smartt's challenge was allowed. Harris v. Smartt, 2003 MT 135, 316 M 130, 68 P3d 889 (2003). See also Balyeat Law, PC v. Pettit, 1998 MT 252, 291 M 196, 967 P2d 398 (1998), and In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121.

No Authority of Judicial Standards Commission to Recommend and Supreme Court to Order Payment of Costs and Fees in Judicial Discipline Case: In Harris v. Smartt, 2002 MT 239, 311 M 507, 57 P3d 58 (2002), Smartt was ordered to pay all costs of a judicial ethics proceeding. Pursuant to the order, the Judicial Standards Commission assessed Smartt $52,539.02. Smartt challenged the assessment on grounds that it exceeded the Commission's authority because the constitution does not grant the Commission authority to adopt rules to assess costs and fees. Smart also asserted that the Supreme Court exceeded its limited constitutional authority in matters of judicial discipline by awarding costs and fees. The Supreme Court agreed. The constitution is very explicit as to what sanctions the Supreme Court may impose upon recommendation of the Commission and does not authorize the imposition of the prosecution's costs and legal fees. Rather, the essential functions of the Commission must be paid by the state. Thus, the prior order requiring Smartt to pay the costs of prosecution was vacated. Harris v. Smartt, 2003 MT 135, 316 M 130, 68 P3d 889 (2003).

Judicial Standards Commission Proceedings Not Violative of Constitutional Confidentiality Provisions: Records of the Judicial Standards Commission are confidential until the filing of a formal complaint. After a formal complaint is filed, certain papers, proceedings, and records of proceedings become accessible to the public. In order to protect the reputation of innocent judges wrongfully accused of misconduct, to maintain confidence in the judiciary by avoiding premature disclosure of alleged misconduct, and to encourage retirement as an alternative to costly lengthy formal proceedings and to protect Commission members from outside pressures, a complaint against a judicial officer is confidential until the Commission finds good cause to order a hearing, at which time the Legislature has determined that the public's right to know outweighs the individual judge's right to privacy. In this case, defendant argued that the Commission unlawfully provided copies of an investigation file to its members and the prosecutor, who in turn filed it as an exhibit during the formal hearing, making the matter a public record. The investigation file was never admitted into evidence during the hearing; however, it was included in the bound volume of prosecution exhibits. Defendant did not object at the hearing to inclusion of the file with other admitted exhibits, and thus waived any argument on appeal concerning a breach of privacy. Harris v. Smartt, 2002 MT 239, 311 M 507, 57 P3d 58 (2002).

Authority of Judicial Standards Commission: Where the Judicial Standards Commission adopted in its rules power to investigate complaints on the basis that a judge had engaged in "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute", the court held the Commission in so acting would exceed its authority, since the Montana Constitution and statute did not provide that such described conduct would be grounds for action by the Commission. Rather, the constitution requires the more serious complaint of "misconduct in office" to provide a basis for action by the Commission. State ex rel. Shea v. Judicial Standards Comm'n, 198 M 15, 643 P2d 210, 39 St. Rep. 521 (1982).

Necessity of Verified Complaint: The Judicial Standards Commission initiated an investigation upon receipt of a letter from a retired District Judge, contrary to its own rules and the statute (which, prior to a 1983 amendment requiring only a "written complaint") required that such investigations be initiated by a verified complaint. It argued that because the Montana Constitution prescribed its investigative authority and granted rulemaking power to implement its authority, the Legislature was without power to specify the procedure by which it exercised such authority.

The court disagreed, finding that under Art. V, sec. 13(1), Mont. Const., the Legislature has broad powers relating to removal of public officers and that there can be no inhibition of the legislative power, irrespective of rulemaking authority granted to the Commission, to make suitable provision not in conflict with the constitutionally granted powers of the Commission, including the requirement that the Commission may act only upon a verified complaint. State ex rel. Shea v. Judicial Standards Comm'n, 198 M 15, 643 P2d 210, 39 St. Rep. 521 (1982).

Case Notes

Judicial Standards Commission Authority to Investigate Justice of the Peace: A tribal member was subject to the commission's authority once the tribal member became a state official and took a constitutional oath of office to support, protect, and defend the Montana Constitution. Judicial Standards Comm'n v. Not Afraid, 2010 MT 285, 358 Mont. 532, 245 P.3d 1116.

No Error in Failure to Grant Continuance of Formal Hearing: Defendant requested a continuance of a formal hearing before the Judicial Standards Commission because there were dispositive motions pending in District Court and because the prosecution's witness list, provided 2 weeks before trial, included 15 previously undisclosed witnesses. A continuance was denied, and the Supreme Court found no error. The witness list was provided to defendant within the time limit set at the scheduling conference. Further, there is nothing unusual about preparing for a hearing while dispositive motions are pending, and defendant's failure to do so was not the fault of the Commission. Harris v. Smartt, 2002 MT 239, 311 M 507, 57 P3d 58 (2002).

Noninvestigatory, Work-Related Entry Into Judge's Chamber Not Considered Search: Smartt, a Justice of the Peace, left his office computer on after work hours. A county employee and another judge entered Smartt's chambers to shut down the computer so that a network backup could be performed and discovered pornographic images displayed on the computer screen. They reentered the chambers to note websites from the computer history file and took digital photographs of the long-term history of internet activity on Smartt's computer. The information was turned over to the FBI, and Smartt's computer was confiscated and searched. Smartt contended that the evidence seized from his chambers was obtained through an unlawful search, violated the right to privacy, and should be suppressed. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under St. v. Boyer, 2002 MT 33, 308 M 276, 42 P3d 771 (2002), the Supreme Court considers three factors when determining whether there has been an unlawful government intrusion into one's privacy: (1) whether the person has an actual expectation of privacy; (2) whether society is willing to recognize that expectation as objectively reasonable; and (3) the nature of the state's intrusion. When no reasonable expectation of privacy exists, there is neither a search nor seizure. Although the Montana Constitution affords broader protection than the federal constitution in cases involving searches of and seizure from private property, a person may not expect the same degree of privacy in public that is afforded in the privacy of one's home. In this case, entry into the judge's chambers was for a legitimate, noninvestigatory, work-related purpose. Irrespective of whether Smartt had any expectation of privacy with regard to the computer images, the nature of the intrusion did not rise to the level of a search, and denial of the motion to suppress the evidence was proper. Form of Complaint Not Critical to Investigation of Judicial Misconduct — Dismissal of Writ of Prohibition Proper When Judicial Standards Commission Acting Within Authority: A Justice of the Peace obtained a writ of prohibition barring further proceedings by the Judicial Standards Commission based on an unverified complaint. The complaint was subsequently verified, and the District Court dismissed the writ. The Justice of the Peace objected that his formal verified complaint was not submitted on the standardized form set forth in the Commission's rules, was drafted by the Commission's attorney, and did not identify the specific sections of the Canons of Judicial Ethics that were allegedly violated. The Justice of the Peace also maintained that the Commission violated its authority in investigating the complaint, so dismissal of the writ was in error. The Supreme Court disagreed. The form of a complaint is not critical to the Commission's fulfilling of its constitutional mandate, and nothing in policy, statute, or Commission rules was abrogated by the Commission's attorney by assisting in the drafting of the complaint. Further, a writ of prohibition is an extraordinary remedy available to enjoin a judicial entity from an inappropriate exercise of jurisdiction when no other plain, speedy, and adequate legal remedy exists. Thus, the District Court did not err in dismissing the writ because the Commission acted within its jurisdiction throughout the investigation. State ex rel. Smartt v. Judicial Standards Comm'n, 2002 MT 148, 310 M 295, 50 P3d 150 (2002).

Initial Notice of Unverified Complaint Signed by Commission Executive Secretary Not Violative of Statutory Notice Requirements: A Justice of the Peace received an initial notice, signed by the Judicial Standards Commission's executive secretary, that an unverified complaint of judicial misconduct had been received by the Commission. The Justice of the Peace contended that the initial notice was defective because it was not signed by the Commission members as required by this section. The Supreme Court disagreed. The statute requires that the Commission sign the notice to the judicial officer that a verified complaint has been received. Because the initial notice signed by the executive secretary in this case notified the Justice of the Peace of receipt of an unverified complaint, the statutory requirement was not violated. State ex rel. Smartt v. Judicial Standards Comm'n, 2002 MT 148, 310 M 295, 50 P3d 150 (2002).

Judicial Standards Commission Authority to Institute Investigation — Investigation Based on Report of Criminal Investigation Within Commission Authority: A written, unverified complaint was filed with the Judicial Standards Commission against a Justice of the Peace, alleging judicial misconduct. The Justice of the Peace obtained a writ of prohibition barring further proceedings based on an unverified complaint. Subsequently, a report was obtained from a Department of Justice investigation of criminal charges against the Justice of the Peace. The Justice of the Peace claimed that the Commission overstepped its authority by obtaining a copy of the report and further investigating the allegations when no complaint had been filed with the Commission regarding the allegations in the report. Under this section, a written complaint by any Montana citizen may initiate an investigation of judicial misconduct, and only when the initial investigation indicates that additional proceedings are warranted must the complaining citizen sign a verified complaint. Further, Commission rules provide that a complaint is not a prerequisite to Commission action. The Commission may act on its own motion as well, so the Commission did not exceed its jurisdiction in obtaining a copy of the report by court order and undertaking its own investigation of the subsequently verified allegations. State ex rel. Smartt v. Judicial Standards Comm'n, 2002 MT 148, 310 M 295, 50 P3d 150 (2002).

Judicial Standards Commission Investigation of Justice of the Peace — Writ of Prohibition Properly Modified to Cure Ministerial Defects: A written, unverified complaint was filed with the Judicial Standards Commission against a Justice of the Peace, alleging judicial misconduct. The Justice of the Peace obtained a writ of prohibition barring further proceedings based on an unverified complaint. Subsequently, information was obtained from a Department of Justice investigation of criminal charges against the Justice of the Peace. The Commission sought to vacate the writ. By the time that the hearing was held, the complaint was verified, so the District Court modified the writ, allowing the Commission to proceed on the basis of the verified complaint. The Justice of the Peace appealed the modification that allowed the Commission to cure defects before commencing formal proceedings. The Supreme Court affirmed. The function of a writ of prohibition is to halt proceedings that are "without or in excess of the jurisdiction" of the entity exercising judicial functions. The writ here was to continue in force only until verified complaints were received. A procedural error, such as the failure to verify a complaint, will not be allowed to subvert the constitutional mandate of the Commission to investigate judicial misconduct. Because the complaint was verified by the time that the District Court considered modification of the writ, the court did not err in modifying the writ and allowing the Commission to proceed based on the verified complaint. State ex rel. Smartt v. Judicial Standards Comm'n, 2002 MT 148, 310 M 295, 50 P3d 150 (2002).

Authority of Judicial Standards Commission: Where the Judicial Standards Commission adopted in its rules power to investigate complaints on the basis that a judge had engaged in "conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute", the court held the Commission in so acting would exceed its authority, since the Montana Constitution and statute did not provide that such described conduct would be grounds for action by the Commission. District Court Judge's Comments — Erosion of Public Confidence in Judiciary — Public Censure — Suspension Without Pay: Prior to sentencing a 47-year-old teacher for having sexual intercourse without consent with a 14-year-old student, the District Court judge spoke from the bench and stated the victim was "a troubled youth, but a youth that was probably as much in control of the situation as [the teacher], one that was seemingly, though troubled, older than her chronological age". The teacher was then sentenced to 15 years in the state prison, with all but 31 days suspended. In explaining the sentence to the press, the judge explained that it "was horrible enough as it is just given her age, but it wasn't this forcible beat-up rape". The Judicial Standards Commission received numerous complaints after a public outcry regarding the judge's statements. The judge then attempted to increase the sentence, but the Supreme Court blocked the attempt based on lack of authority under Montana law to revise a sentence that was already imposed. In reviewing the complaints, the Judicial Standards Commission accepted the judge's admission that he violated Rule 1.2 of the Code of Judicial Conduct, which requires judges to act in a manner that promotes public confidence in the independence, integrity, and impartiality of the judiciary and avoids impropriety or the appearance of impropriety. Subsequently, the Supreme Court ordered the judge to appear at a public censure and he was suspended without pay for the last 31 days of his term in office. Inquiry re Judicial Standards Comm'n v. Conduct of Justice of the Peace Violative of Canons of Judicial Ethics — Costs Associated With Sanction Attributed to Justice of the Peace: The Supreme Court found clear and convincing evidence that a Justice of the Peace violated the Canons of Judicial Ethics by knowingly accessing sexually explicit images on a county computer and by engaging in inappropriate behavior with a person with outstanding warrants. The conduct had a negative effect on the public's perception of the judiciary, and the court held that the appropriate sanction was to suspend the Justice of the Peace from the performance of judicial duties without pay for the remainder of the term of office, and to assess the Justice of the Peace with the costs of the sanction proceedings. Constitutional Right to Equal Protection Not Violated by Confidentiality Provisions in Rule 13 Regulating Complaints Against Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 13 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement violated their rights to equal protection under the law, making a comparison with the constitutional provision in Art. VII, sec. 11, Mont. Const., and statutes concerning the Judicial Standards Commission under which a judge responding to a disciplinary complaint may waive confidentiality. The Supreme Court found the argument inscrutable and unworthy of consideration. The attorneys failed to establish that they were treated differently under the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement from than any other attorney facing disciplinary charges. Part 1
Supreme Court Justices

3-2-101. Number, election, and term of office.

Compiler's Comments

Provision Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 15, L. 1995, repealed sec. 5, Ch. 683, L. 1979, and sec. 1, Ch. 362, L. 1987. The effect of the repealer was to make permanent the provision setting the number of Supreme Court Associate Justices at six. Repealer effective January 27, 1995.

New Justices — How Selected: Section 2, Ch. 683, L. 1979, provided: "The associate justices created by [this act] shall be filled initially at the 1980 general election, and the individuals elected shall take office on the first Monday of January, 1981."

Effective Period — Amendment: Section 5, Ch. 683, L. 1979, provided: "This act is effective until the first Monday of January, 1989, at which time the number of associate justices authorized by this act shall revert to four. The code commissioner is directed to make appropriate changes in the Montana Code Annotated to reflect the intent of this section."

3-2-102. Qualifications and residence.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

3-2-104. Salaries — expenses.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 at end of (1) substituted "2-16-403" for "2-16-404". Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1989 Amendment: At end of (1) substituted "2-16-404" for "2-16-405". Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1985 Amendment: Deleted (2) requiring Justices of the Supreme Court to forfeit a month's salary for failure to decide any matter within 120 days after submission for decision.

1981 Amendment: In (2) substituted requirement that Justices forfeit a month's salary for failure to decide a matter within 120 days for a provision that the State Auditor would not pay a Justice until receiving an affidavit that the Justice's workload was not delinquent.

Transition: Sec. 16, Ch. 528, L. 1979, provided: "A judicial officer, as defined in 1-1-202, who is occupying his judicial office on the effective date of this act shall continue to be paid expenses on the same basis as he is receiving them on the effective date of this act until the expiration of his term of office. All judicial officers who take office or begin a new term of office after the effective date of this act shall receive expenses as provided in this act."

Severability: Section 17, Ch. 528, L. 1979, was a severability section.

Case Notes

Time Limits on Judicial Decisions — Solely Within Judicial Sphere: Plaintiff contended 3-2-104 and 3-5-212, which imposed sanctions on judges if decisions were not reached or opinions were not written within the procedural constraints and time limits set by the statutes, were unconstitutional. (In 1985, 3-2-104 was amended and 3-5-212 was repealed, thus eliminating the sanctions.) On appeal, the Supreme Court held that under the separation of powers doctrine the legislative branch of government is without constitutional authority to limit the judicial branch of government in respect to when it shall hear or determine any cause of action within its lawful jurisdiction. The time limits within which judicial decisions must be rendered were held to be a sphere of activity so fundamental and necessary to a court that to divest it of its absolute control would be to make meaningless the very phrase "judicial power". Coate v. Omholt, 203 M 488, 662 P2d 591, 40 St. Rep. 586 (1983).

Impairment of Contract and Diminution of Salary — Preventing Legislative Meddling in Judicial Decisions: Plaintiff contended 3-2-104 and 3-5-212, which imposed sanctions on judges if decisions were not reached or opinions were not written within the procedural constraints and time limits set by the statutes, were unconstitutional. (In 1985, 3-2-104 was amended and 3-5-212 was repealed, thus eliminating the sanctions.) The penalty provisions of both statutes required a 1-month salary forfeiture in the event of a violation. Plaintiff contended the penalty violated the impairment of contract and diminution of judicial salary provisions of the Montana Constitution. Defendant contended that since the judiciary imposed the sanctions, the constitution was not violated. The constitutional prohibition against diminution of salaries is designed to prevent lawmakers from exerting control over the judiciary. Even if the court were to allow the indirect violation by allowing the Legislature to mandate a scheme administered by the courts, the statutes would violate the impairment of contract prohibition. Public employment gives rise to certain obligations protected by the contract clause of the constitution. Promised compensation is one such protected right. Once vested, the right to compensation cannot be eliminated without unconstitutionally impairing the contract obligation. Coate v. Omholt, 203 M 488, 662 P2d 591, 40 St. Rep. 586 (1983).

Supreme Court Jurisdiction

No District Court Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Attorney Disciplinary Matters: The Supreme Court suspended a Yellowstone County Deputy City Attorney, publicly censured her, and placed her on probation for 2 years. Plaintiff newspaper requested that the District Court provide the documents related to the attorney's disciplinary proceedings, but the District Court declined to release the documents on grounds that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Supreme Court, not the District Court, possesses original and exclusive jurisdiction and responsibility in all matters involving the conduct and disciplining of Montana attorneys, and court disciplinary rules provide for the confidentiality of disciplinary procedures. Billings Gazette v. St., 2008 MT 287, 345 M 385, 190 P3d 1126 (2008). See also Boe v. Court Administrator, 2007 MT 7, 335 M 228, 150 P3d 927 (2007).

Jurisdiction Required Before Judgment Effective: It is fundamental that a court rendering a decision in a particular case have jurisdiction over the parties. When the judgment roll on its face shows that the court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment, its pronouncement is in fact no judgment and cannot be enforced. No right can be derived from it. All proceedings founded upon it are invalid and ineffective for any purpose. Ciotti v. Hoover, 237 M 462, 774 P2d 406, 46 St. Rep. 969 (1989), following Apple v. Edwards, 123 M 135, 211 P2d 138 (1949).

Case Notes

Supreme Court — Acquisition of Appellate Jurisdiction: Time limits for filing an appeal are mandatory and jurisdictional. An appellant has a duty to perfect an appeal in the manner and within the time limits provided by law. Absent such compliance, the Montana Supreme Court does not acquire jurisdiction to entertain and determine an appeal. Price v. Zunchich, 188 M 230, 612 P2d 1296, 37 St. Rep. 1058 (1980), following Snyder v. Gommenginger, 183 M 375, 600 P2d 171 (1979).

Federal Courts — Reviewability of Montana Decisions: The U.S. District Court has no power to review the judgments of Montana courts. A litigant has no constitutional right to a correct result. Osburnsen v. Heller, 34 St. Rep. 193 (D.C. Mont. 1977) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

3-2-202. Original jurisdiction — review of ballot statements.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 481 in (1) at beginning deleted "Except as provided in subsection (3)"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) (a) Except as provided in subsection (3)(b), a contest of a ballot issue submitted by initiative or referendum may be brought prior to the election only if it is filed within 30 days after the date on which the issue was certified to the governor, as provided in 13-27-308, and only for the following causes:

(i) violation of the law relating to qualifications for inclusion on the ballot;

(ii) constitutional defect in the substance of a proposed ballot issue; or

(iii) illegal petition signatures or an erroneous or fraudulent count or canvass of petition signatures.

(b) A contest of a ballot issue based on subsection (3)(a)(i) or (3)(a)(iii) may be brought at any time after discovery of illegal petition signatures or an erroneous or fraudulent count or canvass of petition signatures"; inserted (3) regarding court review of ballot statements; inserted (4) defining lead petitioner; in (5) after "challenge a" substituted "ballot issue" for "measure"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 11, 2007.

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 481, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

1987 Amendment: In (1), at beginning, inserted exception clause relating to subsection (3); and inserted (3) relating to timing and basis for contest of a ballot issue.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 540, L. 1987, which amended this section, read: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 1, of the Montana Constitution recognizes that all political power is vested in and derived from the people and that all government of right originates with the people, is founded on their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole; and

WHEREAS, the right of the people to make statutory changes by initiative is retained in Article III, section 4, of the Montana Constitution; and

Case Notes

Denial of Request for Supreme Court to Exercise Original Jurisdiction to Enjoin Initiative — Examination of Constitutionality When and If Initiative Passes: The plaintiffs challenged the constitutionality of an initiative by filing a petition for declaratory relief and seeking an injunction to prevent the Secretary of State from certifying the initiative. The Supreme Court denied the petition without prejudice, concluding that the court lacked authority to determine the constitutionality of the initiative's provisions until, and if, the initiative passed. Mont. AFL-CIO v. McCulloch, 2016 MT 200, 384 Mont. 331, 380 P.3d 728.

Appeal From District Court's Denial of Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus Prohibited: After the District Court denied a criminal defendant's petition for a writ of habeas corpus, the defendant appealed to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held it will no longer consider as an original petition a party's appeal from a District Court's denial of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. A petitioner must file an original petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the Supreme Court in order for the court to consider it. Thomas v. Doe, 2011 MT 283, 362 Mont. 454, 266 P.3d 1255.

Statutory Provision for Developing Factual Record Applicable to Initiative Proponent Ballot Statements Only: After Harrington brought an original proceeding in the Montana Supreme Court to challenge the Attorney General's finding of the sufficiency of the ballot and fiscal statements for an initiated measure, he later petitioned the Supreme Court under 3-2-202(3)(b)(ii) to refer his challenge to a District Court to develop a factual record. The Supreme Court denied Harrington's motion, holding that subsection (3)(b) of this section applies to a petitioner's own ballot statements and could not be used by another entity, who was not the initiative's proponent, to challenge the Attorney General's finding of sufficiency. Mont. Consumer Fin. Ass'n v. St., 2010 MT 185, 357 Mont. 237, 238 P.3d 765.

Negligent Homicide Charges After DUI Guilty Plea — Supervisory Control to Avoid Double Jeopardy Trial: If the District Court's conclusion that the Justice's Court plea of guilty to DUI did not bar subsequent prosecution of two negligent homicide charges arising out of the same auto accident as the DUI charge is proved, on appeal, to be incorrect, the defendant will have been subjected to prosecution even though double jeopardy entitled him to avoid prosecution altogether. Thus, it is clear that an appeal would not be an adequate remedy, and the defendant's application to the Supreme Court for a writ of supervisory control presented legal issues appropriate for the Supreme Court's consideration and would be accepted and decided. State ex rel. Booth v. District Court, 1998 MT 344, 292 M 371, 972 P2d 325, 55 St. Rep. 1395 (1998), followed in Montanans for the Coal Trust v. St., 2000 MT 13, 298 M 69, 996 P2d 856, 57 St. Rep. 73 (2000).

Factors Necessary for Acceptance of Original Jurisdiction: Once standing to bring an action is established, the question shifts to whether the action meets the necessary factors for the Supreme Court to accept original jurisdiction. Assumption of original jurisdiction is proper when: (1) constitutional issues of major statewide importance are involved; (2) the case involves purely legal questions of statutory and constitutional construction; and (3) urgency and emergency factors exist, making the normal appeal process inadequate. Butte-Silver Bow Local Gov't v. St., 235 M 398, 768 P2d 327, 46 St. Rep. 87 (1989), followed in State ex rel. Gould v. Cooney, 253 M 90, 831 P2d 593, 49 St. Rep. 410 (1992), and Montanans for the Coal Trust v. St., 2000 MT 13, 298 M 69, 996 P2d 856, 57 St. Rep. 73 (2000). See also State ex rel. Greely v. Water Court, 214 M 143, 691 P2d 833 (1984).

Factors in Determining Original Jurisdiction: The three major factors necessary for a valid exercise of Supreme Court original jurisdiction are where: (1) constitutional issues of major statewide importance are involved; (2) the questions involved are purely legal questions of statutory or constitutional construction; and (3) urgency and emergency factors exist, making the normal appeal process inadequate. White v. St., 233 M 81, 759 P2d 971, 45 St. Rep. 1310 (1988).

Certified Question — Interspousal Tort Immunity Abolished: In an original proceeding for declaratory judgment on two certified questions from U.S. District Court, the Supreme Court held that it abolished the defense of interspousal tort immunity in Miller v. Fallon County, 222 M 214, 721 P2d 342, 43 St. Rep. 1185 (1986), because historical reasons for that immunity were no longer valid. Therefore, that doctrine did not bar claim of wife-passenger against her husband-driver for negligence in operation of motor vehicle. Noone v. Fink, 222 M 273, 721 P2d 1275, 43 St. Rep. 1258 (1986).

Declaratory Judgment on Requiring Prepayment of Jury Fees by Party Demanding Jury: The Supreme Court took original jurisdiction of, and heard, a petition for a declaratory judgment that it was unconstitutional to require prepayment, by a party requesting a civil jury trial, of each day's jury fees at or before the end of the prior day. The requirement was contained in Rule 14F, M.J.C.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 22) (superseded, 1990, see Title 25, ch. 23). There was a justiciable controversy of statewide impact in that the rule applied to all justice courts; delay could abridge vital constitutional rights of litigants; the purpose of the declaratory judgment would serve the office of a writ, and the court has jurisdiction to issue, hear, and determine writs; and it would promote judicial economy to accept jurisdiction rather than force piecemeal litigation on the constitutionality of the rule. The court said that the prepayment requirement was contained in the rule and 3-15-203, which provided that "In civil actions, the jurors' fees must be paid by the party demanding the jury and taxed as costs against the losing party", and declared both the statute and rule unconstitutional. Hammer v. Justice Court, 222 M 35, 720 P2d 281, 43 St. Rep. 1040 (1986).

Supreme Court Original Jurisdiction Over Declaratory Action Concerning Statewide Water Adjudication: The Supreme Court had power to determine an action for declaratory judgment involving the constitutionality of the requirement in 85-2-234 that final water decrees state "the amount of water, rate, and volume, included in the right". The issue affects all rights in the statewide adjudication process. Determination of the issue by the Supreme Court: (1) will provide guidance to the water court; (2) is in the interests of judicial economy; and (3) would serve the public policy of the state by expediting the determination of existing water rights. McDonald v. St., 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

Citizen Taxpayer — Standing to Challenge Revenue Bonds: Plaintiff filed a complaint for declaratory judgment in the Supreme Court seeking to determine the validity of several acts of the Legislature allowing the issuance of state revenue bonds. Plaintiff, in his complaint, alleged that he was a citizen, resident, elector, and taxpayer. Prior cases held that in order to establish standing to sue a governmental entity: (1) the issue for review must represent a case or controversy; (2) the complaining party must allege past, present, or threatened injury to a property or civil rights; and (3) the alleged injury must be distinguishable from injury to the public generally, but need not be exclusive to the complaining party. The Supreme Court added a further exception. The court stated that it would recognize the standing of a taxpayer, without more, to question the constitutional validity of a tax or use of tax money where the issue or issues presented directly affect the constitutional validity of the state or its political subdivisions acting to collect the tax, issue bonds, or use the proceeds thereof. The court said it would accept original jurisdiction of such suits when special circumstances exist, presenting issues of urgent or emergency nature and requiring speedy determination. Grossman v. St., 209 M 427, 682 P2d 1319, 41 St. Rep. 804 (1984), followed in Montanans for the Coal Trust v. St., 2000 MT 13, 298 M 69, 996 P2d 856, 57 St. Rep. 73 (2000). However, see Mitchell v. Glacier County, 2017 MT 258, 389 Mont. 122, 406 P.3d 427, limiting the application of Grossman by distinguishing alleged county financial mismanagement in budgeting and accounting from challenges concerning the validity of a county's collection or expenditure of revenues.

Original Jurisdiction — Declaratory Judgments: Plaintiff filed a complaint for declaratory judgment in the Supreme Court seeking to determine the validity of several acts of the Legislature allowing the issuance of state revenue bonds. The bonds would be financed by coal severance taxes to provide proceeds for development of state water resources. The Supreme Court accepted original jurisdiction of the declaratory judgment action. The court relied on Forty-Second Legislative Assembly v. Lennon, 156 M 416, 481 P2d 330 (1971), and the transcripts of the 1972 Constitutional Convention proceedings to determine that the original jurisdiction of the court as contained in the 1889 Montana Constitution was intended to be continued in the 1972 Montana Constitution. The court held that it does have original jurisdiction to accept declaratory judgment proceedings when the issues have impact of major importance on a statewide basis or upon a major segment of the state and when the purpose of the declaratory judgment proceedings will serve the office of a writ provided by law in accordance with Art. VII, sec. 2(1), Mont. Const. Grossman v. St., 209 M 427, 682 P2d 1319, 41 St. Rep. 804 (1984), followed in Ingraham v. Champion Int'l, 243 M 42, 793 P2d 769, 47 St. Rep. 650 (1990).

Voters' Standing to Challenge Restriction on Judge Running for Office: Sections 3-1-607 and 3-1-608 forbid what Art. VII, sec. 10, Mont. Const., allows in that they require a Supreme Court Justice or Chief Justice or a District Court Judge to resign if he becomes a candidate for any elective office, while Art. VII, sec. 10, Mont. Const., provides that such a person does not have to resign if he runs for another judicial office. Standing to challenge the constitutionality of 3-1-607 and 3-1-608 existed where a petition for declaratory judgment was brought by registered voters and the two statutes adversely affected the election process contemplated by the constitution. The registered voters had standing to assert the public interest clearly intended by Art. VII, sec. 10, Mont. Const., to assert the integrity and supremacy of the constitution, and to assert the public interest in challenging the legality of legislative action that allegedly flies in the face of the constitution. The Comm. for an Effective Judiciary v. St., 209 M 105, 679 P2d 1223, 41 St. Rep. 581 (1984). See also Butte-Silver Bow Local Gov't v. St., 235 M 398, 768 P2d 327, 46 St. Rep. 87 (1989).

Supervisory Control to Grant Venue Change Wrongly Denied Below: If, upon presentation of a matter to the Montana Supreme Court by means of a writ, it is apparent from the record that a relator will be deprived of a fundamental right, both justice and judicial economy require the court to then resolve the issue in favor of relator. Court's assumption of jurisdiction upon a petition for a Writ of Supervisory Control in which the issue was whether District Court abused its discretion in denying motion for a change of venue was not premature, and the writ was granted. State ex rel. Coburn v. Bennett, 202 M 20, 655 P2d 502, 39 St. Rep. 2300 (1982), followed, as to the grant of a writ to preserve a fundamental right, in Woirhaye v. District Court, 1998 MT 320, 292 M 185, 972 P2d 800, 55 St. Rep. 1298 (1998).

Interlocutory Review of Interrogatories Rulings — Untimely Requests: Application for a Writ of Supervisory Control seeking reversal of the lower court's order denying applicant's objections to interrogatories was untimely and in violation of lower court's order (which constituted a ground for refusing to accept jurisdiction) where it was not made until 40 days after the time set by the lower court for answering the interrogatories. State ex rel. Guarantee Ins. Co. v. District Court, 194 M 64, 634 P2d 648, 38 St. Rep. 1682 (1981).

Interlocutory Review of Interrogatories Rulings — Exhaustion of Remedies: Applicant for a Writ of Supervisory Control seeking reversal of the lower court's order denying applicant's objections to interrogatories failed to exhaust its remedies in the lower court where it did not apply there for a protective order under former Rule 26(c), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), or for an order under former Rule 37(a)(4), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), assessing costs and attorney fees against its opponent should the lower court order be reversed on appeal. State ex rel. Guarantee Ins. Co. v. District Court, 194 M 64, 634 P2d 648, 38 St. Rep. 1682 (1981).

Interlocutory Review of Interrogatories Rulings — Judicial Policy: Policy considerations supported refusal of the Supreme Court to accept jurisdiction over a petition for an extraordinary writ to review denial of objections to interrogatories propounded to a party that did not exhaust its remedies below and that made untimely application for the writ. A Supreme Court policy of interjecting itself into interlocutory review of lower court rulings on interrogatories and objections thereto would make it difficult for the lower courts to control day-to-day trial administration, open a Pandora's box of abuses, defeat the goal of speedy, inexpensive, and just discovery of the facts upon which each party's right of action depends, and might bury the Supreme Court in a paper blizzard of applications for supervisory control to review lower court rulings on pretrial discovery. State ex rel. Guarantee Ins. Co. v. District Court, 194 M 64, 634 P2d 648, 38 St. Rep. 1682 (1981), followed in Preston v. District Court, 282 M 200, 936 P2d 814, 54 St. Rep. 312 (1997).

Closure of Voir Dire Examination to Public and Press Vacated: At the commencement of Gene Austad's trial, the District Court directed that the individual voir dire examination of prospective jurors be closed to the press and public. The Great Falls Tribune filed an original proceeding in the Supreme Court seeking a Writ of Supervisory Control. The Supreme Court directed the District Court to allow the press and public to attend the voir dire examination. The court found that there is nothing in subjecting the prospective jurors to an open and public voir dire examination that would deny or impair Austad's right to a speedy trial. The Montana Constitution imposes a stricter standard in order to authorize closure of a trial than does the United States Constitution. Great Falls Tribune v. District Court, 186 M 433, 608 P2d 116, 37 St. Rep. 502 (1980).

Writ of Supervisory Control Denied — Remedy by Appeal Adequate: Review by Writ of Supervisory Control of the decision of a District Court that resulted in an estimated tax loss of over $2 million and that also will result in appeals to the District Courts of 25 counties was denied since the decision of the District Court had been appealed to the Supreme Court and was ready to be set for the next court calendar. The remedy by appeal was adequate, precluding review by supervisory control. Dept. of Revenue v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 185 M 172, 605 P2d 170, 37 St. Rep. 24 (1980).

Writ of Supervisory Control — Lower Court Order to Seek: The Writ of Supervisory Control was denied even though petitioner was ordered by the lower court to seek the Writ to determine jurisdiction in a child custody case. State ex rel. Jennings v. District Court, 178 M 187, 582 P2d 1260, 35 St. Rep. 1264 (1978).

Habeas Corpus — Exhaustion of Remedies — Procedures — Interstate Corrections: Petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus was denied prisoner convicted in Montana but imprisoned in Nevada because state remedies had not been exhausted. Evans v. Wolff, 427 F. Supp. 400, 34 St. Rep. 190 (D.C. Mont. 1977).

Declaratory Judgment: Determination of legal rights concerning election of delegates and implementation of state Constitutional Convention was properly decided in declaratory judgment action by Supreme Court under its original jurisdiction in aid of its appellate jurisdiction. Forty-Second Legislative Assembly v. Lennon, 156 M 416, 481 P2d 330 (1971).

Injunction:

Supreme Court declined jurisdiction in action for injunction to restrain county officials from drawing or issuing certain warrants where numerous questions of fact were present that would require the taking of testimony and submission of other evidence. Porter v. Thielen, 124 M 607, 214 P2d 743 (1951).

This section does not authorize the vacation or suspension of a prohibitory injunction order pending an appeal from it. Maloney v. King, 26 M 487, 68 P 1012 (1902).

Writ of Prohibition: The Writ of Prohibition may be issued to end litigation and save expense. State ex rel. Adami v. Lewis & Clark County, 124 M 282, 220 P2d 1052 (1950).

Case Notes

Conservator's Exercise of Reasonable Judgment Regarding Lease of Estate Property — Remand for Audit of Leasing Arrangement: The District Court appointed Saylor's stepson, Tim, as temporary guardian. Saylor and her brother, Deane, both filed written objections to the appointment, and the District Court then approved an agreement that made Deane the limited guardian and conservator of Saylor's out-of-state property and Tim the conservator of Saylor's Montana property. Saylor and Deane subsequently moved to remove Tim as conservator based on his failure to disclose certain financial documents relating to his administration of the estate. Tim had entered a grazing lease on Saylor's property that Saylor contended provided no material benefit to the estate. The District Court found no good cause to remove Tim as conservator and dismissed the petition for removal. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that conservators are under the same duties as trustees and held that Tim exercised reasonable judgment regarding the lease arrangement and did not breach his duty as conservator so as to require his removal. Saylor's proposed substitute model lease was unrealistic. However, as a matter of equity, the Supreme Court remanded with instructions that the District Court order an audit of the lease arrangement to ensure that the figures attached to the lease conform to actualities and to allow the District Court to revise its prior determinations should the audit reveal facts that would require revision. In re Guardianship & Conservatorship of Saylor, 2005 MT 236, 328 M 415, 121 P3d 532 (2005).

GENERALLY

Erroneous Judgment Overpayment Properly Offset Against Attorney Fees: Plaintiff was awarded $40,948.83 in a human rights case against Cascade County. The county subsequently sent plaintiff another check for $28,062.95. Plaintiff's attorney inquired whether the check was a partial payment of fees and costs, and the County Attorney replied that the check was in response to the order of the Human Rights Bureau, which did not relate to fees. The county eventually contended that the check was sent in error and sought repayment through a reduction in attorney fees. Plaintiff asserted that the county released its claim for a refund. The District Court disagreed and ordered that the overpayment be offset against the attorney fees owed by the county. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The county, through the County Attorney, made a mistake in stating what the check was for, and the letter did not constitute an unequivocal release of a claim to recover the overpayment mistakenly made by the county, nor did the county release the claim through abandonment. Therefore, the District Court did not err in ordering that the county recover its overpayment by offsetting that amount against the attorney fees owed by the county to plaintiff as the prevailing party in the human rights action. Edwards v. Cascade County, 2009 MT 229, 351 M 360, 212 P3d 289 (2009).

Writ of Supervisory Control Inappropriate in Appealing Department of Corrections' Decision Regarding Good Time Allowance — Writ of Habeas Corpus Granted: Inmate Eisenman applied to the Supreme Court for a writ of supervisory control and moved to proceed in forma pauperis, requesting that the court order the Department of Corrections to direct the reduction of his sentence for good time served. Supervisory control is an extraordinary remedy that is appropriate only when a District Court is proceeding upon a mistake of law that, if not corrected, would cause significant injustice and when the remedy by appeal is inadequate. The Supreme Court held that a writ of supervisory control was inappropriate in this case because the court's power to issue that writ extends only to inferior courts, not to other governmental agencies. Eisenman's claims were more appropriately asserted by a writ of habeas corpus because habeas corpus relief is available to every imprisoned person. The state claimed that a writ of habeas corpus was not appropriate either because Eisenman failed to plead that he would be entitled to release if he received the good time credits as requested. However, under Peyton v. Rowe, 391 US 54 (1968), and Garlotte v. Fordice, 515 US 39 (1995), immediate physical release is not the only remedy available under a writ of habeas corpus, so it was not premature to consider a habeas corpus petition prior to Eisenman's release. The Supreme Court thus considered Eisenman's application for writ of supervisory control to be a petition for writ of habeas corpus and proceeded to consider the good time issue on that basis. Eisenman v. St., 2000 MT 170, 300 M 322, 5 P3d 542, 57 St. Rep. 704 (2000).

Closing Argument Seeking Punitive Damages — Not Prejudicial: In his closing argument, the plaintiff's attorney urged the jury to award the plaintiff the amount requested so that the defendant would not continue to engage in the same kind of activity in the future. The defendant argued that the plaintiff's attorney's statements sought punitive damages that were not an issue in the case and therefore prejudiced the defendant. The Supreme Court held that the statement was not so prejudicial as to deny the defendant a fair trial and that there was no evidence that the verdict was inflated in any way. Kalanick v. Burlington N. RR Co., 242 M 45, 788 P2d 901, 47 St. Rep. 532 (1990).

Accusation of District Court Judge Misconduct First Raised on Appeal — Supreme Court Not to Consider: In reviewing a child custody modification determination, the Supreme Court refused to consider an affidavit submitted to the Supreme Court alleging an improper ex parte communication between the District Court Judge and a person interested in the proceeding. Appellant had made no motion for a mistrial or to remove the District Court Judge from the case, nor had appellant mentioned the alleged misconduct on the record. In re Marriage of Stout, 216 M 342, 701 P2d 729, 42 St. Rep. 856 (1985).

Judicial Notice of Maps and Descriptions on Appeal: In a dispute over control of an irrigation district's headgate, the Supreme Court permitted submission on appeal of government survey descriptions and maps that had not been introduced as evidence at trial. The court reasoned: first, that the commission comments to Rule 201, Montana Rules of Evidence, indicate that published maps or charts are included within the Rule's scope; and second, that maps and descriptions are acceptable articles of evidence by which to show a water right in the adjudication process. In re Establishment & Organization of Ward Irrigation District, 216 M 315, 701 P2d 721, 42 St. Rep. 824 (1985), distinguished in Frank v. Harding, 1998 MT 215, 290 M 448, 965 P2d 254, 55 St. Rep. 903 (1998).

Stipulation of Facts: Where the facts set forth in the opinion were stipulated and no objections made to their sufficiency or correctness, the Supreme Court is in as advantageous a position to do justice in the cause as was the trial court. No presumption obtains in such a case as to the correctness of the trial court's decision since Supreme Court is empowered to review the record completely. Pluhar v. Guderjahn, 134 M 46, 328 P2d 129 (1958).

Constitutionality: This section does not purport to impose on the Supreme Court any additional jurisdiction and hence is not unconstitutional. Finlen v. Heinze, 32 M 354, 80 P 918 (1905).

JURISDICTION AND FORUM

Underlying Case on Appeal to Supreme Court — Statutory Petition Process Terminated — Lack of District Court Jurisdiction: Plaintiffs' property was part of a dispute to exclude certain property from the Missoula irrigation district. Following the District Court's exclusion of property from the irrigation district, the case was appealed to the Supreme Court. While that case was pending on appeal, the District Court granted another petition by plaintiffs to exclude another four properties from the irrigation district. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Once the underlying case was appealed to the Supreme Court, the District Court lost its jurisdiction to act further in the matter and had no jurisdiction to entertain plaintiffs' second petition or to exclude additional properties while the case was on appeal. Additionally, the petition process that plaintiffs used to file the second petition under former 85-7-1846 was terminated nearly 5 years before the petition was filed. Thus, the District Court had no jurisdiction to entertain a petition filed under a statutory process that was no longer in place. Larango v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2004 MT 369, 324 M 534, 103 P3d 552 (2004). See also Lewistown Propane Co. v. Moncur, 2002 MT 349, 313 M 368, 61 P3d 780 (2002).

Out-of-Time Appeal in Criminal Matters — Exclusive Jurisdiction With Supreme Court: Under 46-20-101, the only method for review in criminal cases is by notice of appeal. Time limits for filing an appeal are mandatory and jurisdictional. If a defendant takes no action to perfect an appeal within 90 days of judgment, the District Court loses its jurisdiction and the appeal is out-of-time. However, an out-of-time appeal is a remedy that may be available to a criminal defendant who, through no fault of the defendant, misses a deadline for filing an appeal. Although former Rule 21(b), M.R.App.P. (now superseded), precludes an out-of-time appeal in a civil case, the Supreme Court is not precluded from addressing a motion for an out-of-time appeal in a criminal case. Further, a District Court lacks jurisdiction to grant an out-of-time appeal. The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction to grant a motion for an out-of-time appeal, and the motion is considered an original proceeding subject to the provisions of former Rule 17, M.R.App.P. (now superseded). Upon a showing that the failure to timely notice a criminal appeal was excusable under the circumstances, the Supreme Court may conclude that an out-of-time appeal is the appropriate remedy pursuant to former Rule 21(b), M.R.App.P. (now superseded). In that event, the matter will be remanded to the District Court with instructions to vacate and reenter judgment to afford the defendant a second opportunity to act within the statutory timeframes for filing notice of appeal. St. v. Tweed, 2002 MT 286, 312 M 482, 59 P3d 1105 (2002).

Involuntary Satisfaction of Judgment — Request for Stay of Execution Not Required: Following entry and satisfaction of judgment in District Court, the parties were aware of a contemplated appeal, but no stay of execution was requested or supersedeas bond posted. After plaintiff acquired title to the disputed property pursuant to the judgment, defendant filed a notice of appeal and lis pendens, effectively preserving the status quo pending appeal. Plaintiff moved to dismiss, contending that by voluntarily satisfying the judgment, defendants waived their right to appeal. Applying Turner v. Mtn. Eng'r & Constr., Inc., 276 M 55, 915 P2d 799, 53 St. Rep. 23 (1996), the Supreme Court held that the parties' course of conduct illustrated the involuntary, rather than voluntary nature of the satisfaction of judgment. Because satisfaction was involuntary, the right to appeal was not waived. Further, under former Rule 7, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), a party may request a stay of execution, but the request is not mandatory, even though a party choosing not to seek a stay runs the risk of having the appeal become moot. Plaintiff's motion to dismiss was denied. Kennedy v. Dawson, 1999 MT 265, 296 M 430, 989 P2d 390, 56 St. Rep. 1078 (1999).

Power of Supreme Court to Consider District Court Proceedings Held Without Jurisdiction: After a default judgment was entered against Hardman for injuries caused to Maulding in a car accident, Hardman moved on May 22 to set aside the default, and the District Court scheduled a hearing for July 16. At the hearing, Maulding raised the timeliness of the hearing, contending that when former Rule 60(c), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), was read with former Rules 59(d) and 59(g), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), the District Court had to rule on the motion within 45 days or it was considered denied. The District Court took that issue under advisement and heard testimony on the motion to set aside the default. Maulding argued on appeal that there was no evidence for the Supreme Court to consider on the issue of the default because the evidence taken by the trial court was taken at a hearing that was held without jurisdiction. The Supreme Court held that because those proceedings affect the substantial rights of the parties, consideration of the evidence developed at the hearing was within its powers under this section. Maulding v. Hardman, 257 M 18, 847 P2d 292, 50 St. Rep. 141 (1993), overruled in part by Green v. Gerber, 2013 MT 35, 369 Mont. 20, 303 P.3d 729.

Involuntary Satisfaction of Judgment — Appeal Not Rendered Moot: If a judgment is satisfied by an involuntary payment or performance, the appeal from the judgment is not thereby rendered moot. First Nat'l Bank in Eureka v. Giles, 225 M 467, 733 P2d 357, 43 St. Rep. 1326 (1987), overruling Gallatin Trust & Sav. Bank v. Henke, 154 M 170, 461 P2d 448 (1969), and In re Black's Estate, 32 M 51, 79 P 554 (1905), and overruled, with regard to voluntary versus involuntary payment or performance as affecting waiver of right to appeal without having bearing on mootness, in Turner v. Mtn. Eng'r & Constr., Inc., 276 M 55, 915 P2d 799, 53 St. Rep. 23 (1996). Turner was followed in Kennedy v. Dawson, 1999 MT 265, 296 M 430, 989 P2d 390, 56 St. Rep. 1078 (1999).

Notice of Appeal Divests Trial Court of Jurisdiction to Amend Judgment: After respondent moved to amend the judgment of the District Court, appellant filed a notice of appeal. The filing of the notice of appeal deprived the trial court of jurisdiction to amend the judgment. However, under 3-2-204, the Supreme Court can return jurisdiction to the trial court. United Farm Agency v. Blome, 198 M 435, 646 P2d 1205, 39 St. Rep. 1115 (1982).

Supreme Court as Final Authority: The Supreme Court of Montana is the final authority on the legal weight to be given a presumptive instruction under Montana law, but it is not the final authority on the interpretation which a jury could have given to the instruction. Sandstrom v. Mont., 442 US 510, 99 S.Ct. 2450 (1979).

Federal Courts — Reviewability of Montana Decisions: The U.S. District Court has no power to review the judgments of Montana courts. A litigant has no constitutional right to a correct result. Osburnsen v. Heller, 34 St. Rep. 193 (D.C. Mont. 1977) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Motion for Rehearing: Motion for rehearing will be denied if the questions involved should first be presented to the trial court by appropriate supplemental or amended pleadings. Atlantic-Pacific Oil Co. of Mont. v. Gas Dev. Co., 105 M 1, 69 P2d 750 (1937).

TIME LIMITS

Discovery of Documents — Time Allowance on Remand: Husband failed to comply with court's order allowing shorter time for him to respond to interrogatories, and wife had complained of insufficient time to examine one of his tax returns, which contained information regarding a piece of property over which there was a dispute as to whether it should be included in the marital estate for property disposition purposes. Since the Supreme Court was returning the case to the District Court for reconsideration of the marital estate assets, the Supreme Court directed that wife be allowed to pursue examination of the disputed piece of property. In re the Marriage of Hill v. Hill, 197 M 451, 643 P2d 582, 39 St. Rep. 723 (1982).

Mootness Found in Six-Year-Old Case — Limited Power of Supreme Court: The defendant in a 1974 case was charged with and convicted of abuse of a school teacher under 20-4-303. The fine levied was paid in 1976, about the time the defendant's appeal was submitted to the Supreme Court. Noting the long time lapse and the lapse of power in the court to order the return of the fine, the court held that the question was moot because any action it could take would have no effect on the parties. St. v. Warden, 191 M 520, 625 P2d 543, 38 St. Rep. 437 (1981).

STANDARDS OF REVIEW

Statutes Presumed Constitutional — Burden of Proof — Standard of Review: In deciding whether certain statutes violated the mandates of the Montana Constitution and The Enabling Act regarding use of school trust lands, the Supreme Court eschewed standards of review suggested by both parties, holding that the proper standard was whether the District Court's conclusions of law were correct. Statutes are presumed to be constitutional, and the Supreme Court will avoid an unconstitutional interpretation if possible. A party challenging the constitutionality of a statute has the burden of proving it unconstitutional beyond a reasonable doubt, and any doubt will be resolved in favor of the statute. Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999), following Steer, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, 245 M 470, 803 P2d 601, 47 St. Rep. 2199 (1990), St. v. Martel, 273 M 143, 902 P2d 14, 52 St. Rep. 873 (1995), Davis v. Union Pac. RR Co., 282 M 233, 937 P2d 27, 54 St. Rep. 328 (1997), and St. v. Nye, 283 M 505, 943 P2d 96, 54 St. Rep. 766 (1997), and followed in Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. Darkenwald, 2005 MT 190, 328 M 105, 119 P3d 27 (2005), and Eklund v. Wheatland County, 2009 MT 231, 351 M 370, 212 P3d 297 (2009).

Standard of Review of Grant or Denial of New Trial — Jury or Bailiff Misconduct: In the two most recent cases in which jury or bailiff misconduct was the basis for granting or denying a new trial, the Supreme Court stated that the standard is that the decision is within the sound discretion of the trial judge, whose decision will not be disturbed absent a showing of manifest abuse of that discretion. The Supreme Court reaffirmed this standard and overruled those cases with a different standard. Allers v. Riley, 273 M 1, 901 P2d 600, 52 St. Rep. 920 (1995).

Motion for Mistrial — Evidence of Erroneous Ruling Required: The Supreme Court cited Schmoyer v. Bourdeau, 148 M 340, 420 P2d 316 (1966), in holding that in order to reverse a lower court ruling on a motion for mistrial, evidence must be presented that is clear, convincing, and practically free from doubt that the trial court's ruling was erroneous. St. v. Dawson, 233 M 345, 761 P2d 352, 45 St. Rep. 1542 (1988).

Standard of Review in Pro Se Appeal: The Supreme Court's powers of appellate review are the same whether or not a defendant appealing from a criminal conviction is represented by counsel on the appeal. St. v. Green, 212 M 20, 685 P2d 370, 41 St. Rep. 1562 (1984).

Evidence Sufficient to Support Verdict — Jury to Weigh Evidence — Presumption of Correctness: In judging whether there is evidence sufficient to support a verdict, the Supreme Court recognizes that the jury is in the best position to weigh the evidence and consider the credibility of witnesses. Thus in examining the sufficiency of the evidence, review will be made in a light most favorable to the prevailing party, presuming that the findings of the District Court are correct. Rock Springs Corp. v. Pierre, 189 M 137, 615 P2d 206, 37 St. Rep. 1378 (1980).

Substantial Evidence to Support Verdict — Evidence to Support Contrary Findings Not Proper Consideration: The plaintiff offered evidence that a leaking pipe caused damage to a house. The defendant introduced evidence tending to show that the damage was caused by either melting snow or because of improper construction. The jury found that the evidence presented by the defendant was more credible. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that there was substantial evidence on which the jury could base its verdict. It is not the Supreme Court's function to determine if there is sufficient evidence to support contrary findings. Judgment affirmed. Cissel v. W. Plumbing & Heating, 188 M 149, 612 P2d 206, 37 St. Rep. 966 (1980).

Clear Preponderance of Evidence: The husband brought an action to enforce the property settlement. The wife sought modification. The property settlement provided that the wife was to provide an accounting for all sums paid. The trial Judge found that the wife had made an adequate accounting. The wife testified that she made what she thought was an adequate accounting, and the husband testified that the accounting he received was not sufficient. On appeal, the Supreme Court said that it will not substitute its judgment for that of the trier of fact but rather will only consider whether substantial credible evidence supports the findings and conclusions. Those findings will not be overturned by the court unless there is a clear preponderance of the evidence against them. The court will view the evidence in a light most favorable to the prevailing party, recognizing that substantial evidence may be weak or conflicting with other evidence, yet still support the findings. The findings are affirmed since there is not a clear preponderance of evidence against the findings. Phennicie v. Phennicie, 185 M 120, 604 P2d 787, 36 St. Rep. 2378 (1979).

Standard of Review in Workers' Compensation Cases — Conflicting Evidence: Conflicting evidence was given in this case claiming death benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act. One set of facts showed that death was caused by strenuous physical activity on the job prior to decedent's death, and the other testimony showed that decedent did nothing strenuous or unusual and that his activities on the job had no causal relationship to his death. The Workers' Compensation Court found the latter testimony more credible and entered findings accordingly. Where findings are based on conflicting evidence, the reviewing court's function is confined to determining whether there is substantial evidence supporting such findings. Following Jensen v. Zook Bros. Constr. Co., 178 M 59, 582 P2d 1191 (1978), substantial evidence supporting the findings existed here. It is not the court's function to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to support contrary findings. Stamatis v. Bechtel Power Corp., 184 M 64, 601 P2d 403, 36 St. Rep. 1866 (1979).

Substantial Though Conflicting Evidence: The Supreme Court's function in reviewing findings of fact in a civil action tried by the court without a jury is not to substitute its judgment in place of the trier of facts, but rather it is confined to determining whether there is substantial credible evidence to support the findings of fact and conclusions of law. Although conflicts may exist in the evidence presented, it is the duty and function of the Judge to resolve such conflicts. His findings will not be disturbed on appeal where they are based on substantial though conflicting evidence. Olson v. Westfork Properties, 171 M 154, 557 P2d 821 (1976).

Substantial Evidence:

Review of evidence is limited to determining whether there is substantial evidence to support trial court's findings of fact and whether such findings are sufficient to support conclusions of law. Keller v. Martin, 153 M 9, 452 P2d 422 (1969). See also McCalif Grower Supplies, Inc. v. Reed, 272 M 254, 900 P2d 880, 52 St. Rep. 659 (1995).

Function of Supreme Court on review is to determine whether there is substantial evidence to support findings of fact and conclusions of law. Peery v. Higgins, 152 M 140, 447 P2d 481 (1968).

Preponderance of the Evidence Against Findings: The Supreme Court may examine the evidence and determine a question of fact for itself, but it cannot overturn the findings of the court unless there is a decided preponderance of the evidence against them. Favero v. Wynacht, 140 M 358, 371 P2d 858 (1962); Sanders v. Sanders, 124 M 595, 229 P2d 164 (1951); Sanders v. Lucas, 111 M 599, 111 P2d 1041 (1941); Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940); State ex rel. Nagle v. Naughton, 103 M 306, 63 P2d 123 (1936); Stephenson v. Rainbow Flying Serv., Inc., 99 M 241, 42 P2d 735 (1935); Shepherd & Pierson Co. v. Baker, 81 M 185, 262 P 887 (1927); Scott v. Prescott, 69 M 540, 223 P 490 (1924); Kummrow v. Bank of Fergus County, 66 M 434, 214 P 1098 (1923); Leigland v. Rundle Land & Abstract Co., 64 M 154, 208 P 1075 (1922); Nolan v. Benninghoff, 64 M 68, 208 P 905 (1922); Stettheimer v. Butte, 60 M 111, 198 P 455 (1921); Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917); Gibson v. Morris St. Bank, 49 M 60, 140 P 76 (1914); O'Neil v. O'Neil, 43 M 505, 117 P 889 (1911); Murray v. Butte-Monitor Tunnel Min. Co., 41 M 449, 110 P 497 (1910); Copper Mtn. Min. & Smelting Co. v. Corbin Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 39 M 487, 104 P 540 (1909); Watkins v. Watkins, 39 M 367, 102 P 860 (1909); Delmoe v. Long, 35 M 139, 88 P 778 (1907); Finlen v. Heinze, 32 M 354, 80 P 918 (1905); Bordeaux v. Bordeaux, 32 M 159, 80 P 6 (1905); Hays v. Buzard, 31 M 74, 77 P 423 (1904).

Material Evidence: On appeal it is the duty of the Supreme Court to review and determine all questions of law and of fact arising from the proof produced; but the court is powerless to do this unless the material evidence is embodied in the record. Yellowstone Nat'l Bank v. McCullough, 51 M 590, 154 P 919 (1916).

DeNovo Review: The Supreme Court will not undertake to try a case de novo and determine it as does the District Court. Pope v. Alexander, 36 M 82, 92 P 203 (1907).

SUBSTANTIAL JUSTICE

Denial of Substantial Justice Below: Though objective urged for the first time on appeal will not normally be considered, the Supreme Court has the duty to determine whether parties were denied substantial justice below and can consider, within its sound discretion, whether the lower court deprived a party of a fair and impartial trial, even if an objection based on the mandate of a statute or an established precedent should have been made and was not. McAlpine v. Midland Elec. Co., 194 M 154, 634 P2d 1166, 38 St. Rep. 1577 (1981).

QUESTIONS OF LAW

Questions of Law: The provision that the Supreme Court in granting a new trial must in its decision "pass upon and determine all the questions of law involved in the case, presented upon such appeal, and necessary to the final determination of the case" is not binding. State ex rel. La France Copper Co. v. District Court, 40 M 206, 105 P 721 (1909), distinguished in State ex rel. USF&G Co. v. District Court, 77 M 594, 251 P 1061 (1926).

LAW OF THE CASE

Failure of District Court to Instruct Jury on Law of Case — New Trial Warranted — Plaintiffs Satisfied Burden of Proof on Value of Lost Opportunity to Settle in Legal Malpractice Claim: The District Court erred in instructing the jury to decide whether the plaintiffs would have settled a medical malpractice claim underlying their legal malpractice suit. The plaintiffs satisfied their burden of proving the likely value of the lost opportunity to settle through expert testimony, and the jury could have weighed conflicting expert testimony to determine a value for the lost opportunity. Because the District Court's instruction did not fairly instruct the jury on the law of the case that the Supreme Court established in Labair v. Carey, 2012 MT 312, 367 Mont. 453, 291 P.3d 1160, the instruction was an abuse of discretion that demanded a new trial. Labair v. Carey, 2016 MT 272, 385 Mont. 233, 383 P.3d 226.

Valid Authority to Impose Restitution Recommendation — Doctrine of Case Inapplicable: After a prior Supreme Court decision determined that the District Court lacked authority to impose a restitution payment as a condition of parole, the District Court was not prevented by the law of the case doctrine from restating its parole eligibility restrictions and conditions as recommendations or from specifying the total amount of restitution. Furthermore, although the defendant argued that her sentence violated due process because it was based on the amount of time it would take her to pay restitution, the District Court did not err when it based the defendant's sentence on many factors but did not make financial obligations the basis of the sentence. St. v. Winter, 2014 MT 235, 376 Mont. 284, 333 P.3d 222.

Law of Case Doctrine Inapplicable — Order Did Not Provide Affirmative Decision on a Stay or an Injunction: An order by the Supreme Court directing the District Court to resolve any remaining claims and to issue a final judgment did not render a decision on the issue of a stay or an injunction pending appeal and presented no law of the case roadblock on appeal. Plains Grains L.P. v. Bd. of County Commr's, 2010 MT 155, 357 Mont. 61, 238 P.3d 332.

Issue of Department of Labor and Industry Jurisdiction Raised in Two Separate Hearings — Collateral Estoppel Applicable — Due Process Rights Not Implicated When Party Fails to Pursue Available Remedies: The Workers' Compensation Court concluded that the Department of Labor and Industry should have allowed plaintiff to raise the argument that State Fund had improperly canceled plaintiff's policy for nonpayment of a premium as a defense to the claim by the Uninsured Employers' Fund for assessments and penalties. The court said that the issue was not barred by collateral estoppel because an order from a first hearing only determined whether the Department had subject matter jurisdiction over contract disputes between an insurance carrier and its policyholder (a determination that plaintiff did not appeal) and did not address the issue raised in a second hearing, which was whether the Department had jurisdiction to determine coverage in a proceeding seeking a penalty and indemnification. The court held that collateral estoppel did not apply because the issues in the two hearings were not identical. The court went on to hold that the Department did have jurisdiction, through its quasi-judicial power, to resolve the dispute regarding whether State Fund had rightfully canceled the policy. The Supreme Court disagreed. In the first case, a hearings officer determined that the Department did not have subject matter jurisdiction over the contractual dispute between plaintiff and State Fund, noting that proper adjudication would be in the District Court. The Department only has jurisdiction granted to it by statute, and the adjudication of insurance contracts does not fall within its jurisdiction. Plaintiff's failure to appeal the issue from the first hearing precluded it from arguing that the Department did have jurisdiction over the insurance contract dispute regarding a penalty and indemnification in the second hearing, so relitigation of the jurisdiction question in the second proceeding was barred by collateral estoppel. Further, it was error to give the Department jurisdiction to adjudicate the insurance contract dispute pursuant to its general quasi-judicial powers because an administrative agency may not assume jurisdiction without express delegation by the Legislature and there is no statutory delegation of authority to the Department to resolve contract disputes. Rather, regulation of insurance contracts is governed by the Insurance Commissioner and the relevant statutes relating to insurance disputes. The Department cannot and should not be adjudicating disputes between insurance companies and employers. The Workers' Compensation Court's conclusion that plaintiff was denied due process when it was prevented from presenting evidence relating to the insurance contract between itself and State Fund was also erroneous. Plaintiff had the opportunity to appeal the initial Department order to the Workers' Compensation Court, but failed to do so. Plaintiff also had the opportunity to pursue its remedies against State Fund in District Court, but again failed to do so. There is no denial of due process when a party fails to pursue the remedies provided. Auto Parts of Bozeman v. Employment Relations Div. Uninsured Employers' Fund, 2001 MT 72, 305 M 40, 23 P3d 193 (2001).

DUI Suspension or Revocation Clarified — Law of Case Doctrine and Collateral Estoppel Inapplicable — Contempt Order Refused: Sanders was arrested for a second DUI in a 5-year period and filed an action in District Court seeking review of the facts of the arrest. The District Court and the Supreme Court upheld the arrest and noted that a 6-month suspension of Sanders' license would take place. Later, after the Department of Justice refused to reinstate the license after the 6-month period expired because 61-8-402 applied and required a revocation of Sanders' license for 1 year, Sanders brought a contempt action in the District Court asking that the Department be held in contempt for failure to reinstate his license after expiration of the 6-month period. Sanders argued that the 6-month period had become the law of the case and that the failure of the Department to follow that law was a contempt of the District Court. After reviewing the records of the District Court and its own record in the previous DUI action, the Supreme Court held that the law of the case doctrine was inapplicable. Citing Haines Pipeline Constr., Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 265 M 282, 876 P2d 632 (1994), and Scott v. Scott, 283 M 169, 939 P2d 998 (1997), the Supreme Court explained that the law of the case doctrine applies only to the rulings of a court that are necessary to the decision and, in the case of the District Court's and Supreme Court's prior ruling in Sanders' DUI conviction, a determination that only a 6-month suspension was required under 61-8-402 was not necessary to either the District Court's or the Supreme Court's prior ruling. Those rulings, the Supreme Court said, concerned only whether the arresting officer had probable cause for the arrest. Thus, the Supreme Court held, the reference to a 6-month suspension in the previous opinions was dicta, there was no law of the case determined concerning the law governing license suspension or revocation, and therefore there could be no contempt for failure to reinstate Sanders' license. The Supreme Court also held that collateral estoppel was likewise inapplicable to require the Department to reinstate the license because collateral estoppel applies only to previously litigated issues and the period of license suspension or revocation of Sanders' license had not been previously litigated. Sanders v. St., 1998 MT 62, 288 M 143, 955 P2d 1356, 55 St. Rep. 272 (1998).

Change of Law From Time of Trial to Time of Appellate Review: Brockie argued that the Supreme Court's decision in Newville v. St., 267 M 237, 883 P2d 793, 51 St. Rep. 758 (1994), striking down part of 27-1-703 pertaining to liability of nonparties as unconstitutional, should be applied retroactively to his case. The Supreme Court held that the general rule is that a change of law between the law applied at the trial and the time of appeal requires the appellate court to apply the changed law unless to do so would result in a manifest injustice. Brockie v. Omo Constr., Inc., 268 M 519, 887 P2d 167, 51 St. Rep. 1322 (1994).

Relitigation of Previously Resolved Issue Barred on Appeal: Under the doctrine of law of the case, a prior Montana Supreme Court decision resolving a particular issue between the same parties in the same case is binding and cannot be relitigated in a subsequent appeal. St. v. Smith, 261 M 419, 863 P2d 1000, 50 St. Rep. 1388 (1993), followed in St. v. Pendergrass, 281 M 129, 932 P2d 1056, 54 St. Rep. 94 (1997). Pendergrass was reversed on other grounds in Chandler v. Mahoney, 2000 MT 294, 302 M 309, 18 P3d 312, 57 St. Rep. 1247 (2000). See also St. v. Van Dyken, 242 M 415, 791 P2d 1350 (1990), and St. v. Wagner, 2013 MT 47, 369 Mont. 139, 296 P.3d 1142.

Amending on Remand Judgment Upheld on First Appeal — Law of Case — Abuse of Discretion: In an original judgment of October 31, 1979, plaintiffs were given the alternative of either repairing a damaged irrigation ditch or paying damages of $5,500. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court, and in Marta v. Smith, 191 M 179, 622 P2d 1011, 38 St. Rep. 28 (1981), the court found substantial evidence to support the District Court's findings. This became the law of the case. The case was remanded for a determination of attorney fees to be awarded to defendant. On remand, the District Court amended its conclusions and findings to omit the alternative allowing plaintiffs to repair the ditch and awarded damages without the submission of any additional evidence. On appeal, the Supreme Court found this to be an abuse of discretion, as none of the exceptions found in former Rules 52(b), 60(a), or 60(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), applied. The court abused its discretion in not holding a hearing to determine if either alternative of the original judgment had been complied with. Marta v. Smith, 200 M 414, 650 P2d 1387, 39 St. Rep. 1839 (1982).

Law of Case Not Reviewable on Second Appeal: An action was brought to impose a constructive trust and to compel a company to deed certain land to an estate. On an appeal, the Supreme Court held that a sufficient case of adverse possession had been presented to warrant submission to the jury. The cause was reversed and remanded for a new trial. On this second appeal, the defendants alleged error in the failure to instruct the jury on the defenses of laches and estoppel. The Supreme Court noted that those issues had been decided on the first appeal and it was not error for the instructions to be refused at the second trial. The law of the case stated on the first appeal was binding on the trial court and also on the Supreme Court itself in the second appeal. Cremer v. Cremer Rodeo Land and Livestock Co., 192 M 208, 627 P2d 1199, 38 St. Rep. 574 (1981).

VERDICTS

Inadequacy of Verdict: A verdict as to the amount of damages awarded by the jury will be set aside because of inadequacy as well as for being excessive. Coombes v. Letcher, 104 M 371, 66 P2d 769 (1937).

FINAL DISPOSITION

Retroactive Applicability of Decision Prohibiting Antistacking of Insurance Provisions to Pending Cases: In Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003), the Supreme Court decided that antistacking provisions in an underinsured motorist policy were unconstitutional. Plaintiffs brought a class action in federal court claiming that Hardy entitled them to additional payments from past insurance claims that were not previously allowed because their policies did not allow for stacking. The federal court certified the question to the Supreme Court as to whether Hardy applied prospectively only or retroactively to qualified claims arising before the Hardy decision. The Supreme Court agreed with the decision in Harper v. Va. Dept. of Taxation, 509 US 86 (1993), that limiting a rule of law to its prospective application creates an arbitrary distinction between litigants based merely on the timing of their claims and that in the interests of fairness and finality, the line should be drawn between claims that are final and claims that are not. The Supreme Court then decided that the retroactivity test in Chevron Oil Co. v. Huson, 404 US 97 (1971), still applies to Montana civil decisions if all three Chevron factors are met: (1) the decision to be applied nonretroactively must establish a new principle of law, either by overruling clear past precedent on which litigants may have relied or by deciding an issue of first impression whose resolution was not clearly foreshadowed; (2) the court must weigh the merits and demerits in each case by looking at the prior history of the rule in question, its purpose and effect, and whether retroactive application will further or retard its operation; and (3) the inequity imposed by retroactive application has been weighed. However, the retroactive effect of a decision does not apply to cases that became final or that were settled prior to a decision's issuance. Thus, Hardy applies retroactively in qualifying circumstances on open claims arising before its issuance and is limited to cases pending on direct appeal or not yet final. Dempsey v. Allstate Ins. Co., 2004 MT 391, 325 M 207, 104 P3d 483 (2004).

Determination of Factual Issues Not Addressed by Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law — Remand: When a District Court has issued findings and conclusions and when potential factual issues may still exist, those matters are best left for determination by the trier of fact on remand. Norwood v. Serv. Distrib., Inc., 2000 MT 4, 297 M 473, 994 P2d 25, 57 St. Rep. 8 (2000), following Alley v. Butte & W. Min. Co., 77 M 477, 251 P 517 (1926).

Summary Judgment — No Motion: The Supreme Court has the power to order summary judgment for appellant although motion for summary judgment was not made by the appellant to the District Court. Treasure St. Indus., Inc. v. Welch, 173 M 403, 567 P2d 947 (1977).

Generally:

Where no cause appears why a new trial or the taking of further evidence should be ordered, it is the court's duty to determine the same finally. Fey v. A. A. Oil Corp., 129 M 300, 285 P2d 578 (1955).

Under this section the Supreme Court is authorized in reviewing the decrees in equity cases, where all of the facts were presented on an appeal and showed that the cause was ripe for an ultimate decision, to make such disposition of the case as the court below ought to have made. Bond v. Birk, 126 M 250, 247 P2d 199 (1952).

In an equity case on appeal the court reviews all questions of fact arising upon the evidence presented and determines such questions of fact as well as the questions of law, unless for good cause a new trial or the taking of further evidence is ordered in the court below. Hart v. Barron, 122 M 350, 204 P2d 797 (1949).

Where the defendant relied upon the inconsistent defenses, the judgment in favor of defendant will nevertheless be affirmed where the evidence shows establishment of his right on either theory. Dahlberg v. Lannen, 84 M 68, 274 P 151 (1929), distinguished in Shidu v. Hollenback, 133 M 265, 322 P2d 325 (1958).

Where there is no substantial conflict in the evidence, the function of the trial court is to determine the law applicable to the evidence viewed as an agreed statement of facts, and on appeal the Supreme Court is in as favorable a position as the trial court to make such determination. Dunn v. Beck, 80 M 414, 260 P 1047 (1927).

The Supreme Court will, in a proper case, where the same matter has been before it on a previous appeal and discrepancies appear in the court's computations, make final and independent disposition of the case with due regard for the findings of the trial court. In re Connolly's Estate, 79 M 445, 257 P 418 (1927).

On appeal the Supreme Court must review all questions of law and of fact and may, where all the facts are presented, determine the case finally for the purpose of putting an end to further litigation. State ex rel. USF&G Co. v. District Court, 77 M 594, 251 P 1061 (1926).

Under this section the Supreme Court has the power, on reversal of the judgment appealed from, to direct entry of the proper judgment in favor of appellant. Alley v. Butte & W. Min. Co., 77 M 477, 251 P 517 (1926), followed in Norwood v. Serv. Distrib., Inc., 2000 MT 4, 297 M 473, 994 P2d 25, 57 St. Rep. 8 (2000).

Where plaintiff failed to produce sufficient evidence to sustain a judgment, the cause will not be remanded for a new trial but with direction to dismiss the complaint. Bresee v. Smith, 73 M 312, 237 P 492 (1925).

On appeal where there is little or no conflict in the evidence, which in itself is unsatisfactory in character and furnishes no substantial basis for the findings of the trial court, the Supreme Court will not hesitate to set them aside and finally determine the rights of the parties. Gray v. Grant, 62 M 452, 206 P 410 (1922).

Where in an equity case the decree was founded upon incompatible theories, the Supreme Court will dispose of the cause on its merits. Lowry v. Carrier, 55 M 392, 177 P 756 (1918).

Where on appeal in an equity case the evidence introduced at the trial is all contained in the record and presents no substantial conflict but the decree was based upon an erroneous interpretation of the evidence, the Supreme Court will order such modification as will render a retrial unnecessary. Bielenberg v. Eyre, 44 M 397, 120 P 243 (1912).

Where the plaintiff should have been nonsuited or a directed verdict should have been entered and the proper motion was made and denied, the Supreme Court will usually direct a final disposition of the cause. Wertz v. Lamb, 43 M 477, 117 P 89 (1911).

It is the duty of the parties to introduce all their testimony in the trial court in order to enable the appellate tribunal to expedite the case. Stevens v. Trafton, 36 M 520, 93 P 810 (1908).

Where the Supreme Court, on appeal in an equity case, reverses the judgment but no cause appears why a new trial or the taking of further testimony should be ordered, it will enter a judgment finally determining the cause. N. Real Estate Loan & Title Co. v. Billings Loan & Trust Co., 36 M 356, 93 P 40 (1907).

The Supreme Court may dispose of the merits of the appeal upon a review of the evidence alone. Pew v. Johnson, 35 M 173, 88 P 770 (1907).

REMAND

Same-Sex Couples Seeking Declaratory and Injunctive Relief for Rights Afforded Married Couples — Relief Exceeds Bounds of Justiciable Controversy — Remanded to Allow Plaintiffs to Amend Complaint: Six same-sex couples filed suit against the state seeking declaratory and injunctive relief in order to receive protections and benefits equal to those provided to married couples under state law. Although they claimed that Montana's statutory scheme denied them several rights under Article II of the Montana Constitution — among them, the rights to equal protection, due process, and dignity — the plaintiffs did not seek a declaration that particular statutes were unconstitutional. The District Court granted the state's motion to dismiss, concluding that the matter exceeded the bounds of a justiciable controversy and that to grant the plaintiffs the broad injunction and declaratory judgment they sought would not terminate the controversy giving rise to the proceeding. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal but remanded the matter to the District Court to allow the plaintiffs the opportunity to amend their complaint to identify the statutes they claim violate their constitutional rights. Donaldson v. St., 2012 MT 288, 367 Mont. 228, 292 P.3d 364.

Power of Trial Court on Remand — No Provision Regarding Effect of Failure to Deny in Rules of Appellate Procedure: In 1993, Brown filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, arguing that prison officials had miscalculated his parole eligibility date. The Supreme Court denied that petition. In 1996, Brown filed a 42 U.S.C. 1983 complaint in District Court seeking to address alleged deprivations of his rights by prison officials under federal law, but the complaint was dismissed for failure to state a claim. The District Court concluded that the issues raised in the complaint were the same as those raised in the 1993 writ and were thus barred by collateral estoppel. Brown appealed, and in an unpublished opinion (Brown v. St., No. 96-651), the Supreme Court remanded, concluding that the District Court had mischaracterized the issues in the 1993 writ and that three of the claims were not barred by collateral estoppel. On remand, after an unexplained delay of 4 years, the District Court dismissed Brown's remaining claims, holding that they were not cognizable under federal law. Brown appealed again, arguing that the District Court erred by granting judgment to the state without first holding a hearing and asserting that under former Rule 8(d), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), the state's failure to respond to the issue in its brief constituted an admission that Brown was correct on the issue. However, Brown misapplied former Rule 8(d) to these proceedings. The Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure in effect did not contain a similar provision regarding the effect of failure to deny. Further, the remand order did not require the District Court to hold a hearing. On remand, the trial court is free to make any order or decision in further progress of the case that is not inconsistent with the appellate court's decision. The District Court was affirmed. Brown v. St., 2002 MT 58, 309 M 106, 46 P3d 42 (2002).

Introduction of New Issues on Remand: In a condemnation case, the city offered proof that a private water company had received a rate increase and entered into litigation with the Public Service Commission during the interim between appeal and remand. The lower court correctly held that the evidence was inadmissible because its admission would change in part the law of the case as established on appeal. In order to comply with the order of remand, the District Court can only consider the specific issues remanded and no others. Missoula v. Mtn. Water Co., 236 M 442, 771 P2d 103, 46 St. Rep. 494 (1989).

Supreme Court Mandate to Be Followed:

In applying the rule (that a lower court has no discretion to alter a particular Supreme Court judgment) to demands for relief on a second appeal, the Supreme Court adopted the reasoning in Idanha v. Consumers Power, Inc., 509 P2d 1226 (Or. Ct. App. 1973), that relief from asserted changed conditions or rights allegedly accruing or injuries allegedly occurring pending or following appeal can be had, if at all, only by resort to an original proceeding by which appropriate relief may be sought. Therefore, the discretion of the District Court on remand from the Supreme Court extends only to the entry of the proper judgment. Carey v. Wallner, 229 M 57, 744 P2d 881, 44 St. Rep. 1778 (1987), distinguished in Slater v. Cent. Plumbing & Heating Co., 1999 MT 257, 297 M 7, 993 P2d 654, 56 St. Rep. 1023 (1999).

Section 3-2-204 gives the Supreme Court power to remand a case to a lower court accompanied by instructions that direct further action be taken by it in accordance with those instructions. A lower court cannot ignore an appellate court's mandate in disposing of a case after it has been returned to the lower court. State ex rel. Olson v. District Court, 184 M 346, 602 P2d 1002, 36 St. Rep. 2086 (1979); In re Marriage of Sarsfield, 215 M 123, 695 P2d 473, 42 St. Rep. 231 (1985).

On the remand of the cause after appeal, it is the duty of the lower court to comply with the mandate of the Supreme Court and to obey the directions therein. The trial court commits error if it fails to follow the directions of the Supreme Court. In re Stoian's Estate, 138 M 384, 357 P2d 41 (1960), followed in St. v. Owens, 230 M 135, 748 P2d 473, 45 St. Rep. 89 (1988).

Modification of Judgment — Recalculation of Damages Based on When Interest to Accrue: The jury set the date on which interest on damages would begin to accrue as October 16, the expected date of harvest according to the jury form. Defendant argued that the determination was nonsensical because it put the date of expected harvest after the date in October on which the replacement crop was actually harvested. In modifying the judgment, the Supreme Court found no appearance of jury passion or prejudice in reaching the verdict and remanded for recalculation of damages using October 2 as the expected date of harvest. Vandalia Ranch, Inc. v. Farmers Union & Oil Supply Co., 221 M 253, 718 P2d 647, 43 St. Rep. 790 (1986).

Discretion to Receive Additional Evidence — Damages on Remand:

When the Supreme Court remanded for a redetermination of amount of damages arising from loss on sale of a business, without direction or restriction on method to be utilized by District Court, it was the trial court's discretion whether the record before it was sufficient for this purpose or whether additional evidence was required. Lovely v. Burroughs Corp., 169 M 454, 548 P2d 610 (1976).

Where the trial court, after hearing an action on its merits, erroneously determined that the complaint did not state a cause of action and the evidence clearly showed that plaintiff was entitled to recover, necessitating reversal of the judgment and remanding the cause for further proceedings, the court may, if necessary, hear further evidence to determine the amount of damages to which plaintiff is entitled. Schneider v. Nelson, 111 M 377, 110 P2d 972 (1940).

New Findings: When testimony given at trial did not conform to trial court's findings of fact concerning property valuation in divorce case, the case was remanded to trial court for hearing to establish proper division of property and alimony for support of the defendant. Whitman v. Whitman, 164 M 124, 519 P2d 966 (1974).

Remand for New Trial:

Court abused discretion in dismissing action for failure of plaintiff to prosecute case returned by Supreme Court to lower court for new trial where trial court failed to set trial for next jury term as per order of Supreme Court. Jangula v. U.S. Rubber Co., 149 M 241, 425 P2d 319 (1967).

In a case in which the successful party neither made a cross-assignment of error on the trial court's action in rejecting an offer of proof which should have been admitted nor perfected a cross-appeal, the case was remanded for a new trial. Phelps v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 105 M 195, 71 P2d 887 (1937).

While the Supreme Court may, in equity cases where a judgment cannot be sustained under the evidence, direct the entry of a proper judgment, it will not do so where the evidence is meager and confused and where the determinative finding of the court presented an entirely new element not included in the pleadings or proof but will remand the cause for a new trial. Horst v. Staley, 101 M 543, 54 P2d 876 (1936).

Modification of Judgment: Where in an action for services rendered, the plaintiff was properly entitled to recover but the trial court erred in refusing to limit recovery for the services, the judgment will not be reversed and a new trial ordered, but the cause will be remanded with instruction to modify the judgment. Callan v. Hample, 73 M 321, 236 P 550 (1925).

EQUITY CASES

Failure to Disclose FELA Claim in Bankruptcy — Intent Inappropriate for Summary Judgment — Judicial Estoppel: Dovey had financial difficulties that ultimately led him to file for bankruptcy. He first met with his bankruptcy attorney on June 1, 2004. At this initial meeting, Dovey filled out a worksheet listing all his debts and assets. Two weeks later, Dovey sustained severe injuries to his right knee, allegedly in the course of performing his duties as a conductor for BNSF. On October 21, 2004, Dovey filed a Chapter 7 petition for bankruptcy. In the attached forms, Dovey failed to list his potential claim against BNSF as an asset. Dovey's bankruptcy petition was discharged on February 8, 2005, and later terminated on April 3, 2006. On September 8, 2005, Dovey filed a complaint against BNSF under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA). A year later, on September 26, 2006, BNSF filed a motion for summary judgment on the grounds that Dovey was judicially estopped from pursuing his claim against the railroad. Since Dovey did not list his potential FELA claim against BNSF as an asset in his bankruptcy proceedings, BNSF argued, his claim against BNSF was barred by judicial estoppel. Dovey's attorney for the FELA claim stated he was unaware that Dovey had filed for bankruptcy until he read BNSF's motion. That attorney immediately contacted Dovey's bankruptcy attorney and trustee to notify them of Dovey's pending FELA lawsuit. Dovey's bankruptcy claim was reopened on October 20, 2006. In response to BNSF's summary judgment motion, Dovey claimed that he did not know that his potential FELA claim was an asset that should have been included in the settlement of his bankruptcy petition. Dovey noted that judicial estoppel is an affirmative defense that should have been raised in BNSF's answer to his complaint, not on a motion for summary judgment. BNSF subsequently brought a motion to amend its answer to assert judicial estoppel as an affirmative defense. The District Court granted BNSF's motion for summary judgment and dismissed Dovey's claims on the basis of judicial estoppel. Dovey appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Courts may invoke the equitable doctrine of judicial estoppel to prevent a party from asserting a claim that is incompatible with a position advanced by that party in a previous proceeding in which the party prevailed. The court relied on the three factors in U.S. v. Ibrahim, 522 F3d 1003, 1009 (9th Cir. 2008) to determine whether a party is judicially estopped from raising a certain claim: (1) whether a party's later position is "clearly inconsistent" with its original position; (2) whether the party has successfully persuaded the court of the earlier position; and (3) whether allowing the inconsistent position would allow the party to "derive an unfair advantage or impose an unfair detriment on the opposing party". Before reaching a conclusion on these three factors, the Ninth Circuit first addressed a threshold matter of whether the party intentionally sought to manipulate the courts by taking inconsistent positions. The District Court erred as a matter of law in failing to consider whether the inconsistent positions advanced by Dovey were attributable to mistake or inadvertence or whether he deliberately attempted to manipulate the courts by failing to report his FELA claim. The District Court also erred by failing to view the facts in the light most favorable to Dovey. Dovey raised a genuine issue of material fact as to whether his unscheduled claim was the product of a good faith mistake or an inadvertent omission or whether he deliberately attempted to manipulate the courts. The District Court erred by granting BNSF's motion for summary judgment and by dismissing Dovey's claim. A genuine issue of material fact exists as to whether Dovey's failure to list his claim against BNSF as an asset in his bankruptcy petition was intentional. The case was remanded to the District Court for further proceedings. Dovey v. BNSF Railway Co., 2008 MT 350, 346 M 305, 195 P3d 1223 (2008).

Claim of Resulting or Constructive Trust Barred by Judicial Estoppel and Clean Hands Doctrine: The parents created a family corporation and made their four children equal, sole shareholders through transfers and gifts. When two medical malpractice suits were filed against the father, he claimed that he had no right to or control over the corporation's assets. In a separate action, two sisters instituted a shareholder derivative action and petitioned for judicial review of their brother's fiduciary duties. The brother called a special meeting to issue additional stock to himself and to transfer property back to the parents, but the sisters objected and the brother was enjoined from doing so. The parents then claimed that the property was held in a resulting or constructive trust, and the District Court ordered that the assets and stock be conveyed to the parents. The sisters appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Both the sisters and the plaintiffs in the medical malpractice action relied to their detriment on the father's judicial declaration that he had no right to or control over the corporate assets, and the father was thus barred by judicial estoppel and the clean hands doctrine from raising equitable claims that a resulting or constructive trust existed. Judicial estoppel binds a party to that party's judicial declarations and precludes the party from taking a position inconsistent with the previous declaration in a subsequent action or proceeding. The clean hands doctrine provides that a party must not expect relief in equity unless the party comes into court with clean hands. The evidence here showed that the parents knowingly transferred assets to the family corporation to circumvent creditors and avoid estate taxes, and the Supreme Court will not aid a party whose claim had its inception in the party's wrongdoing, whether the victim of the wrongdoing is the other party or a third party. Kauffman-Harmon v. Kauffman, 2001 MT 238, 307 M 45, 36 P3d 408 (2001).

Elements of Judicial Estoppel: The doctrine of judicial estoppel binds a party to that party's judicial declarations and precludes the party from taking a position inconsistent with the previous declaration in a subsequent action or proceeding. Although judicial estoppel may be regarded as a form of estoppel, it is not strictly one of estoppel, but partakes rather of positive rules of procedure based on manifest justice and, to a greater or lesser degree, on considerations of the orderliness, regularity, and expedition of litigation. Those elements that are generally essential to the operation of equitable estoppel, such as reliance, injury, and prejudice to the individual, may not enter to the same extent into judicial estoppel. A party claiming that judicial estoppel bars another party from relitigating an issue must show that: (1) the estopped party had knowledge of the facts at the time that the original position was taken; (2) the estopped party succeeded in maintaining the original position; (3) the present position is inconsistent with the original position; and (4) the original position misled the adverse party so that allowing the estopped party to change its position would injuriously affect the adverse party. Kauffman-Harmon v. Kauffman, 2001 MT 238, 307 M 45, 36 P3d 408 (2001). See also Rowland v. Klies, 223 M 360, 726 P2d 310 (1986), Fiedler v. Grant of Equitable Relief From Forfeiture — Conditions: Defendant defaulted on a contract to operate a coal mine. The District Court granted summary judgment, finding no genuine issue of material fact regarding defendant's unlawful detainer. Defendant sought equitable relief pursuant to 28-1-104. The Supreme Court may, under appropriate circumstances, equitably relieve a party from the harsh effects of a forfeiture. Circumstances warranting equitable relief must not only meet the statutory requirements of tendering full compensation within a reasonable time after service of notice of default and not acting in a grossly negligent, willful, or fraudulent manner, but the party seeking relief must also assert facts that appeal to the conscience of the court of equity. Mere financial inability is not sufficient to appeal to the court's conscience. In this case, defendant's request for equitable relief was deficient because it did not meet statutory and common-law criteria, so the grant of summary judgment was affirmed. Glacier Park Co. v. Mtn., Inc., 285 M 420, 949 P2d 229, 54 St. Rep. 1222 (1997), following Kovacich v. Metals Bank & Trust Co., 139 M 449, 365 P2d 639 (1961), distinguishing Parrott v. Heller, 171 M 212, 557 P2d 819 (1976), and followed in Weter v. Archambault, 2002 MT 336, 313 M 284, 61 P3d 771 (2002).

Supreme Court Clarifies That Standard of Review for Estate Cases at Equity Is the "Clearly Erroneous" Test: In reviewing a lower court's decision that a will could be admitted to probate because it was not the product of undue influence, the Supreme Court stated that the standard of review in estate cases at equity was inconsistent and contradictory. Under the statute, the test has tended to be whether substantial credible evidence supports the lower court's findings, while under the rule, the test has been whether the lower court's findings are clearly erroneous. The Supreme Court held that nothing in the statute precludes the use of the "clearly erroneous" test, while the rule, by its terms, mandates its use. Therefore, with respect to estate cases at equity, the standard of review would be the "clearly erroneous" test. In re Estate of Tipp, 281 M 120, 933 P2d 182, 54 St. Rep. 90 (1997).

Case Subject to Landlord-Tenant Law Does Not Lie in Equity: The Supreme Court held that the dispute between the parties was subject to the legal remedies provided by landlord-tenant law and therefore could not be heard in equity. The Supreme Court went on to state that it was unable to look at the lower court's order as an equitable ruling and could not apply the more deferential standard of review that was applied to equitable rulings. Eagle Watch Inv., Inc. v. Smith, 278 M 187, 924 P2d 257, 53 St. Rep. 757 (1996).

General Equity Powers: A court sitting in equity is empowered to determine all questions involving the case and to do complete justice. This includes the power to fashion an equitable result, to determine any other equities connected with the main subject of the suit, and to grant all relief necessary to the entire adjustment of the subject. Trustees of the Wash.-Idaho-Mont. Carpenters-Employers Retirement Trust Fund v. Galleria Partnership, 239 M 250, 780 P2d 608, 46 St. Rep. 1661 (1989), followed in Nimmick v. Hart, 248 M 1, 808 P2d 481, 48 St. Rep. 293 (1991).

Review of Fact Questions:

In an equity case the trial court is required to review all questions of fact arising upon the evidence presented in the record, whether or not specifications of error are made, and determine those questions as well as questions of law. Rennie v. Nistler, 226 M 412, 735 P2d 1124, 44 St. Rep. 764 (1987).

The rule that questions of fact may be reviewed on appeal in equity cases provides some protection to the losing party in a case in which the trial court has adopted verbatim the prevailing party's proposed findings and conclusions. Sawyer-Adecor Int'l, Inc. v. Anglin, 198 M 440, 646 P2d 1194, 39 St. Rep. 1118 (1982), followed in Daniels v. Thomas, Dean & Hoskins, Inc., 246 M 125, 804 P2d 359, 47 St. Rep. 2293 (1990).

Breach of Contract Action Sounding in Equity — Mutuality of Consent: Although an action for breach of contract to lend money is usually an action at law, the case sounded in equity where borrower argued that the contract was illusory and thus void because it lacked mutuality and that the lender's interpretation of the contract rendered the contract unconscionable and required the contract to be voided or reformed, and the lender raised the equitable defenses of estoppel, waiver, and laches. Shimsky v. Valley Credit Union, 208 M 186, 676 P2d 1308, 41 St. Rep. 258 (1984).

Equity Theory Raised Below but Not Argued at Length Until Appeal: The broad standard of review used in equitable cases was needed where appellant had raised two legal theories below but essentially argued only the first, the court and respondent had concentrated on the first, appellant conceded on the first theory on appeal and argued the second theory, an equitable one, at length, and the lower court's memo in support of its dismissal of the action related only to the first theory. Shimsky v. Valley Credit Union, 208 M 186, 676 P2d 1308, 41 St. Rep. 258 (1984).

Standards for Review of Findings of Fact:

In equitable causes where issues are close, a degree of deference will be accorded the findings of the trial court since it is in a better position to make decisions of fact. Former Rule 52(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), requires findings of fact made by the District Court to be upheld unless they are clearly erroneous, but the rule does not make any distinction between equitable causes and cases at law; thus the Supreme Court in reviewing an action of an equitable nature must look to 3-2-204(5) and independently review all questions of fact as well as questions of law. In causes where the issues are not close, the standard for this review is to uphold the District Court on questions of fact unless there is a decided preponderance of the evidence against its findings. Rase v. Castle Mtn. Ranch, Inc., 193 M 209, 631 P2d 680, 38 St. Rep. 992 (1981).

Supreme Court in an equity case not only has the function of reviewing law involved but also reviews evidence to the extent of determining whether findings of fact by the trial court are supported by substantial evidence. White v. Nollmeyer, 151 M 387, 443 P2d 873 (1968). See also Mitchell v. Boyer, 237 M 434, 774 P2d 384, 46 St. Rep. 928 (1989).

The Supreme Court in reviewing an equity case will review the law therein and also will review the evidence to that extent necessary to ascertain whether the findings of fact by the trial court are substantially supported and sufficient to support the conclusions of law derived therefrom. Bender v. Bender, 144 M 470, 397 P2d 957 (1965).

In an equity case it is proper for the appellate court to pry into the factual issues of the case, and the decision must hinge on factual observations unless the case is returned to the lower court for further proceedings. Jenson v. Olson, 144 M 224, 395 P2d 465 (1964).

The Supreme Court in reviewing equity cases will hesitate to overturn findings of the trial court based upon substantial conflicting evidence which would justify an inference in favor of either side of the controversy. Bouma v. Bynum Irrigation District, 139 M 360, 364 P2d 47 (1961).

In entering upon a review of the evidence on appeal in an equity case, the Supreme Court indulges the presumption that the judgment of the trial court is correct and will draw every legitimate inference therefrom to support the presumption. Havre Irrigation Co. v. Majerus, 132 M 410, 318 P2d 1076 (1957), followed in Meridian Minerals Co. v. Nicor Minerals, Inc., 228 M 274, 742 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1516 (1987), and distinguished in Eagle Watch Inv., Inc. v. Smith, 278 M 187, 924 P2d 257, 53 St. Rep. 757 (1996).

The Supreme Court is without original jurisdiction to decide a question of fact depending upon conflicting evidence not passed upon by the trial court. Hoppin v. Lang, 81 M 330, 263 P 421 (1928).

The Supreme Court in an equity case is not bound by any finding of the trial court even though unchallenged but may, upon examination of the evidence, determine a question of fact for itself and overturn such finding if there is a decided preponderance of the evidence against it. Stanton v. Occidental Life Ins. Co., 81 M 44, 261 P 620 (1927).

The Supreme Court on appeal in equity cases must review and determine all questions of fact, due allowance being made for the more advantageous position occupied by the trial Judge in passing upon the credibility of the witnesses, as well as questions of law, unless for good cause shown a new trial should be ordered. Giebler v. Giebler, 69 M 347, 222 P 436 (1924); Barnard Realty Co. v. Butte, 55 M 384, 177 P 402 (1918).

Review on Record Only: Where judgment was rendered against the appellant in a proceeding to quiet title and for an accounting of rents and profits from real property and appellant subsequently appealed to the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court would not consider depositions taken in a different action and submitted by the appellant but not made a part of the record in the case before the court. In appeals from equitable proceedings, the Supreme Court may not consider evidence extraneous to the record. Downs v. Smyk, 185 M 16, 604 P2d 307, 36 St. Rep. 2300 (1979), followed in In re Marriage of Scott, 246 M 10, 803 P2d 620, 47 St. Rep. 2237 (1990), and in In re George Trust, 253 M 341, 834 P2d 1378, 49 St. Rep. 424 (1992). See also Goodover v. Lindey's Inc., 255 M 430, 843 P2d 765, 49 St. Rep. 1059 (1992).

Contradictory Evidence: There was sufficient evidence to support the trial court's findings, conclusion, and judgment when contradictions appeared in the evidence. Hagfeldt v. Mahaffey, 176 M 16, 575 P2d 915 (1978).

Laches: The plaintiff's claim of a resulting trust in real property, raised after a period of 24 years and after the principal parties are dead, warrants the application of the doctrine of laches. Adair v. Capital Inv. Co., 165 M 26, 525 P2d 548 (1974).

Evidence in Supreme Court: In equity cases and matters of an equitable nature where questions of fact are presented for review, the testimony must be presented by question and answer; if not so presented, the appellant is not entitled to have the evidence considered for any purpose, and in such circumstances, if it does consider it, the appellate court will place greater reliance upon the court's findings than would otherwise be necessary. Stephenson v. Rainbow Flying Serv., Inc., 99 M 241, 42 P2d 735 (1935); Sec. St. Bank v. McIntyre, 71 M 186, 228 P 618 (1924).

PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS

Challenge to State Education Funding Considered Justiciable Question: The District Court held that the state system of funding public education was unconstitutional. On appeal, the state contended that the issue was nonjusticiable under the political question doctrine in Baker v. Carr, 369 US 186 (1962). The Supreme Court recognized that nonself-executing constitutional clauses addressed to the Legislature are nonjusticiable political questions. Because Art. X, sec. 1, Mont. Const., constitutes a directive to the Legislature, that section initially presents a nonself-executing, nonjusticiable political question. However, once the Legislature executes a provision that implicates individual constitutional rights, under City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 US 507 (1997), courts can determine whether the enactment fulfilled the Legislature's constitutional responsibility. Here, once the Legislature addressed the threshold political issue by creating a basic system of free public schools, the Supreme Court found it not only justiciable but incumbent upon the court to ensure that the education system met the constitutional guarantee of the individual right to a quality education. Columbia Falls Elementary School District No. 6 v. St., 2005 MT 69, 326 M 304, 109 P3d 257 (2005).

Water Rights Question Not Raised in Complaint or Pretrial Order and Waived at Trial Properly Excluded: Plaintiff requested the District Court to refer determination of his water rights to the Water Court. However, he did not raise the water rights question in his complaint; the District Court specifically excepted the issue from trial; the issue was not raised in the pretrial order; and the issue was expressly waived by plaintiff at the start of the trial. His request was properly denied. The Supreme Court will not hold the District Court in error for a procedure in which plaintiff acquiesced at trial. Boylan v. Van Dyke, 247 M 259, 806 P2d 1024, 48 St. Rep. 188 (1991).

Custody Petition Withdrawn at Trial Nonappealable: Father's counsel withdrew at trial the portion of father's petition seeking sole custody. Because the custody motion was excised from the petition at hearing, the issue constituted new grounds and could not be asserted on appeal. In re Marriage of West, 233 M 47, 758 P2d 282, 45 St. Rep. 1281 (1988).

Nature of District Court Order — Mandamus — Action at Law: When the order of the District Court commands a school district to perform a duty that devolves upon it by operation of law, its nature is that of mandamus. Mandamus is an action at law. Therefore, 3-2-204 does not apply. The District Court findings are to be reviewed on appeal under former Rule 52(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). In re the "A" Family, 184 M 145, 602 P2d 157, 36 St. Rep. 1898 (1979).

Specific Performance: Where District Court decree ordering conveyance of property contained directions as to distribution of the sale price that could be construed as at variance from its findings as to ownership, Supreme Court could modify decree so as to distribute money in accordance with the findings. Morris v. Monk, 158 M 163, 489 P2d 1029 (1971).

Probate Proceedings: Supreme Court reversed where evidence did not support court finding that will was drafted at direction of decedent and that he was aware of its contents when he signed. Erickson v. Erickson, 152 M 179, 448 P2d 144 (1968).

Nuisance Cases: Supreme Court will not hesitate to set aside lower court finding that nuisance exists where there is no substantial evidence on which to base finding. Kasala v. Kalispell Pee Wee Baseball League, 151 M 109, 439 P2d 65, (1968).

Declaratory Judgment Action: In an action for a declaratory judgment that an act was unconstitutional and for an injunction against enforcement thereof, the Supreme Court had the duty to review all questions of fact, but there was a presumption that the trial court's findings were correct. Garden Spot Mkt., Inc. v. Byrne, 141 M 382, 378 P2d 220 (1963).

Divorce and Separate Maintenance Cases:

In separate maintenance action by wife, Supreme Court had the right and duty to review the facts, but this power or duty did not necessarily require the overturning of the findings made by the trial Judge. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 132 M 303, 317 P2d 856 (1957).

Where a decree of divorce must be reversed, it is the duty of the Supreme Court to determine the questions of law and fact presented by the record. It may consider written evidence that was erroneously excluded by the trial court but incorporated in the record as properly before it. Bordeaux v. Bordeaux, 43 M 102, 115 P 25 (1911).

Quiet Title Actions: The Supreme Court may direct that a proper judgment be entered in any case. Thus in a quiet title action the judgment may be modified to conform with the findings. Warren v. Warren, 127 M 259, 261 P2d 364 (1953).

Foreclosure Proceedings: Where in a mechanics' lien (now construction lien) foreclosure suit judgment was entered against one improperly made a party defendant, the Supreme Court has authority under this section to correct the error by directing entry of proper judgment. Arnold v. Genzberger, 96 M 358, 31 P2d 296 (1934).

Probate Proceedings: The Supreme Court has power under this section to weigh the evidence (though it mainly consists of depositions) to determine heirship and to reverse the judgment if the findings are found to be against the weight of evidence. In re Colbert's Estate, 51 M 455, 153 P 1022 (1915).

3-2-205. Injunctions.

Case Notes

Criteria Met for Supreme Court Jurisdiction of Death Row Petition for Injunctive Relief: Pursuant to the version of 46-19-103 that was in effect at the time that Langford was sentenced for execution, he affirmatively elected that death be imposed by hanging rather than lethal injection. Langford appealed to the District Court for a declaration that execution by hanging was cruel and unusual punishment that violated the eighth amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The District Court denied the motion, holding that Langford's choice of hanging rendered the cruel and unusual punishment argument moot. Langford appealed to the appropriate federal courts for a writ of habeas corpus, applying the same argument. During the pendency of Langford's federal habeas corpus proceedings, the Montana Legislature met and amended 46-19-103 by removing the hanging option, rendering the federal proceedings moot and nonjusticiable. Langford then filed an original proceeding with the Montana Supreme Court, asserting that the state impermissibly truncated his ability to fully appeal his death sentence by removing hanging as a means of execution and that the state should be permanently enjoined from executing him under the current version of 49-19-103. After examining the applicable statutory criteria, the Supreme Court accepted jurisdiction of the petition for writ of injunction because: (1) the state was clearly a party to the action; (2) the public had an interest in establishing and maintaining the validity of state actions in a proceeding that attempted to curtail the state's ability to enact, amend, and enforce state legislation; and (3) Langford's imminent execution constituted sufficient emergency circumstances to render due consideration in the trial court and appeal to the Supreme Court an inadequate remedy. Langford v. St., 287 M 107, 951 P2d 1357, 54 St. Rep. 1522 (1997).

Original Action in Supreme Court:

The Supreme Court has the power to issue a Writ of Injunction in a case wherein public interests are involved. State ex rel. Fisher v. School District, 97 M 358, 34 P2d 522 (1934).

To authorize the Supreme Court to issue the Writ of Injunction in the exercise of its original equity jurisdiction, as distinguished from its power to grant the Writ to preserve the subject of the action pending appeal, the rights of the "public" must be involved. State ex rel. Helena v. Helena Waterworks Co., 43 M 169, 115 P 200 (1911).

Under the constitutional grant of original jurisdiction to the Supreme Court, where the facts stated in an application for the Writ of Injunction present a case affecting the interests of the whole people of the state, the court has jurisdiction to issue the Writ. State ex rel. Clarke v. Moran, 24 M 433, 63 P 390 (1900).

Injunction Pending Appeal: The Supreme Court has inherent power to preserve the subject of litigation and the status of the parties pending an appeal. Finlen v. Heinze, 27 M 107, 69 P 829, 70 P 517 (1902).

Final Judgment:

The Supreme Court is without authority to grant an order modifying or vacating a perpetual injunction pending appeal from a judgment embracing it. Maloney v. King, 26 M 492, 68 P 1014 (1902).

This section does not have reference to staying the operation or effect of injunction orders. It has to do only with interlocutory orders of the District Court or Judge and not with final judgments. Maloney v. King, 26 M 492, 68 P 1014 (1902). See Finlen v. Heinze, 27 M 107, 69 P 829, 70 P 517 (1902).

Temporary Restraining Order: An order vacating a temporary restraining order is an order dissolving an injunction from which an appeal lies, and the Supreme Court could continue the injunction order in force pending an appeal from the order of the District Judge dissolving the injunction. Bennett Bros. Co. v. Congdon, 20 M 208, 50 P 556 (1897).

Supreme Court Equally Divided on Sufficiency of Notice of Appeal — Judgment Appealed From Affirmed: When the Supreme Court was equally divided on the issue of whether a defendant's notice of appeal was legally sufficient, three justices having voted that the notice was sufficient, three justices having voted that it was not sufficient, and one justice having abstained, the court ruled that there had not been a determination by the majority of the court that the notice was sufficient and that therefore the court did not have jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Case Notes

Time Bar on Writ of Certiorari to Review Contempt Proceedings: In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court was asked to establish a timeframe within which a petition for review of a contempt order must be filed. The issue was whether the time limitation should come from Title 25, which includes the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure and the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure, or from Title 27, which prescribes the various statutes of limitation for the commencement of actions. The court noted that there is no appeal, as such, from an order of contempt in a civil proceeding and that the exclusive method of review of civil contempt orders (with certain exceptions) is through a writ of certiorari or writ of review. That review is generally limited to jurisdictional questions and whether evidence supports the contempt. Therefore, the issue of timeliness for filing a petition for a writ of certiorari or review is not a statute of limitations issue, and to mechanically characterize those writs for the review of contempt proceedings as original proceedings governed by the 5-year statute of limitations in 27-2-231 would be to deny the basic nature of appellate review. Further, petitions for writs of certiorari to review contempt proceedings are fundamentally different from other original proceedings commenced in the Supreme Court and from petitions for writs of supervisory control, which do not so much involve appellate review of and a decision on the underlying proceedings as they involve the court dealing with discreet questions of law during the pendency of the underlying proceedings. Because the timeframe in which to file petitions for writs of certiorari to review contempt proceedings is a procedural issue analogous to the procedure for filing a notice of appeal, the Supreme Court held that former Rule 72, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), former Rule 1, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), former Rule 17, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), and 27-25-103 require that the timeframe for those petitions be determined by the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure. Specifically, pursuant to former Rule 5, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), a petition for a writ of certiorari to review contempt proceedings must be filed with the Clerk of the District Court within 30 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding, unless the state is a party, in which case the petition must be filed within 60 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding. This may not be construed to limit the Supreme Court's power to grant writs of supervisory control or to consider applications for other types of original proceedings. The Supreme Court chose not to establish a precedent that allows contempt proceedings to be delayed until the underlying cause is resolved. Jones v. District Court, 2001 MT 276, 307 M 305, 37 P3d 682 (2001), overruling Shaffroth v. Lamere, 104 M 175, 65 P2d 610 (1937), to the extent that Shaffroth holds that the general 5-year statute of limitations in 27-2-231 applies to all writs of review authorized in 27-25-102.

Denial of Bond Pending Appeal — Method of Supreme Court Review — Jurisdiction: After conviction for negligent homicide and on related charges, Ingraham moved the District Court to continue bond pending appeal. The District Court denied the motion, finding that Ingraham was a danger to the community and therefore did not meet the requirements of 46-9-107. Ingraham then moved the Supreme Court, pursuant to former Rule 22, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), to continue bond pending appeal or, in the alternative, to accept appeal of the District Court's order denying bond, pursuant to former Rule 1, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), and 46-20-104. The Attorney General moved to dismiss, contending that there was no provision in law for appeal from a District Court order denying bond pending appeal and that Ingraham should have brought an original habeas corpus proceeding. The Supreme Court agreed with the Attorney General and dismissed Ingraham's motion or appeal, holding that Ingraham should have brought a petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 46-22-103. Ingraham then filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which was filed with Justice Trieweiler pursuant to this section. Justice Trieweiler granted the petition to the extent necessary for the District Court to hold an evidentiary hearing as provided by statute, under the theory that the District Court was the more appropriate court for the hearing than was the Supreme Court. The Attorney General opposed the order by applying to the full Supreme Court for a writ of supervisory control, arguing, contrary to the state's previous position, that 46-22-103 does not really apply to persons convicted in a criminal case and that the more appropriate procedure was an original proceeding "in the nature of habeas corpus" before the full Supreme Court. The application for a writ of supervisory control was denied, was treated by the Supreme Court as a late-filed response to Ingraham's petition for a writ of habeas corpus, and was referred to Justice Trieweiler. Justice Trieweiler determined that it was inappropriate for him alone to determine the form of review of the District Court's denial of bond. Justice Trieweiler also determined that: (1) Ingraham had no constitutional right to bond pending appeal; (2) Ingraham did have a right to the proper exercise of the District Court's discretion in the application of 46-9-107; and (3) that right was a substantial right for the purposes of 46-20-104. For these reasons, Justice Trieweiler vacated his previous order granting Ingraham's petition for a writ of habeas corpus and referred the matter to the full Supreme Court for review of the District Court's order denying bond pending appeal. St. v. Ingraham, 284 M 77, 945 P2d 16, 54 St. Rep. 614 (1997).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Case Notes

Failure to Take Oath — Discharge at Will: Plaintiff served in the capacity of deputy clerk of the Supreme Court for 20 years. He ran for the Clerk of Court position but was defeated. The newly elected Clerk terminated plaintiff and appointed a new deputy. Plaintiff contended he was unlawfully discharged. Plaintiff was not appointed in writing as required by 2-16-205, nor did he subscribe, take, or file an oath of office as required by 3-2-406. When an officer's term is not definite, his appointment is at will. Section 2-16-213 provides that the term of the deputy clerk is at the pleasure of the appointing power. Under 2-16-501, an office becomes vacant upon refusal or neglect to file the official oath within the time prescribed. The court held that upon plaintiff's failure to file an oath of office, his term of office terminated and the Clerk of Court could at any time fill the vacancy by appointment. Conboy v. St., 214 M 492, 693 P2d 547, 42 St. Rep. 120 (1985).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 28 deleted (2) and (3) that read: "(2) Reports of all cases shall be furnished to the West Publishing Company for inclusion in its publication, the Pacific Reporter, and to any other private printing or duplicating concern requesting the reports for publication.

(3) The department of administration, on request of the supreme court, shall contract with a publishing house to publish volumes of reports. The style, size, and format of the reports shall be determined by the justices. The department of administration shall prepare and issue a call for bids and, in accordance with the terms and specifications of the call, contract with the lowest and best bidder. The contract shall provide that the copies of the reports purchased by state or local governmental agencies of Montana, including the reports purchased by the supreme court pursuant to 3-2-604, shall be sold to them by the publisher at the cost of publication"; and made minor changes in style.

1981 Amendment: Added the last sentence of (3) requiring the contract to provide that copies of reports for government agencies be purchased at cost.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 28 in (1), in introductory clause after "purchase", deleted "up to 221 copies from the publisher" and after "distribute" substituted "each volume" for "them at no charge and in the following manner:

(a) to the state library for distribution, five copies;

(b) to the library of congress, four copies;

(c) to the university of Montana-Missoula law library, two copies"; at end of (1)(a), after "judge", deleted "and county attorney, one copy"; deleted former (1)(f) through (1)(h) that read: "(f) to the attorney general, 11 copies;

(g) to other institutions, publishers, authors, and libraries with which the state law librarian has established a system of exchange for materials of comparable value, up to 50 copies; and

(h) to the university of Montana-Missoula up to 50 copies to be used by the law librarian of the university for the purpose of exchanges for materials of comparable value with libraries, universities, and institutions of higher education in other states"; in (2), near beginning after "distributed", substituted "pursuant to subsection (1)" for "to state, district, and other officers in the state"; and made minor changes in style.

Name Change — Directions to Code Commissioner: Pursuant to sec. 36, Ch. 308, L. 1995, in this section the Code Commissioner changed "university of Montana" to "university of Montana-Missoula".

1981 Amendment: Changed "secretary of state" to "supreme court" and "300 copies" to "up to 221 copies" in the first sentence of (1); inserted "at no charge" in the second sentence of (1); deleted the law library of each state and territory, the judges of the United States district courts in the western states, the clerk of district courts in Montana, and state offices from list receiving copies in (1); inserted five copies to the state library, two copies to the University of Montana law library, 11 copies to the attorney general in (1); decreased from five to four the number of copies to the library of congress; inserted "for materials of comparable value, up to 50 copies" and changed "literary and scientific" to "other" before institutions in (1)(g); inserted "for materials of comparable value" and "libraries" in (1)(h); deleted receipt requirement from (2); and made changes in phraseology.

Definition of Districts and Assignment of Judges

Part Compiler's Comments

Judicial Redistricting Commission: Chapter 353, L. 2015, established a judicial redistricting commission to study whether judicial redistricting is necessary and to report to the 65th Legislature. Chapter 353 was effective July 1, 2015, and terminates June 30, 2017.

Study of Redistricting of State Judicial Districts: Section 1, Ch. 338, L. 1999, provided: "Study of necessity of redistricting state judicial districts. (1) The legislative council is requested to designate an appropriate legislative interim committee to study the issue of whether the state's judicial districts should be redistricted. The committee shall report the results of its study to the 57th regular session of the legislature. If the committee determines that redistricting is necessary based on the factors listed in subsection (2), the committee shall prepare for introduction in the 57th regular session of the legislature legislation redistricting the state's judicial districts.

(2) Factors to be considered by the committee shall include but not be limited to:

(a) the population of the districts as determined by the latest estimates prepared and issued by the United States bureau of the census and made available to the census and economic information center of the Montana department of commerce;

(b) each district's case load;

(c) the relative proportions of civil, criminal, juvenile, and family law cases in each district's case load;

(d) the extent to which special masters, alternative dispute resolution techniques, and other measures have been used in the districts;

(e) the distances between county seats in existing districts and any districts that may be proposed by the committee;

(f) the impact on counties of any changes proposed in the districts; and

(g) other factors that the committee determines to be significant to the determination of whether the state's judicial districts should be redistricted.

(3) For the purposes of this study, subcommittees of the committee must include, to the extent allowed by law, judges, county commissioners, and other affected parties.

(4) The legislative council may accept gifts, grants, donations, and other funding to assist in this study."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 454 in introductory clause increased number of judicial districts from 21 to 22; in (13) after "Yellowstone" deleted references to Stillwater, Carbon, and Big Horn Counties; inserted (22) establishing the 22nd district; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 454, L. 1999, provided: "(1) The additional judge for the 11th judicial district and the judge for the new 22nd judicial district must be appointed pursuant to the provisions of Title 3, chapter 1, part 10, to take office in January 2000. There must be an election for the offices at the general election to be held in November 2000 for 6-year terms to begin in January 2001.

(2) The additional judge for the 20th judicial district must be elected at the general election to be held in November 2000 and shall take office in January 2001."

1991 Amendment: In introductory clause increased number of districts from 20 to 21; in (4) deleted Ravalli County; inserted (21) establishing 21st Judicial District in Ravalli County; and made minor changes in style.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 642, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, demographics have changed dramatically in Montana in the last decade; and

WHEREAS, census data that is currently available will be the most reliable data available for reapportioning judicial districts for the next decade; and

WHEREAS, the number of filings in some district courts has grown at a greater rate than the number of filings in other district courts; and

WHEREAS, the cost of the court system is an issue of increasing importance in Montana."

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 642, L. 1991, provided: "The judge for the 21st judicial district must be elected at the general election to be held in November 1992 and shall take office on January 1, 1993."

1983 Amendment: Increased number of judicial districts from 19 to 20; moved Prairie County from 16th district to 7th; moved Chouteau County from 8th to 12th; moved Blaine County from 12th to 17th; moved Treasure County from 13th to 16th; and moved Lake and Sanders Counties from 4th to 20th. Section 5, Ch. 293, L. 1983, provided that the amendments are effective January 7, 1985, unless early elections are held, in which case the necessary portions of the amendments are effective January 2, 1984.

Attorney General's Opinions

Time for Election of Newly Created District Court Judgeships: Subsection (1) of 13-1-104 sets forth the schedule for general elections to be held in even-numbered years and lists those offices for which such an election is to be held, including the office of District Court Judge. Subsection (2) of 13-1-104 provides the schedule for holding general elections in odd-numbered years, and its list of officers to be elected does not include District Court Judges but does include "any other officers specified by law for election in odd-numbered years". Chapter 293, L. 1983, increased the number of judgeships in several judicial districts and provided that the new judgeships could be initially filled at either the 1983 or 1984 general election. The provision of Ch. 293, L. 1983, allowing election of judges in an odd-numbered year is not in conflict with 13-1-104 because, while subsection (1) would appear to require elections in even-numbered years, Ch. 293, L. 1983, contains specific authority for District Court Judges to be elected in odd-numbered years and thus the clause "any other officers specified by law for election in odd-numbered years" of subsection (2) is applicable. Further, 13-1-107(2) which sets forth the time for holding a primary election in an odd-numbered year is the law applicable to any odd-numbered year primary election held under Ch. 293, L. 1983. 40 A.G. Op. 13 (1983).

Length of Term of Newly Created Judgeships to Be Six Years: Chapter 293, L. 1983, increased the number of judgeships in several judicial districts and provided that the new judgeships could be initially filled at either the 1983 or 1984 general election. According to Art. VII, sec. 7(2), Mont. Const., and 3-5-203, the length of term of a District Court Judge is 6 years. In response to the question of the length of term of judges elected to positions created by Ch. 293, L. 1983, the Attorney General ruled that the term was 6 years because: (1) neither the constitutional provision nor the governing statute was altered by Ch. 293, L. 1983; (2) a provision in the original draft of the bill that altered the length of the term was deleted from the final version of the bill; and (3) assuming that the first election for new judgeships is compared to the filling of vacancies in office, it would be arbitrary to choose 1989, the year contained in the deleted provision of the original bill, as the year in which the terms of the new "vacant" offices expire. 40 A.G. Op. 13 (1983).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 357 in (3) deleted reference to the 4th district and at end deleted "each"; inserted (4) concerning the 4th district; in (5) substituted "eight judges" for "six judges"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

Transition: Section 2, Ch. 357, L. 2017, provided: "(1) The additional judges for the 13th judicial district must be elected at the general election to be held in November 2018 for a 6-year term to begin January 2, 2019.

(2) The additional judge for the 4th judicial district must be appointed pursuant to the provisions of Title 3, chapter 1, part 10, to take office October 1, 2018, for a term ending December 31, 2020, and, if elected, a subsequent 6-year term to begin January 1, 2021."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 422 inserted (2) establishing three judges for the 18th district; in (3) inserted "4th, 8th", deleted "18th", and substituted "four judges" for "three judges"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) in the 4th and 8th districts, four judges"; in (4) increased the number of judges in the 13th district from five to six; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2010.

Election of Judges: Section 2, Ch. 422, L. 2009, provided: "The additional judges for the 1st, 11th, and 13th judicial districts must be elected at the general election to be held in November 2010 for a 6-year term to begin January 3, 2011."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 373 in (1) deleted reference to 18th judicial district; in (2) inserted reference to 18th judicial district; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 25, 2005.

Provisional Appointment — Election: Section 2, Ch. 373, L. 2005, provided: "The additional judge for the 18th judicial district must be appointed pursuant to the provisions of Title 3, chapter 1, part 10, to take office on or after January 2, 2006. There must be an election for the office at the general election to be held in November 2006 for a 6-year term to begin in January 2007."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 497 in (1) inserted 21st district; in (2) deleted 8th district; in (3) inserted 8th district; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2002.

Initial Election of New Judges: Section 3, Ch. 497, L. 2001, provided: "The additional judges for the 8th and 21st judicial districts must be elected at the general election to be held in November 2002 and shall take office in January 2003."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 454 in (1) after "7th" deleted "11th" and after "18th" inserted "and 20th"; in (2) after "8th" inserted "and 11th"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 454, L. 1999, provided: "(1) The additional judge for the 11th judicial district and the judge for the new 22nd judicial district must be appointed pursuant to the provisions of Title 3, chapter 1, part 10, to take office in January 2000. There must be an election for the offices at the general election to be held in November 2000 for 6-year terms to begin in January 2001.

(2) The additional judge for the 20th judicial district must be elected at the general election to be held in November 2000 and shall take office in January 2001."

1983 Amendment: Increased the number of judges in the 1st district from two to three; in the 7th district from one to two; and in the 13th district from four to five.

Section 3, Ch. 293, L. 1983, provided: "Selection of new judges. (1) Except as provided in subsection (2), the judgeships created by this act [Ch. 293] shall be initially filled at the 1984 general election, and the individuals elected shall take office on the first Monday of January, 1985.

(2) A judgeship created by this act [Ch. 293] may be initially filled at the 1983 general election if a majority of the county commissioners in each county within the judicial district where the judge will be elected agree to conduct the election. The individual elected shall take office on the first Monday of January, 1984." Section 5, Ch. 293, L. 1983, provided that the amendments to this section are effective January 7, 1985, unless early elections are held, in which case necessary portions of the amendments are effective January 2, 1984.

New Judge — How Selected: Section 2, Ch. 542, L. 1979, provided: "The judgeship created by this act shall be filled initially at the 1980 general election, and the individual elected shall take office on the first Monday of January, 1981." Chapter 542 added a fourth judge to the 4th Judicial District.

3-5-112. Authority of chief justice.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 110 at beginning of (1) inserted "The chief justice may by written order assign a district judge to hold court in a county of another district"; in (1)(a), after "district court", inserted "in another district" and after "judge" substituted "of the other district or acting for the other district" for "or judges thereof or by a district judge requested by such judge or judges to hold such court"; in (1)(b), after "court", substituted "in the other district" for "in any county" and after "promptness" deleted "the governor may, upon application of any interested person, by an order in writing, require some district judge to hold court in said county for such time as may be specified in the order"; inserted (2) providing that a District Judge assigned to another district shall hold court for the time specified in the order; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 10, 1995.

Case Notes

Authority of Governor:

If a Judge declines to properly perform his official duties, relief must be had from the Supreme Court rather than from the executive power of the state. (See 1995 amendment.) State ex rel. Bennett v. Bonner, 123 M 414, 214 P2d 747 (1950).

Where there is a duly qualified and acting Judge in district, Governor is without power to order Judges of another district into various counties to assume judicial powers. (See 1995 amendment.) State ex rel. Bennett v. Bonner, 123 M 414, 214 P2d 747 (1950).

Constitutionality: This section was held valid, upon original application by the State for a Writ of Supervisory Control, to review an order of a District Judge declining to assume jurisdiction of a cause over which he had been called by the Acting Governor to preside. (See 1995 amendment.) State ex rel. Smith v. District Court, 116 M 251, 151 P2d 500 (1944), explained in State ex rel. Bennett v. Bonner, 123 M 414, 214 P2d 747 (1950).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 473 in (1) inserted reference to 3-20-102; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 473, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that there are a large number of asbestos-related claims by Montana citizens that are primarily within the venue of the 19th Judicial District; and

WHEREAS, the large number of asbestos-related claims will impede the ability of the single District Court Judge in the 19th Judicial District to handle the normal case load of the District and will raise several potential conflicts of interest; and

WHEREAS, it is imperative that asbestos-related claims be dealt with expeditiously in order to allow Montana citizens with life-threatening illnesses to receive a speedy resolution of their claims; and

WHEREAS, Article VII, section 1, of the Montana Constitution allows additional courts to be provided by law."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 394 in (1)(a), near beginning, in two places in (1)(b), and in (1)(c) inserted "or special master"; in (1)(c), after "rendered", inserted "in a civil case"; inserted (2) providing for the conduct of preliminary, nondispositive proceedings in criminal actions before a judge pro tempore or special master; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 12, 1995.

1987 Amendment: Near end of (1), after "attorneys of record", substituted "appointed" and "approved" and after "court" inserted "as provided in 3-5-115"; inserted (2) stating the judge's power and relating to applicable evidentiary and procedural rules; in (3), before "court", inserted "district"; and made minor change in phraseology.

Clear Error Standard of Review — Marital Separation and Parenting Plan — Standing Master: A husband and wife separated with one child. A standing master issued findings of fact, conclusions of law, and a final decree establishing a final parenting plan, which was adopted by the District Court. The husband appealed, arguing that the standard of review for a District Court reviewing a standing master should be de novo and not clear error. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure and statutory law specified that a clear error standard applied. In re Parenting of G.J.A., 2014 MT 215, 376 Mont. 212, 331 P.3d 835. See also In re Marriage of Davis, 2016 MT 52, 382 Mont. 378, 367 P.3d 400, holding that two standards of review are relevant in cases involving a standing master and the District Court; specifically, the Supreme Court reviews a District Court's decision de novo to determine whether it applied the correct standard of review to a standing master's findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a District Court reviews a standing master's finding of fact for clear error and its conclusions of law to determine if they are correct.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 557 in (3) after "justice's" deleted "court established as a". Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 389 inserted (3) and (4) allowing a justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record and a municipal court judge to act as a judge pro tempore; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Grandfather Clause: Section 13, Ch. 389, L. 2003, provided: "An incumbent justice of the peace on [the effective date of this act] [effective July, 1, 2003], in a county in which a justice's court established as a court of record is established, who meets the minimum education requirements for a justice of the peace is eligible to run for the justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record in that county at the next and subsequent elections held for the justice of the peace for the justice's court established as a court of record unless the justice of the peace has a break in service."

No Direct Appeal From Decision of Standing Master: A party may not directly appeal to the Supreme Court a decision of a standing master. The appropriate method for a party to obtain review of a standing master's decision is to file written specific objections with the District Court within 10 days after being served with notice of the filing of the standing master's decision. Once the District Court has reviewed the specific objections, the party may then file an appeal in the Supreme Court. Beals v. Beals, 2013 MT 120, 370 Mont. 88, 300 P.3d 1158.

Abuse of Discretion to Modify Findings of Standing Master Absent Objection to Master's Findings: A standing master determined that the wife was entitled to one-half of the husband's pension benefits. The husband did not object to the finding. The District Court disagreed with the finding and awarded the entire pension benefit to the husband, and the wife appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. Pursuant to 3-5-126, a District Court may modify only findings and conclusions to which a party has filed an objection. The District Court's modification of the standing master's finding that the wife should receive one-half the pension, absent objection, was an abuse of discretion. In re Marriage of McMichael, 2006 MT 237, 333 M 517, 143 P3d 439 (2006).

Case Notes

Plain Language of Statute Applied — District Court Properly Refused to Review Objections to Standing Master's Report — Objections Broad and Generalized — Statute Required Specific Objection: The District Court did not err when it refused to review the respondent's objections to a standing master's report. The language of 3-5-126 plainly means that a party must file objections that designate or define a particular error the standing master is alleged to have made before a District Court may review the standing master's determinations. To conclude otherwise would deny adequate notice and due process to the parties. The respondent's objections were broad and generalized and did not define or explain a particular error that the standing master committed. The District Court correctly determined that the respondent failed to specifically object to the master's report as required by 3-5-126. Accordingly, the Supreme Court concluded that the District Court was not required to hold a hearing and correctly refused to review the respondent's objections to the standing master's report. In re Marriage of Taylor, 2016 MT 342, 386 Mont. 44, 386 P.3d 599. See also In re Marriage of McMichael, 2006 MT 237, 333 Mont. 517, 143 P.3d 439.

Abuse of Discretion to Not Rule on Party's Posttrial Motions Objecting to Standing Master's Report: A standing master issued a report containing findings of facts and conclusions of law and a proposed division of the parties' marital estate. The wife filed an objection to the report with the District Court in the form of a motion for reconsideration and a motion to amend. The District Court did not rule on her motions, concluding that the motions should be ruled on at the standing master's discretion. The standing master did not rule on the motions either, and the wife appealed the District Court's order approving the standing master's report. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the matter to the District Court, holding that the District Court should have either ruled on the wife's motions or expressly asked the standing master to rule on them. In re Marriage of Patton, 2015 MT 7, 378 Mont. 22, 340 P.3d 1242.

Review of Findings of Facts in Standing Master's Report Denied — No Error When Party Fails to Cite Transcript: A standing master issued a report containing findings of facts and conclusions of law and a proposed division of the parties' marital estate. Over the wife's objections to the report, the District Court approved it. On appeal, the wife argued that the standing master's report contained clearly erroneous findings of facts and that the District Court erred in approving the report. The Supreme Court rejected her argument based on her failure to provide citations to the trial transcript to the District Court, finding that the burden to offer citations was on the party claiming that the standing master's report contained erroneous findings of facts. In re Marriage of Patton, 2015 MT 7, 378 Mont. 22, 340 P.3d 1242.

Clear Error Standard of Review — Marital Separation and Parenting Plan — Standing Master: A husband and wife separated with one child. A standing master issued findings of fact, conclusions of law, and a final decree establishing a final parenting plan, which was adopted by the District Court. The husband appealed, arguing that the standard of review for a District Court reviewing a standing master should be de novo and not clear error. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure and statutory law specified that a clear error standard applied. In re Parenting of G.J.A., 2014 MT 215, 376 Mont. 212, 331 P.3d 835. See also In re Marriage of Davis, 2016 MT 52, 382 Mont. 378, 367 P.3d 400, holding that two standards of review are relevant in cases involving a standing master and the District Court; specifically, the Supreme Court reviews a District Court's decision de novo to determine whether it applied the correct standard of review to a standing master's findings of fact and conclusions of law, and a District Court reviews a standing master's findings of fact for clear error and its conclusions of law to determine if they are correct.

No Direct Appeal From Decision of Standing Master: A party may not directly appeal to the Supreme Court a decision of a standing master. The appropriate method for a party to obtain review of a standing master's decision is to file written specific objections with the District Court within 10 days after being served with notice of the filing of the standing master's decision. Once the District Court has reviewed the specific objections, the party may then file an appeal in the Supreme Court. Beals v. Beals, 2013 MT 120, 370 Mont. 88, 300 P.3d 1158.

Abuse of Discretion to Modify Findings of Standing Master Absent Objection to Master's Findings: A standing master determined that the wife was entitled to one-half of the husband's pension benefits. The husband did not object to the finding. The District Court disagreed with the finding and awarded the entire pension benefit to the husband, and the wife appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. Pursuant to this section, a District Court may modify only findings and conclusions to which a party has filed an objection. The District Court's modification of the standing master's finding that the wife should receive one-half the pension, absent objection, was an abuse of discretion. In re Marriage of McMichael, 2006 MT 237, 333 M 517, 143 P3d 439 (2006).

District Court Judges

Part Case Notes

Judge Not Required to Recuse Self — Claim Untimely — No Valid Claim of Personal Bias or Prejudice: The defendant argued for the first time on appeal that a District Court Judge should have recused himself from a case because he ruled on matters in a related guardianship and conservatorship proceeding. The defendant claimed that the same issues were dispositive of the defendant's guilt in the criminal case. The defendant further asserted that the judge had personal knowledge of the facts in dispute, had expressed bias against the defendant, and had presided as a judge in a guardianship proceeding that involved a matter at the heart of the state's case against the defendant. The defendant argued that his disqualification claim was not untimely because it was based on the judge's bias or prejudice and because the defendant was unaware of the judge's involvement in the prior proceedings until after the defendant's criminal proceedings concluded. The Supreme Court disagreed with the defendant, reasoning that if judges had to recuse themselves from every such case, they could not, as a practical matter, fulfill their duty to be available to decide matters that come before the courts. Because the defendant's disqualification claim was untimely, because he did not establish a valid claim of personal bias or prejudice, and because he did not raise a colorable claim that the judge's impartiality might reasonably be questioned, the Supreme Court concluded that the defendant's request for a disqualification hearing lacked merit and was not actionable under Rule 2.12(A) of the Code of Judicial Conduct. St. v. Strang, 2017 MT 217, 388 Mont. 428, 401 P.3d 690.

District Court Power to Set Court Staff Salaries — Emergency or Failure of Established Methods Only: A District Judge had no inherent authority to enter an ex parte order establishing salaries for court staff involved in collective bargaining negotiations. The Supreme Court cited State ex rel. Hillis v. Sullivan, 48 M 320, 137 P 392 (1913), in holding that the inherent judicial power to compel funding should only be used when an emergency arises or when the established methods for providing funding have failed. Butte-Silver Bow Local Gov't v. Olsen, 228 M 77, 743 P2d 564, 44 St. Rep. 1356 (1987). See also Monaco v. Lake County, 1998 MT 243, 291 M 141, 967 P2d 367, 55 St. Rep. 1011 (1998).

Appointment of Defeated District Judge: Judge Sykes, a retired judge who was defeated for reelection, was appointed by the Chief Justice to hear several cases. A party to one of the cases appealed the appointment of a defeated judge. The court held that Judge Sykes is a member of the "pool" of retired judges and can be called in by the Chief Justice to preside under the provisions of Art. VII, sec. 6, Mont. Const. Section 3-5-201, which requires District Judges to be elected, does not overcome the constitutional power given to the Chief Justice. Judge Sykes was not appointed pursuant to 19-5-103, and it is therefore not applicable. State ex rel. Welch v. District Court, 209 M 397, 680 P2d 327, 41 St. Rep. 783 (1984).

Judge's Reappointment to Finish Case Started Before Retirement: That trial Judge retired prior to his issuance of orders in the case at issue did not make the orders void. Under the recent decision in State ex rel. Wilcox & Bradley v. District Court, 41 St. Rep. 397 (1984), the trial Judge had authority to perform all functions of an active District Judge, including the issuance of final orders and judgments. In re Pegg's Estate, 209 M 71, 680 P2d 316, 41 St. Rep. 558 (1984). (Annotator's Note: The District Court's records indicate that the Judge retired after beginning work on the case and was reappointed to finish the case.)

Retired Judges Eligible for Assignment for Temporary Service: The term "other judges" in subsection (3) of Art. VII, sec. 6, Mont. Const., includes retired judges. That subsection empowers the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, upon request of a District Judge, to assign retired judges for temporary service to any judicial district or county in Montana. Further, that provision is a constitutional grant of power exclusive of any statutory grant by the Legislature. State ex rel. Wilcox v. District Court, 208 M 351, 678 P2d 209, 41 St. Rep. 397 (1984); followed in St. v. Holmes, 212 M 526, 687 P2d 662, 41 St. Rep. 1535 (1984).

Impairment of Contract and Diminution of Salary — Preventing Legislative Meddling in Judicial Decisions: Plaintiff contended 3-2-104 and 3-5-212, which imposed sanctions on judges if decisions were not reached or opinions were not written within the procedural constraints and time limits set by the statutes, were unconstitutional. (In 1985, 3-2-104 was amended and 3-5-212 was repealed, thus eliminating the sanctions.) The penalty provisions of both statutes required a 1-month salary forfeiture in the event of a violation. Plaintiff contended the penalty violated the impairment of contract and diminution of judicial salary provisions of the Montana Constitution. Defendant contended that since the judiciary imposed the sanctions, the constitution was not violated. The constitutional prohibition against diminution of salaries is designed to prevent lawmakers from exerting control over the judiciary. Even if the court were to allow the indirect violation by allowing the Legislature to mandate a scheme administered by the courts, the statutes would violate the impairment of contract prohibition. Public employment gives rise to certain obligations protected by the contract clause of the constitution. Promised compensation is one such protected right. Once vested, the right to compensation cannot be eliminated without unconstitutionally impairing the contract obligation. Coate v. Omholt, 203 M 488, 662 P2d 591, 40 St. Rep. 586 (1983).

Time Limits on Judicial Decisions — Solely Within Judicial Sphere: Plaintiff contended 3-2-104 and 3-5-212, which imposed sanctions on judges if decisions were not reached or opinions were not written within the procedural constraints and time limits set by the statutes, were unconstitutional. (In 1985, 3-2-104 was amended and 3-5-212 was repealed, thus eliminating the sanctions.) On appeal, the Supreme Court held that under the separation of powers doctrine the legislative branch of government is without constitutional authority to limit the judicial branch of government in respect to when it shall hear or determine any cause of action within its lawful jurisdiction. The time limits within which judicial decisions must be rendered were held to be a sphere of activity so fundamental and necessary to a court that to divest it of its absolute control would be to make meaningless the very phrase "judicial power". Coate v. Omholt, 203 M 488, 662 P2d 591, 40 St. Rep. 586 (1983).

3-5-203. Term of office.

Attorney General's Opinions

Length of Term of Newly Created Judgeships to Be Six Years: Chapter 293, L. 1983, increased the number of judgeships in several judicial districts and provided that the new judgeships could be initially filled at either the 1983 or 1984 general election. According to Art. VII, sec. 7(2), Mont. Const., and this section, the length of term of a District Court Judge is 6 years. In response to the question of the length of term of judges elected to positions created by Ch. 293, L. 1983, the Attorney General ruled that the term was 6 years because: (1) neither the constitutional provision nor the governing statute was altered by Ch. 293, L. 1983; (2) a provision in the original draft of the bill that altered the length of the term was deleted from the final version of the bill; and (3) assuming that the first election for new judgeships is compared to the filling of vacancies in office, it would be arbitrary to choose 1989, the year contained in the deleted provision of the original bill, as the year in which the terms of the new "vacant" offices expire. 40 A.G. Op. 13 (1983).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 51 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) Subject to subsection (2), the annual salary of each district judge is as follows:

(b) $64,979 beginning July 1, 1995;

(c) $67,513 beginning January 1, 1996"; in (1) near beginning of first sentence after "June 30" deleted "1996, and prior to June 30", near end of third sentence after "July 1" substituted "of the year following the year in which the survey is conducted" for "1997" and after "average" inserted "salary", and deleted former fourth sentence that read: "In each year following the year in which a survey is conducted, the average salary is the new salary for the position"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 15, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 in (1) inserted "subject to subsection (2)" and substituted salary schedule for former salary schedule (see 1995 Session Law for text); inserted (2) requiring Department of Administration to conduct salary survey; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1991 Amendment: Substituted salaries in (1)(a), (1)(b), (1)(c), and (1)(d) for "$52,178 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1989, and $55,178 for each fiscal year thereafter". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Preamble to 1991 Amendment: The preamble attached to Ch. 656, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, the salaries of Montana Supreme Court Justices and District Court Judges have failed to rise over the last decade to a point that threatens the long-term ability of the judiciary to retain and attract the best qualified candidates for judicial offices; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature is committed to an equitable system for setting salaries, based on comparable worth and related levels of responsibility.

THEREFORE, it is the purpose of this legislation to allow Montana Supreme Court Justices and District Court Judges to receive salaries comparable to the average salary of justices and judges in other western states."

1989 Amendment: At end of (1) increased District Judge salary from $49,178 to $52,178 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1989, and to $55,178 for each fiscal year thereafter. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1985 Amendment: In (1) increased the annual salary of a District Judge to $49,178 and deleted former (1)(a) and (1)(b) which specified a salary of $46,758 for fiscal year 1984 and $47,693 for fiscal years thereafter.

1983 Amendment: In (1)(a), increased the salary of a District Judge for fiscal year 1983 to $46,758 from that authorized for fiscal year 1981, $42,273; and in (1)(b) increased the salary of a District Judge for fiscal years after 1983 to $47,693 from that authorized for fiscal years after 1981, $45,841.

1981 Amendment: In (1)(a), changed "1979" to "1981", "1980" to "1982", and increased the salary from $37,000 to $42,273; and in (1)(b), changed "1980" to "1982", and increased the salary from $39,000 to $45,841.

Transition: Section 16, Ch. 528, L. 1979, provided: "A judicial officer, as defined in 1-1-202, who is occupying his judicial office on the effective date of this act shall continue to be paid expenses on the same basis as he is receiving them on the effective date of this act until the expiration of his term of office. All judicial officers who take office or begin a new term of office after the effective date of this act shall receive expenses as provided in this act."

Severability: Section 17, Ch. 528, L. 1979, was a severability section.

District Court Jurisdiction

ERISA — Motion to Amend Answer — Abuse of Discretion for Granting Insurance Company Leave to Amend — Undue Prejudice to Class Not Considered — No Reasonable Justification Presented by Insurance Company: The District Court abused its discretion by granting the defendant insurance company leave to amend its answer to assert Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) preemption. The Supreme Court reasoned there were no extraordinary circumstances that would warrant granting the defendant's motion to amend. The plaintiff and the class cited to three specific reasons prejudice would occur: (1) the length of the delay, (2) the parties had conducted extensive discovery, and (3) the case had already been appealed to the Supreme Court for class certification based on state law claims. Conversely, the defendant did not offer any reasonable justification for the delay. Allowing the defendant to amend to include ERISA preemption would have effectively destroyed the class, forcing the plaintiff and the class to either seek recertification based on ERISA claims or proceed alone, 10 years after the plaintiff's injury and more than 7 years after she filed suit. Consequently, the Supreme Court held that the plaintiff and the class she represented would be unduly prejudiced by allowing the defendant to amend and that the District Court conducted an inadequate inquiry of the extraordinary circumstances of the case. Personal Jurisdiction Over Nonresident Business — Exercise of Long-Arm Jurisdiction Proper: The nonresident defendant business conducted sufficient business in Montana to support the extension of long-arm jurisdiction over the defendant when the defendant knew that the plaintiff intended to use the defendant's product in its Montana business, the defendant had previously sold its product to the plaintiff, and the defendant had serviced its product through other Montana businesses. Further, because the defendant purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting business in Montana, resulting in the plaintiff's alleged injury in Montana, and because the defendant reasonably could have anticipated defending itself in Montana, Montana's exercise of personal jurisdiction over the defendant comported with due process. Grizzly Sec. Armored Express, Inc. v. The Armored Group, LLC, 2011 MT 128, 360 Mont. 517, 255 P.3d 143.

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No District Court Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Attorney Disciplinary Matters: The Supreme Court suspended a Yellowstone County Deputy City Attorney, publicly censured her, and placed her on probation for 2 years. Plaintiff newspaper requested that the District Court provide the documents related to the attorney's disciplinary proceedings, but the District Court declined to release the documents on grounds that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Supreme Court, not the District Court, possesses original and exclusive jurisdiction and responsibility in all matters involving the conduct and disciplining of Montana attorneys, and court disciplinary rules provide for the confidentiality of disciplinary procedures. Billings Gazette v. St., 2008 MT 287, 345 M 385, 190 P3d 1126 (2008). See also Boe v. Court Administrator, 2007 MT 7, 335 M 228, 150 P3d 927 (2007).

State Court Jurisdiction Over Real Property Dispute Involving Federal Easement: A public lands access group sued Jones for blocking access to public lands that were previously accessible via a road across Jones's land. When the access group subsequently discovered that the federal Bureau of Reclamation had an express, nonexclusive easement over the road for irrigation and maintenance purposes since the road was constructed, the Bureau was joined as a party defendant. The Bureau and the access group then entered an agreement acknowledging the Bureau's easement, recognizing that the Bureau had never blocked public access to the road, and dismissing the Bureau from the suit. Jones then moved to dismiss the suit on grounds that the access group's claim for a prescriptive easement raised a dispute in title between the group and the United States and that because federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction over such title disputes under the federal Quiet Title Act (FQTA), 28 U.S.C. 2409, et seq., the state District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction over the claim, so the claim could not proceed in state court. The District Court agreed and dismissed the claim with prejudice. The access group appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The United States, through the Bureau, had been named as a defendant, knowingly and expressly disavowed a dispute in title between the Bureau and the access group, and agreed to be voluntarily dismissed from the suit. Therefore, a disputed title between the access group and the federal agency, which is required for jurisdiction under the FQTA, did not exist, nor did Jones provide any authority for the proposition that a defendant in a property dispute can assert a property interest of the United States under the FQTA in order to remove the cause of action to federal District Court. Jones failed to establish that the FQTA applied in this case, so the District Court did have subject matter jurisdiction over the action against Jones, and the action was remanded to District Court for further proceedings. Pub. Lands Access Ass'n, Inc. v. Jones, 2008 MT 12, 341 M 111, 176 P3d 1005 (2008). See also Leisnoi, Inc. v. U.S., 170 F3d 1188 (9th Cir. 1999).

No Montana Personal Jurisdiction Over Regional Out-of-State Insurer: Carter, a part-time "snow bird" resident of Montana, was injured in an automobile accident in Montana shortly after moving from Mississippi. Carter filed a declaratory judgment action against the defendant, a regional out-of-state insurer that did not do business in Montana, requesting interpretation of an insurance contract issued on Carter's vehicles in Mississippi. The insurer contested Montana's exercise of personal jurisdiction and moved for summary judgment. The District Court concluded that it did not have personal jurisdiction and granted summary judgment. Carter appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The court cited Bahn v. Chicago Motor Club, 634 A2d 63 (Md. 1993), for the holding that although an insurer's promise to provide nationwide coverage may establish that the insurer has agreed to submit to jurisdiction in any forum that has jurisdiction to adjudicate claims against its insured, this agreement does not imply a further agreement to allow the insured to bring suit against the insurer in any state. Even though the insurer could reasonably anticipate that the insured could suffer an injury within the insurer's 50-state coverage, that foreseeability, without more, was not sufficient to subject the insurer to personal jurisdiction in Montana courts. The underlying dispute related to coverage and had nothing to do with the fact that the accident occurred in Montana or that Carter was living in this state at the time. Thus, although Carter had every right to sue the insurer over its coverage issues, in this case, Montana courts did not have personal jurisdiction over the insurer that was required as a predicate to maintenance of an action in Montana. Summary dismissal was proper. Carter v. Miss. Farm Bureau Cas. Ins. Co., 2005 MT 74, 326 M 350, 109 P3d 735 (2005). See also Bi-Lo Foods, Inc. v. Alpine Bank, 1998 MT 40, 287 M 367, 955 P2d 154 (1998).

Underlying Case on Appeal to Supreme Court — Statutory Petition Process Terminated — Lack of District Court Jurisdiction: Plaintiffs' property was part of a dispute to exclude certain property from the Missoula irrigation district. Following the District Court's exclusion of property from the irrigation district, the case was appealed to the Supreme Court. While that case was pending on appeal, the District Court granted another petition by plaintiffs to exclude another four properties from the irrigation district. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Once the underlying case was appealed to the Supreme Court, the District Court lost its jurisdiction to act further in the matter and had no jurisdiction to entertain plaintiffs' second petition or to exclude additional properties while the case was on appeal. Additionally, the petition process that plaintiffs used to file the second petition under former 85-7-1846 was terminated nearly 5 years before the petition was filed. Thus, the District Court had no jurisdiction to entertain a petition filed under a statutory process that was no longer in place. Larango v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2004 MT 369, 324 M 534, 103 P3d 552 (2004). See also Lewistown Propane Co. v. Moncur, 2002 MT 349, 313 M 368, 61 P3d 780 (2002).

Guidelines for Determining Whether Indian Tribe Has Waived Sovereign Immunity in Contract — Inapplicability of Statute of Frauds to Question of Subject Matter Jurisdiction: Plaintiff contended that he signed a 7-year contract with the Crow Tribe to provide consulting services and to act as a program manager for the planning and construction of a power plant on tribal property and that the tribe breached the contract and failed to pay him. The tribe moved to dismiss on grounds that the District Court lacked personal and subject matter jurisdiction because of the tribe's sovereign immunity. The District Court denied the motion but reserved the right to readdress the issue of subject matter jurisdiction. Following further discovery, neither party could produce a signed copy of the alleged contract. The District Court concluded that because the alleged contract was for employment for more than 1 year, the statute of frauds applied and noted that although plaintiff's performance would normally create an exception to the statute of frauds pursuant to the court's equitable powers, to exercise that power in this case would circumvent the tribe's sovereign immunity in contravention of federal law. The District Court further concluded that although there was an express agreement that was partially performed and that the agreement contained a waiver of tribal immunity from suit in state court, as indicated by affidavits submitted by plaintiff and the tribal presiding officer, because of the fact that a signed copy of the contract was not produced, there was insufficient evidence to overcome the presumption against waiver of tribal immunity, so the action was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The Montana statute of frauds in 28-2-903 limits the enforceability of certain contracts but does not affect a District Court's subject matter jurisdiction, so a District Court need not consider the statute of frauds when determining subject matter jurisdiction; furthermore, the court does not need to invoke its equitable powers to find jurisdiction. Rather, the question facing the District Court was whether the tribe clearly and unequivocally waived its sovereign immunity. The Supreme Court found that plaintiff's complaint alleged sufficient facts that, if true, would vest the District Court with subject matter jurisdiction. The tribe produced no evidence to refute the affidavits or to controvert the recollections of the affiants. Absent any factual issue to resolve, the Supreme Court concluded that plaintiff presented undisputed evidence proving the establishment of a contract that included an unequivocal waiver of sovereign immunity, so dismissal of the complaint by the District Court on jurisdictional grounds constituted reversible error. Bradley v. Crow Tribe of Indians, 2003 MT 82, 315 M 75, 67 P3d 306 (2003). On remand, the District Court again granted Bradley's motion for summary judgment after holding that the tribe's motion to alter or amend was denied because the court did not rule on the motion within 60 days. The Supreme Court held that because there is no provision in former Rule 56, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), for entry of summary judgment by default, denial of the tribe's motion was erroneous, and because questions of fact existed regarding contract ambiguity and damages, the case was again reversed and remanded for further consideration. Bradley v. Crow Tribe of Indians, 2005 MT 309, 329 M 448, 124 P3d 1143 (2005).

District Court Jurisdiction to Decide Constructive Fraud Based on Pleadings and Final Pretrial Order: Plaintiffs filed a claim for misrepresentation and failure to disclose concerning the sale of an irrigation system. Defendants contended that plaintiffs did not notify them by pleadings or evidence at trial that plaintiffs were claiming that a false impression was created regarding the condition of the field at pivot three, arguing that the complaint concerned defects and misrepresentations related to the irrigation system, not to the land, and that the District Court thus lacked jurisdiction to enter judgment on the issue of the land rather than the irrigation system. A District Court does not have jurisdiction to grant relief outside of the issues presented by the pleadings unless the parties stipulate that other questions be considered or the pleadings are amended to conform to the proof. However, in this case, the pleadings and the final pretrial order, which cited misrepresentation of or failure to disclose problems with both the deficient irrigation system and the erosion of the river bank near pivot three, gave defendants sufficient notice of the disputed issues to vest the District Court with issue jurisdiction. H-D Irrigating, Inc. v. Kimble Properties, Inc., 2000 MT 212, 301 M 34, 8 P3d 95, 57 St. Rep. 832 (2000).

Entry of Judgment by Court of General Jurisdiction in Foreclosure Action Affirmed — Collateral Attack Precluded: Glickman contended that the District Court acted outside or in excess of its jurisdiction by decreeing that the purchaser of Glickman's property at a Sheriff's foreclosure sale be "let into possession". A judgment entered by a court lacking subject matter jurisdiction is subject to attack at any time. A collateral attack on a judgment is possible only if the judgment is void on its face and if it appears affirmatively from the judgment roll that the court did not have jurisdiction or committed an act in excess of jurisdiction. Absent any authority that a court of general jurisdiction may not enter a judgment in a foreclosure sale, the Supreme Court held that the District Court did not act outside or in excess of its jurisdiction by decreeing that the purchaser of the property at a Sheriff's foreclosure sale be "let into possession". Further, Glickman's failure to allege any statutory causes of action in his original petition precluded him from bringing an independent action under the residual clause of former Rule 60(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). Glickman v. Whitefish Credit Union Ass'n, 1998 MT 8, 287 M 161, 951 P2d 1388, 55 St. Rep. 27 (1998).

Nature of National Guard Service — State Court Jurisdiction: Members of the National Guard serve a dual responsibility, both to the State of Montana and to the United States of America. While Guard units consist of members enlisted in the United States Army, they are also a Montana military unit consisting of Montana citizens. The District Court improperly dismissed a suit brought by members of the Montana Army National Guard on grounds that the court did not have jurisdiction, absent proof that the members were on federal active duty as opposed to state active duty. The case was remanded for further findings. Grove v. Mont. Army Nat'l Guard, 264 M 498, 872 P2d 791, 51 St. Rep. 366 (1994), distinguishing Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160 (1986).

Presentation of Issue in Pleadings Necessary for Jurisdiction — Jurisdiction Upheld: Logan was discharged from her job at Metra and later obtained employment with the Yellowstone County Sheriff's office, where she suffered a repetitive motion injury. She sued Yellowstone County, claiming that the county breached her employment contract. The county moved for summary judgment, and the District Court dismissed the action. The Supreme Court held that despite Logan's claims that the District Court had no jurisdiction to dismiss because the county moved for summary judgment, the motion for summary judgment on all issues put squarely before the District Court the issue of whether the complaint should be dismissed. The Supreme Court held that the District Court did not exceed the requested relief when it dismissed the complaint. Logan v. Yellowstone County, 263 M 218, 868 P2d 565, 51 St. Rep. 22 (1994).

State Court Jurisdiction of ERISA Actions:

In a case brought to enforce a contract between an employer and a labor organization, state courts have concurrent jurisdiction with federal courts but must apply federal substantive law in exercising that jurisdiction. A state court may rely on state contract law as long as it effectuates the policy underlying federal labor legislation. Audit Serv., Inc. v. Frontier-West, Inc., 252 M 142, 827 P2d 1242, 49 St. Rep. 186 (1992), citing Kemmis v. McGoldrick, 706 F2d 993 (9th Cir. 1983).

Title 29 U.S.C. 1132(e) establishes state court jurisdiction over actions brought to recover benefits under an insurance policy covered by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974. Bauer v. Kar Prod., Inc., 230 M 422, 749 P2d 1385, 45 St. Rep. 322 (1988).

Jurisdiction Required Before Judgment Effective: It is fundamental that a court rendering a decision in a particular case have jurisdiction over the parties. When the judgment roll on its face shows that the court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment, its pronouncement is in fact no judgment and cannot be enforced. No right can be derived from it. All proceedings founded upon it are invalid and ineffective for any purpose. Ciotti v. Hoover, 237 M 462, 774 P2d 406, 46 St. Rep. 969 (1989), following Apple v. Edwards, 123 M 135, 211 P2d 138 (1949).

Judgment on Matters Outside Pleadings Void: A judgment or final order adjudging matters outside the issues raised by the pleadings is void as to the matters outside the pleadings. In re Custody of C.S.F., 232 M 204, 755 P2d 578, 45 St. Rep. 992 (1988), following Welch v. All Persons, 78 M 370, 254 P 179 (1927).

Jurisdiction of State Court to Order Arbitration Under Federal Arbitration Law: Under the U.S. Supreme Court decision set out in Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 US 1, 79 L Ed 2d 1, 104 S Ct 852 (1984), a state court clearly has jurisdiction to order arbitration under the federal arbitration law, 9 U.S.C. 1, et seq. Passage v. Prudential-Bache Sec., Inc., 223 M 60, 727 P2d 1298, 43 St. Rep. 1532 (1986).

No Jurisdiction Over Issues Not Presented in Pleadings: Where the plaintiff church was granted a tax exemption by the Department of Revenue for some but not all of the plaintiff's real property and brought a quiet title action to determine its ownership and the tax-exempt status of that portion of the property for which it had not been granted an exemption, the District Court erred in removing the exemption originally granted by the Department of Revenue. Under the rationale of Heller v. Osburnsen, 162 M 182, 510 P2d 13 (1973), and Nat'l Sur. Corp. v. Kruse, 121 M 202, 192 P2d 317 (1948), the District Court had jurisdiction only over those issues raised in the pleadings, and the exempt status of lots 10 through 16 was not at issue in the case. Consequently, the District Court had no jurisdiction to remove the tax-exempt status for those lots belonging to the plaintiff. Old Fashion Baptist Church v. Dept. of Revenue, 206 M 451, 671 P2d 625, 40 St. Rep. 1774 (1983).

Labor Management Relations Act of 1947: State courts have concurrent jurisdiction with federal courts to hear cases brought under section 301(a) of the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947 (29 U.S.C. § 185(a)). Audit Serv., Inc. v. Clark Bros. Contractors, 198 M 274, 645 P2d 953, 39 St. Rep. 928 (1982).

Same Day Filing of Appeal and Motion for Rehearing: The filing of an appeal to the Supreme Court stays proceedings in the lower court, thereby removing jurisdiction to proceed further in the matter from the lower court; thus, the Supreme Court denied the motion to dismiss the appeal, which was based on the fact that the notice of appeal and movant's motion for rehearing were filed on the same day. Green v. C.R. Anthony Co., 194 M 102, 634 P2d 629, 38 St. Rep. 1638 (1981).

Loss of District Court Jurisdiction Upon Filing Notice of Appeal — Findings and Conclusions Improperly Amended: In an action for damages resulting from the defendants' breach of contract by failing to complete the construction of a road for the plaintiff, the trial court committed reversible error in attempting to amend its findings of fact and conclusions of law after the defendants filed a notice of appeal. Since 1954 it has been the rule in Montana that when a notice of appeal is filed, personal and subject matter jurisdiction passes from the District Court to the Supreme Court. When the District Court amended its findings and conclusions after filing of the notice of appeal, it did so without jurisdiction and the amendments were therefore void. Julian v. Buckley, 191 M 487, 625 P2d 526, 38 St. Rep. 128 (1981). See also St. v. Arlington, 265 M 127, 875 P2d 307, 51 St. Rep. 417 (1994).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 481 in (1) at beginning of introductory clause deleted "Except as provided in subsection (6)"; deleted former (6) that read: "(6) (a) Except as provided in subsection (6)(b), a contest of a ballot issue submitted by initiative or referendum may be brought prior to the election only if it is filed within 30 days after the date on which the issue was certified to the governor, as provided in 13-27-308, and only for the following causes:

(i) violation of the law relating to qualifications for inclusion on the ballot;

(ii) constitutional defect in the substance of a proposed ballot issue; or

(iii) illegal petition signatures or an erroneous or fraudulent count or canvass of petition signatures.

(b) A contest of a ballot issue based on subsection (6)(a)(i) or (6)(a)(iii) may be brought at any time after discovery of illegal petition signatures or an erroneous or fraudulent count or canvass of petition signatures.

(c) Nothing in subsection (6) limits the right to challenge a measure enacted by a vote of the people"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 11, 2007.

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 481, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

1987 Amendment: In (1), at beginning, inserted exception clause relating to subsection (6); and inserted (6) relating to ballot issue contests.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 540, L. 1987, which amended this section, read: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 1, of the Montana Constitution recognizes that all political power is vested in and derived from the people and that all government of right originates with the people, is founded on their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole; and

WHEREAS, the right of the people to make statutory changes by initiative is retained in Article III, section 4, of the Montana Constitution; and

WHEREAS, the right of the people to alter their Constitution by initiative is retained in Article XIV, section 9, of the Montana Constitution."

1985 Amendment: At end of (2)(a) inserted "or misdemeanor offense charged in district court"; in (2)(b) after "felony" inserted "or misdemeanor"; and in (2)(c) substituted "felony or misdemeanor case tried in district court" for "felony case".

1981 Amendment: Inserted (2) relating to concurrent misdemeanor jurisdiction.

District Court Decision Regarding Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Appropriate — Oral Hearing Not Required — No Due Process Concerns for Failure to Provide Hearing: In a child custody dispute, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by dismissing the case for lack of subject matter jurisdiction without providing for the opportunity for an oral hearing. The Supreme Court determined that Rule 2(c), M.U.D.C.R. (Title 25, ch. 19), and Rule 12(i), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), do not require the District Court to hold an oral hearing. As applied to the facts, there was ample evidence, based on affidavits and other filings of the parties, upon which the District Court could base its subject matter jurisdiction decision. Moreover, the District Court did not fail to afford due process by refusing to hold a hearing, as a decision was not issued regarding the child custody issue, and the petitioning parent was not deprived of a liberty interest. In re Marriage of Sampley, 2015 MT 121, 379 Mont. 131, 347 P.3d 1281.

Failure of Party or Court to Act Before Deadline Not Jurisdictional Defect: After the defendant moved to set aside a default judgment against it, the District Court failed to rule within 60 days, resulting in the motion being "deemed denied" under Rule 60(c), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20). Nevertheless, 8 days after the 60-day deadline expired, the District Court granted the defendant's motion to set aside the default judgment. The plaintiff appealed, asserting that the District Court lacked jurisdiction to act on the motion after the deadline expired. The Supreme Court overruled several previous cases and clarified that if a party or a court fails to act before a rigid deadline, the passing of the deadline does not deprive the court of subject-matter jurisdiction. However, categorical time limits are mandatory and must be strictly enforced; therefore, the District Court had erred in ignoring the deadline. Green v. Gerber, 2013 MT 35, 369 Mont. 20, 303 P.3d 729.

No Contest Plea — No Reservation of Issues for Appeal — Waiver of Right to Challenge Probable Cause: The District Court denied the defendant's motion to dismiss a charge of felony intimidation that claimed the allegations of the information did not establish probable cause. Subsequently, the defendant pleaded no contest without reserving any issues for appeal. The defendant later appealed his sentence, alleging that the issue of probable cause was jurisdictional and thus could be raised at any time. The Supreme Court ruled that the issue of probable cause is not jurisdictional and overruled any contrary statements found in St. v. Davis, 210 Mont. 28, 681 P.2d 42 (1984), and St. v. Thompson, 243 Mont. 28, 792 P.2d 1103 (1990). The court also concluded that the defendant waived his right to raise a probable cause challenge when he entered a no contest plea without reserving any issues for appeal. St. v. Spreadbury, 2011 MT 176, 361 Mont. 253, 257 P.3d 392.

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

Medical Negligence — Right of Tribal Member to Pursue State Court Action Against Nontribal Member — State Court Jurisdiction: The plaintiff alleged medical negligence against a medical clinic that cared for the plaintiff's husband, who was a member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes. The plaintiff was not a tribal member, the clinic was not affiliated with a tribe, and the acts took place both on and off the reservation. The District Court held that state courts do not have jurisdiction on the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Reservation over actions for medical negligence. The plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The court noted that it is well established under both state and federal law that tribal members may bring civil actions against nontribal members in state court, and that tribal autonomy and self-government are not impeded when a state allows an Indian to seek relief in state court against a non-Indian for a claim arising in Indian country. This right of access to courts applies to residents of each Montana Indian reservation. Therefore, the plaintiff was not precluded from bringing the medical negligence action in state court and the state court had jurisdiction to hear the case. Morigeau v. Gorman, 2010 MT 36, 355 Mont. 225, 225 P.3d 1260. See also State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), and Three Affiliated Tribes of the Fort Berthold Reservation v. Wold Eng'r, 476 US 877 (1986).

Original Court Jurisdiction Over Partner or Family Member Assault Charges, Misdemeanor or Felony: District Courts have original jurisdiction over felony partner or family member assault charges. District Courts and Justices' Courts have concurrent jurisdiction over misdemeanor partner or family member assault charges. St. v. Martz, 2008 MT 382, 347 M 47, 196 P3d 1239 (2008).

Challenge to Ballot Issue Timely — Laches Inapplicable: Proponents of a ballot issue contended that the opponents negligently delayed asserting their rights to challenge the issue and that the opponents' claim was therefore barred by laches. Laches applies when a claimant has unreasonably delayed or has been negligent in asserting the claim, to the prejudice of the party against whom relief is sought. The argument failed on two grounds. First, the proponents failed to raise laches in their answer to the complaint, and laches cannot be raised for the first time on appeal, so the defense was procedurally barred. Second, the opponents brought their claim within the narrow 30-day window after the ballot issues were certified (as provided in this section at the time), so it could not be reasonably argued that the opponents waited until the claim was stale before asserting it. Thus, the claim was not barred by laches. Montanans for Justice: Vote No on CI-98 v. St., 2006 MT 277, 334 M 237, 146 P3d 759 (2006).

Expedited Hearing on Validity of Ballot Measure Not Violative of Procedural Due Process: Opponents to a ballot measure timely filed a challenge, and the District Court expedited the hearing and denied the proponents additional time for discovery. On appeal, the proponents asserted that their due process rights were violated by the District Court's actions. The Supreme Court disagreed. The requirements for a procedural due process claim are notice and opportunity for a hearing appropriate to the nature of the case. The proponents could not claim lack of notice because: (1) the opponents' complaint was sufficiently specific to put the proponents on notice that the opponents contested the validity of addresses listed by paid signature gatherers; (2) the proponents acknowledged that the Secretary of State notified them during the signature gathering process that complaints had been received related to address falsification; and (3) denial of additional time for discovery regarding address falsification did not prejudice the proponents because the signature gatherers were contacted, hired, and paid by the proponents, so any information regarding the true addresses was within the exclusive knowledge of the proponents. The due process claim of lack of a meaningful hearing was also denied by the Supreme Court. The record showed that the proponents failed to use the time allocated for discovery or to avail themselves of available procedural remedies. The proponents did not answer the opponents' complaint, request any discovery, move for a continuance, take any depositions, file a pretrial brief, attend depositions conducted by the opponents, file proposed findings of fact or conclusions of law, or object to the District Court's proposed expedited schedule. Thus, any deprivation of a meaningful hearing was more a construct of the proponents' own failure to act than it was a function of the District Court's denial of more time for trial preparation. The proponents' due process claim failed. Montanans for Justice: Vote No on CI-98 v. St., 2006 MT 277, 334 M 237, 146 P3d 759 (2006), distinguishing Wilson v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 260 M 167, 858 P2d 368 (1993).

Time Limit for Filing for New Trial Constitutional — No Jurisdiction to Grant New Trial After Time Limit Runs: After the 60-day deadline for granting a new trial in former Rule 59(d), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), the District Court granted plaintiff a new trial. Defendant appealed, saying that the District Court was without jurisdiction. On appeal, plaintiff argued that the time limit was unconstitutional and arbitrary and deprived plaintiff of procedural due process. Citing In re Marriage of Richards, 2001 MT 183, 306 M 212, 31 P3d 1002 (2001), the Supreme Court noted that just because a rule is arbitrary does not mean that it should not be favored and that insisting on a firm time limit advances the cause of justice by bringing predictability to the legal process. The court concluded that the time limit is constitutional and that the District Court did not have jurisdiction to grant plaintiff a new trial after the time limit had run. Forsythe v. Leydon, 2004 MT 327, 324 M 121, 102 P3d 25 (2004), overruled in part by Green v. Gerber, 2013 MT 35, 369 Mont. 20, 303 P.3d 729. See also Kelly v. Sell & Sell Paint Contractors, 175 M 440, 574 P2d 1002 (1978).

Doctrine of Abstention Properly Applied by District Court Over Matter Subject to Tribal Court Jurisdiction: Defendants who were enrolled tribal members brought suit in tribal court, seeking damages for plaintiff's failure to timely close the purchase of real and personal property described in a buy-sell agreement. Plaintiff was also a tribal member who resided on the reservation. The tribal court concluded that it had subject matter and personal jurisdiction over the litigation. Plaintiff contended that the tribal court did not have jurisdiction, and while the matter was pending in tribal appellate court, filed the present action in state District Court, alleging various claims based on or arising out of buy-sell agreements. The District Court dismissed the state action, and plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court noted that Montana courts are open to all Montana citizens, including Indian citizens, who may sue in state court as long as Congress has not expressly retained jurisdiction in the United States, particularly if the Indian is a Montana citizen and the matter does not interfere with tribal self-government. Conversely, the court also recognized the sovereignty of a tribe to maintain the right of self-government and to control the internal relations of tribal members and recognized that tribal courts have jurisdiction over tribal members conducting business on tribal land with other tribal members. Thus, because the tribal court exercised jurisdiction and because the subject matter of plaintiff's state suit was based on or arose from the same sales agreements that were the subject of the tribal court case, the District Court properly exercised the doctrine of abstention and deferred to the tribal court opinion on the basis of comity. Dismissal of the state suit by the District Court was affirmed. Nielsen v. Brocksmith Land & Livestock, Inc., 2004 MT 101, 321 M 37, 88 P3d 1269 (2004). See also State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290 (1980), In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266 (1981), and Agri W. v. Koyama Farms, Inc., 281 M 167, 933 P2d 808 (1997).

Common-Law Recognition and Sovereignty of Little Shell Tribe — Suit Against Tribal Officials Barred: Plaintiffs were candidates in an election of the Little Shell Tribe of Indians and sued in Montana District Court for tort damages and injunctive relief against the incumbent candidates, claiming that plaintiffs had won the election. The District Court dismissed on grounds of lack of jurisdiction, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court noted that the tribe had been pursuing federal tribal recognition since the 1930s, but as yet, the tribe is not recognized by the federal government. Nevertheless, Montoya v. U.S., 180 US 261 (1901), establishes criteria for common-law recognition of a tribe. The court examined the Montoya criteria and held that the Little Shell Tribe satisfied each element of the test for common-law recognition, so the tribe is entitled to sovereignty. Tribal members are of the same or similar race, are united in a community, exist under one leadership or government, and inhabit a particular though sometimes ill-defined territory. Further, under Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 US 49 (1978), Indian tribes and their officials enjoy sovereign immunity from suit unless expressly limited by Congress. Thus, because the tribal officials in this case were acting in their official capacities, suit against them in state court was barred under the doctrine of sovereign immunity. Dismissal of the action by the District Court for lack of jurisdiction was affirmed. Koke v. Little Shell Tribe of Chippewa Indians of Mont., Inc., 2003 MT 121, 315 M 510, 68 P3d 814 (2003).

Error in Montana Court's Declination of Jurisdiction to Washington Court — Inconvenient Forum: Following several incidents of partner abuse over the years, the mother moved to Washington state and then requested that the Montana court decline jurisdiction as an inconvenient forum in order to allow the Washington court to assume jurisdiction. The request was denied, and the mother appealed. Under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act, a Montana court has jurisdiction to make child custody determinations if Montana is the child's home state, as defined in 40-7-103, and Montana will continue to have exclusive continuing jurisdiction unless the Montana court declines to exercise its jurisdiction. In this case, the parties conceded that Montana was the home state. Jurisdiction may be declined at any time if the Montana court determines that it is an inconvenient forum and that a court of another state is a more appropriate forum to make custody determinations. The factors in 40-7-108 must be considered when evaluating a motion to decline jurisdiction, and the Act places domestic violence at the top of the list of factors to be considered. Although this factor alone is not dispositive, the Supreme Court held that, given the high propensity for recidivism in domestic violence, when a court finds that partner abuse or child abuse has occurred or that a party has fled Montana to avoid further violence or abuse, the court is authorized to consider whether the party and the child might be better protected if further custody proceedings are held in another state. Here, the District Court abused its discretion by failing to consider which forum would best protect the mother and children. The Supreme Court then went on to discuss the other statutory factors and concluded that the protection of the parties, the years that the children have resided in Washington, the significant distance between the courts, the parties' disparate financial circumstances, the location of evidence and convenience of witnesses, and the familiarity factors all supported the Montana court declining jurisdiction. None of the jurisdictional factors mitigated against declination, and no factor outweighed the concern for safety raised by the history of domestic violence. Thus, the Supreme Court ordered the District Court to decline jurisdiction as an inconvenient forum and arrange to transfer the case to Washington. In re Marriage of Stoneman v. Drollinger, 2003 MT 25, 314 M 139, 64 P3d 997 (2003).

Following remand, the District Court held that the issue of child support should be transferred to Washington state in conjunction with the custody and parenting issues. Nevertheless, the wife filed a cross-appeal in 2007 arguing that under 40-5-149 (renumbered 40-5-1012), Montana retained jurisdiction over the child support issue. However, the Supreme Court dismissed the claim as untimely. Under Rule 4, M.R.App.P. (Title 26, ch. 10), notice of appeal must be filed within 30 days of judgment or order, but the wife's notice of cross-appeal was filed more than 11 months after the District Court's order that finally settled the matter. In re Marriage of Stoneman & Drollinger, 2008 MT 448, 348 M 17, 199 P3d 232 (2008).

Standard of Review of District Court Jurisdictional Questions: Whether a District Court has jurisdiction to rule on a matter is a question of law that the Supreme Court will review to determine whether the District Court had authority to act. A court exceeds jurisdiction through acts that exceed the defined power of the court, whether the power is defined by constitutional provisions, express statutes, or court rules. In re Marriage of Richards, 2001 MT 183, 306 M 212, 31 P3d 1002 (2001), following Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389 (2000), and Gen. Constructors, Inc. v. Chewculator, Inc., 2001 MT 54, 304 M 319, 21 P3d 604 (2001), and overruled in part by Green v. Gerber, 2013 MT 35, 369 Mont. 20, 303 P.3d 729).

Lack of District Court Jurisdiction Over Breach of Contract Dispute Regarding Work Performed Within Indian Reservation: The District Court held that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction over a breach of contract dispute between two Montana corporations and a non-Indian minority shareholder of one of the corporations for work performed within the boundaries of the Flathead Indian Reservation, concluding that the tribal court had sole jurisdiction to hear all commercial disputes arising on the reservation involving a tribal defendant and that any allegation of fraud or impropriety involving tribal policy for giving preference to Indian-owned businesses necessarily implicated tribal self-government. Plaintiff appealed, contending that a corporation, even if Indian-owned, is neither an "Indian" nor a "tribal member" for purposes of determining subject matter jurisdiction and that the matter was nothing more than one Montana corporation bringing a claim for money damages against another Montana corporation and did not call into question any tribal act. The District Court correctly applied the three-part test in State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973), in determining whether a state court may assume subject matter jurisdiction when tribal adjudicatory sovereignty over a civil dispute arising on a reservation is involved. The test involves consideration of whether: (1) federal treaties and statutes preempt state jurisdiction; (2) exercise of state jurisdiction would interfere with reservation self-government; and (3) the tribal court is currently exercising jurisdiction or has exercised it in a manner that preempts state jurisdiction. Pursuant to U.S. Supreme Court case law, if either of the first two prongs of the test is established, the state lacks jurisdiction. In analyzing the second prong of the test, the court applied Milbank Mut. Ins. Co. v. Eagleman, 218 M 58, 705 P2d 1117 (1985), which states that a tribe's interest in self-government for civil matters arising within a reservation can be implicated if a state or federal court resolves a dispute that impinges on a tribe's right to adjudicate controversies arising within the province of tribal courts or if the dispute itself calls into question the validity or propriety of an act fairly attributable to the tribe as a governmental body. In the context of this case, the questions then became: (1) whether the subcontractor was an Indian-owned business for preference purposes under its subcontract with the general contractor; and (2) whether the subcontractor committed fraud upon the tribe or otherwise violated the tribe's preference policy to the detriment of plaintiff. Concluding that the answers to both questions clearly implicated tribal court jurisdiction and policymaking authority, the court concluded that it could not assert jurisdiction without violating the policy favoring tribal self-government or interfering with the tribe's sovereignty. The Supreme Court agreed. To assume jurisdiction and decide whether a corporation had committed fraud upon the tribe or a contractor in privity with the tribe or to decide whether or not a corporation should be considered Indian-owned in spite of a prior determination by the tribe would require the District Court to impinge upon the tribe's right to adjudicate controversies arising within the province of the tribe's own courts. Further, even if the District Court were to assume that all of plaintiff's allegations were true, a hearing on the jurisdictional question was unnecessary because the court could not assume subject matter jurisdiction as a matter of law, so the court did not err by issuing its order rather than conducting a hearing on the question. Gen. Constructors, Inc. v. Chewculator, Inc., 2001 MT 54, 304 M 319, 21 P3d 604 (2001).

Spouse Responsible for Bankruptcy Credit Card Obligations Pursuant to Dissolution Decree: As part of the dissolution decree, the wife was ordered to return a quarterhorse and horse trailer to the husband. However, she sold both horse and trailer and used the proceeds for her own purposes, then declared bankruptcy. The District Court offset the husband's obligation to pay credit cards debts that resulted from discharge of the debts in the bankruptcy proceedings because the husband was then held solely responsible by the credit card companies for the debts that the wife had been ordered to pay under the dissolution decree. State District Courts have concurrent jurisdiction with federal bankruptcy courts in determining the dischargeability of debts, and the District Court thus had jurisdiction to determine that the wife was responsible for the credit card obligation. This determination conformed to federal bankruptcy law and was within the District Court's broad discretion to equitably apportion marital property. Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000). See also State ex rel. Rough v. District Court, 218 M 499, 710 P2d 47, 42 St. Rep. 1773 (1985).

Lack of District Court Jurisdiction Over Claims for Fees Incurred During Bankruptcy Proceedings: Watts filed a claim against Parsons in District Court for fees owing in a bankruptcy action, contending that the debt was incurred after the bankruptcy was discharged and closed and thus was not subject to review by the Bankruptcy Court. The District Court found that it had jurisdiction, based on Woodley v. Myers Capital Corp., 835 P2d 239 (Wash. Ct. App. 1992), and Metco, Inc. v. Huffman, 511 NW 2d 780 (Nebr. Ct. App. 1994), and granted Watts' request for fees. Citing In re Hathaway Ranch Partnership, 116 Bankr. Rep. 208 (Bankr. C.D. Calif. 1990), the Supreme Court noted that the burden of showing entitlement to fees was on Watts. Watts asserted that the parties entered into an agreement for payment of fees after the bankruptcy was discharged but that the agreement was never brought to the attention of or approved by the Bankruptcy Court. By withholding the terms of the agreement from the Bankruptcy Court, Watts denied Parsons the lawful protection of that court. The Supreme Court distinguished Woodley and Metco, noting that in the present case, Watts never submitted the question of fees to the Bankruptcy Court and that the District Court was not in a position to determine whether the fees were reasonable. Because the District Court did not have jurisdiction over the claim for professional fees incurred during the pendency of the bankruptcy action, the case was remanded to District Court with instructions to dismiss. Watts & Associates, Inc. v. Parsons, 1999 MT 56, 293 M 464, 976 P2d 984, 56 St. Rep. 237 (1999).

Sale of Trust Lands Within Flathead Reservation — No Jurisdiction Found for Purposes of Breach of Contract, Fraud, and Negligent Misrepresentation: Neuman, an enrolled member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, sought assistance from the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) to clear the title to trust land within the Flathead Reservation so that Neuman could sell it. He also engaged a real estate broker. Both Neuman and prospective buyers, the Krauses, made considerable efforts to consummate the sale, but Neuman was informed by the BIA that there was a substantial cloud on the title. Neuman therefore terminated the listing agreement, and the Krauses sued for damages, alleging breach of contract, fraud, constructive fraud, fraud in the inducement, and negligent misrepresentation. The District Court, on the recommendation of a special master and after applying the test laid out in State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973), found a lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The Supreme Court held that 25 U.S.C. 345 and 28 U.S.C. 1353 vest exclusive jurisdiction in the federal courts over disputes involving allotted lands within Indian reservations and that 28 U.S.C. 1360 preempted its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court also held that the Krauses' lawsuit was a dispute involving title to allotted lands even though the action was a tort claim and breach of contract claim because all of the Krauses' claims could not be separated from questions of title to Indian trust lands. Noting that it had already held in In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559 (1993), that an attempt by state courts to adjudicate rights in Indian trust land for the purpose of money damages was precluded by federal law, the Supreme Court held that it made no difference that the Krauses had deleted from their complaint a prayer for specific performance. The claims could still not be separated from the issue of title to Indian lands. Krause v. Neuman, 284 M 399, 943 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 937 (1997).

Previous Assumption of Jurisdiction by Tribal Court — Jurisdiction Improperly Sustained by State District Court: It was error for a state District Court to sustain jurisdiction when a tribal court had previously assumed jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter by issuing a temporary restraining order against plaintiff. Abstention, as a matter of comity, was exercised by the Supreme Court in holding that jurisdiction was retained in the tribal court. Agri W. v. Koyama Farms, Inc., 281 M 167, 933 P2d 808, 54 St. Rep. 118 (1997), following State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290 (1980), In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266 (1981), and In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559 (1993).

Damage Claim Not Available as Challenge to District Court Subject Matter Jurisdiction: Although the jurisdiction of courts can be limited by constitutional or statutory provisions on the basis of the amount in controversy or dispute between the parties, Montana District Courts are not constrained by such limits. Therefore, the amount and type of a damage claim in District Court may not be raised to challenge a District Court's subject matter jurisdiction. Day v. Payne, 280 M 273, 929 P2d 864, 53 St. Rep. 1400 (1996).

Lack of Probate Court Jurisdiction in Deciding Attorney Fee Related to Tort Claim: A probate attorney requested that the District Court stay proceedings on a claim that the attorney had wrongfully converted estate property until the probate court finally determined applicable attorney fees. The probate court had jurisdiction over and decided the amount of the attorney fees for probate of the estate but had no jurisdiction to decide the attorney fee related to the tort claim. Thus, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to delay trial of the conversion claim until the probate court determined the amount of the attorney fee. Eatinger v. Johnson, 269 M 99, 887 P2d 231, 51 St. Rep. 1484 (1994).

Right to Declaratory Judgment on Discretionary Military Policy Threatening Public Sector Harm: The general rule of no subject matter court jurisdiction over a discretionary military policy (in this case, a state government military policy) did not apply to a state requirement that its firefighters protecting civilian and National Guard aircraft belong to the Montana Air National Guard. Loss of the job for failure to belong was a threatened injury resulting from military intrusion into the civilian sector by the state. The state did not show that the requirement was related to military employment. Therefore, the rule could not be used to dismiss a firefighter's petition for declaratory judgment. McKamey v. St., 268 M 137, 885 P2d 515, 51 St. Rep. 1218 (1994).

Equitable Tolling of Statute of Limitations Applicable — Different Plaintiffs in Separate Actions: Natelson filed an original action in the Supreme Court seeking a declaratory judgment that a law increasing the state income tax was suspended by a referendum petition and that that suspension did not violate state or federal constitutional provisions. The Supreme Court dismissed that action. Nicholson then filed the present action in District Court, seeking a declaratory judgment that the suspension of the state income tax increase did violate constitutional principles. Defendant Cooney argued that Nicholson's complaint was time-barred, as it was not filed within 30 days of the certification of the referendum petitions suspending the income tax increase. Citing Harrison v. Chance, 244 M 215, 797 P2d 200 (1990), the Supreme Court held that the doctrine of equitable tolling of the statute of limitations applied to the second action even though the plaintiffs were not the same. The Supreme Court stated that it would not penalize the plaintiffs in the second action because of the premature filing of the original action in the Supreme Court. Nicholson v. Cooney, 265 M 406, 877 P2d 486, 51 St. Rep. 579 (1994), followed in Sorenson v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 279 M 527, 927 P2d 1030, 53 St. Rep. 1269 (1996).

Marriage Dissolution Brought by Tribal Member Against Non-Indian Spouse — Jurisdiction to Apportion Indian Trust Land: Wife who was a member of the Blackfeet Tribe sought a marriage dissolution in state court from her husband who was a non-Indian. The District Court granted the dissolution but held it did not have jurisdiction to apportion the parties' marital estate, which consisted of about 4,000 acres of Indian trust land on the Blackfeet Reservation, and granted wife's motion to dismiss. On appeal, husband contended that the state court had jurisdiction, relying on a provision in the Blackfeet Tribal Law and Order Code that all divorces must be consummated in accordance with Montana law. However, that provision did not cede jurisdiction to the state but merely governed the tribal court's choice of law. While the state has an interest in ensuring the existence of a forum in which marital property within its borders may be apportioned upon a dissolution, that interest is met by the availability of an alternative forum in the Blackfeet Tribal Court. The state's interest in the property and proceedings is inconsequential compared with the federal and tribal interests at stake. Therefore, the District Court did not err in concluding that it lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the disposition of the Indian trust land that was the parties' only significant marital asset. In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559, 50 St. Rep. 462 (1993), following White Mountain Apache v. Bracker, 448 US 136, 65 L Ed 2d 665, 100 S Ct 2578 (1980), and N. Mex. v. Mescalero Apache Tribe, 462 US 324, 76 L Ed 2d 611, 103 S Ct 2375 (1983), and distinguishing Sheppard v. Sheppard, 655 P2d 895 (Idaho 1982). In re Marriage of Wellman was followed as to lack of jurisdiction over trust lands, in context of sale of real property, in Krause v. Neuman, 284 M 399, 943 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 937 (1997).

Lack of District Court Jurisdiction in Claim for Damages — Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Gilpins initiated suit for damages resulting from temporary suspension of their day-care license by the Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), contending that, under this section, jurisdiction was in the District Court because the action involved a civil claim against the state for payment of money. However, the court properly dismissed the claim for lack of jurisdiction because Gilpins failed to exhaust all administrative remedies available within the agency, as required by 2-4-702, and because there was no showing made pursuant to 2-4-701 that a review of the agency decision by a hearings examiner would not provide an adequate remedy. Gilpin v. St., 249 M 37, 812 P2d 1265, 48 St. Rep. 567 (1991).

Judgment and Sentence Prerequisite to Appeal to District Court — Misdemeanors: Except for misdemeanors listed in subsection (2) of this section, a District Court is limited to appellate jurisdiction of misdemeanor cases. Imposition of sentence and entry of a final judgment by a Justice's Court or City Court are prerequisites to appeal to a District Court, and a party may not consent to subject matter jurisdiction or waive the want of jurisdiction. St. v. Hegeman, 248 M 49, 808 P2d 509, 48 St. Rep. 318 (1991), followed in St. v. Tweedy, 277 M 313, 922 P2d 1134, 53 St. Rep. 656 (1996), and St. v. Diesen, 1998 MT 163, 290 M 55, 964 P2d 712, 55 St. Rep. 655 (1998).

Discretion of One Judge to Reconsider Ruling Made by Another Judge in Same Case: The rule that judges of coordinate jurisdictions sitting in the same court and in the same case may not ordinarily overrule the decisions of each other is not an imperative and does not necessarily mandate that a court does not have discretion, in appropriate circumstances, to reconsider a ruling made by another judge in the same case. Therefore, a second judge was justified in reconsidering a previous ruling, by a judge who later retired, on the question of school district immunity when that issue had been addressed and significantly clarified by a Supreme Court decision subsequent to the initial ruling. Hayworth v. School District No. 19, 243 M 503, 795 P2d 470, 47 St. Rep. 1361 (1990), followed in Teamsters Union Local No. 2 v. C.N.H. Acquisitions, Inc., 2009 MT 92, 350 M 18, 204 P3d 733 (2009).

Jurisdiction of Victimless Crime by Non-Indian on Reservation: The District Court held that state courts do not have jurisdiction over the crime of failing to report an accident when the incident occurred within the reservation, the driver was a non-Indian, and the property belonged to an Indian. The Supreme Court found that the offense should be analyzed as a victimless crime for purposes of determining jurisdiction because the alleged criminal act was failure to discharge a reporting duty, not infliction of damage upon property belonging to an Indian. Under the authority of U.S. v. Wheeler, 435 US 313, 55 L Ed 2d 303, 98 S Ct 1079 (1978), Draper v. U.S., 164 US 240, 41 L Ed 419, 17 S Ct 107 (1896), and 18 U.S.C. 1152, federal and tribal interests in providing a federal forum failed to outweigh the state's strong interest in public safety. The policy of providing a federal forum when criminal prosecutions pit the interests of non-Indian offenders against Indian victims was not furthered where, as here, the connection to destruction of Indian property was only tangential to the crime charged; therefore, the state's interests controlled. St. v. Thomas, 233 M 451, 760 P2d 96, 45 St. Rep. 1627 (1988), followed in St. v. Haskins, 269 M 202, 887 P2d 1189, 51 St. Rep. 1474 (1994).

Jurisdiction of Offense of Selling Alcohol Without a License: The District Court was the proper court to try the offense of sale of beer or wine without a valid state license. St. v. Barnes, 232 M 405, 758 P2d 264, 45 St. Rep. 1150 (1988).

Property in State Sufficient for Jurisdiction: In an action to recover unauthorized funds in a bank account in Montana, there were sufficient minimum contacts to establish jurisdiction in Montana even though the plaintiff had no contacts with the state and the defendant had never been in Montana. The deposited funds in the Montana bank account were found to be traceable to the alleged claims of kickback asserted against the defendant in a suit in his home state, and the bank account not only was related to the controversy, it was the subject of the controversy. The tests of "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice" were met to establish jurisdiction over the nonresident defendant in Montana. Consumers United Ins. Co. v. Syverson, 227 M 188, 738 P2d 110, 44 St. Rep. 999 (1987).

New Findings on Motion to Amend Order — When Permissible: Plaintiff requested modification of child support. Defendant responded and requested custody of the child. The first judge, after a hearing, issued findings of fact, conclusions of law, and an order. A second judge sat on the plaintiff's motions to amend and for a new trial. He issued amended findings of fact, conclusions of law, and an order. The defendant questioned the propriety of the amended findings, conclusions, and order. The Supreme Court relied on St. v. Carden, 170 M 437, 555 P2d 738 (1976), and Mereness v. Frito-Lay, 216 M 154, 700 P2d 182 (1985), to reach the general rule that one District Judge may overrule or review a decision of another District Judge in the same case only when there are exceptional circumstances. The court found no exceptional circumstances or cogent reasons for amending the original decision in this case. The first judge could have been called back to sit on the motion to amend, there was no pressing urgency, and no substantially new evidence was presented. Hansen v. Jurgens, 222 M 345, 722 P2d 1151, 43 St. Rep. 1316 (1986).

When District Court Jurisdiction Concurrent With Bankruptcy Court: The state District Courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the federal Bankruptcy Court in determining whether certain obligations under a marriage dissolution decree are exempted from discharge in bankruptcy. State ex rel. Rough v. District Court, 218 M 499, 710 P2d 47, 42 St. Rep. 1773 (1985), followed in State ex rel. Austin v. Austin, 221 M 488, 719 P2d 429, 43 St. Rep. 998 (1986), and Lee v. Lee, 2000 MT 67, 299 M 78, 996 P2d 389, 57 St. Rep. 308 (2000).

District Court Jurisdiction — Invoked by Probable Cause in Leave to File Information — Res Judicata After Appeal Process: The issue of subject matter jurisdiction cannot be waived or conferred by consent of a party and may be raised at any stage of a judicial proceeding or sua sponte by the court; but if the question of jurisdiction turns upon a finding of whether the affidavit of application for leave to file an information shows probable cause and the defendant has been found guilty and the judgment has not been appealed or has been affirmed on appeal, the issue of probable cause is res judicata. St. v. Davis, 210 M 28, 681 P2d 42, 41 St. Rep. 898 (1984). In St. v. Spreadbury, 2011 MT 176, 361 Mont. 253, 257 P.3d 392, the Supreme Court held that the issue of whether the information included allegations to establish probable cause is not a jurisdictional issue, and the court overruled statements to the contrary made in Davis and in St. v. Thompson, 243 Mont. 28, 792 P.2d 1103 (1990).

Proper Forum Selection: With the plaintiff, the scene of the injury, and most of the witnesses in Idaho, a suit for personal injuries filed in Montana was dismissed by the District Court under the doctrine of forum non conveniens. The Supreme Court reversed, stating that the doctrine must be tempered by an open-door policy and that the doctrine should not presently be applied to Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) actions. Bevacqua v. Burlington N., Inc., 183 M 237, 598 P2d 1124, 36 St. Rep. 1523 (1979).

Order Absent Jurisdiction Void: An order entered in the absence of jurisdiction is void. In re the Marriage of Schultz v. Schultz, 183 M 20, 597 P2d 1174, 36 St. Rep. 1993 (1979), following State ex rel. Thompson v. District Court, 75 M 147, 242 P 959 (1926).

Forum Non Conveniens Not Applicable in FELA Suits: The doctrine of forum non conveniens is not applicable to a Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) suit filed in a Montana District Court. There is a strong policy favoring plaintiff's forum selection in FELA cases, and the Montana Constitution states that the courts of justice must be open to all persons. Labella v. Burlington N., Inc., 182 M 202, 595 P2d 1184, 36 St. Rep. 1016 (1979).

Naturalization of Aliens: The District Courts possess concurrent jurisdiction with the federal courts (within the limitations prescribed by act of Congress relating to the subject) to naturalize aliens, and therefore when such power is exercised by them, the proceeding is a judicial and not a political one. Hence the Supreme Court may, on certiorari, review a judgment rendered in such a proceeding. State ex rel. Weisz v. District Court, 61 M 427, 202 P 387 (1921).

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION

Appeal in Commissioner of Political Practices Enforcement Action Premature — Dismissal for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Proper: In a Commissioner of Political Practices enforcement action, the defendant's motion to dismiss the enforcement action in the First Judicial District Court, Lewis and Clark County, for lack of subject matter jurisdiction was properly denied. Section 13-37-113, which allows for prosecutions in the county in which the violation occurred or in Lewis and Clark County, clearly conferred subject matter jurisdiction on the District Court. Because the issue at bar was not one of subject matter jurisdiction but, rather, was an issue of statutory interpretation, the Supreme Court determined that the defendant's appeal must be characterized as one seeking relief from the denial of a motion to dismiss, which is not appealable, and dismissed the appeal as premature. Comm'r of Political Practices v. Bannan, 2015 MT 220, 380 Mont. 194, 354 P.3d 601.

Challenge to Protest Provision Mooted by County Inaction: Individuals residing within the boundary of a proposed zoning district sought an injunction against Gallatin County, claiming the protest provision of 76-2-205 was unconstitutional. While the parties awaited the injunction hearing, the 30-day postprotest deadline passed without the county taking action. An intervening party moved for summary judgment, which the District Court granted on the basis of mootness because the county had not acted within the statutory deadlines. The Supreme Court affirmed and declined to consider the constitutional challenge under the "capable of repetition" exception. The challenge never ripened because the zoning district did not fail due to the protest provision, but failed because of county inaction. Gateway Opencut Min. Action Group v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2011 MT 198, 361 Mont. 398, 260 P.3d 133.

Personal Jurisdiction Over Nonresident Business — Exercise of Long-Arm Jurisdiction Proper: The nonresident defendant business conducted sufficient business in Montana to support the extension of long-arm jurisdiction over the defendant when the defendant knew that the plaintiff intended to use the defendant's product in its Montana business, the defendant had previously sold its product to the plaintiff, and the defendant had serviced its product through other Montana businesses. Further, because the defendant purposefully availed itself of the privilege of conducting business in Montana, resulting in the plaintiff's alleged injury in Montana, and because the defendant reasonably could have anticipated defending itself in Montana, Montana's exercise of personal jurisdiction over the defendant comported with due process. Grizzly Sec. Armored Express, Inc. v. The Armored Group, LLC, 2011 MT 128, 360 Mont. 517, 255 P.3d 143.

Jurisdiction Conferred on District Court When Acts of Stalking Committed Partly Within State: The District Court had jurisdiction over a petition for a temporary order of protection because the petition alleged that acts of stalking were committed partly within Montana. There is no statutory requirement under 40-15-102 or 45-5-220 that repeated acts of stalking must occur in Montana in order to confer jurisdiction on the District Court. Jordan v. Kalin, 2011 MT 142, 361 Mont. 50, 256 P.3d 909.

Doctrine of Priority Jurisdiction Not Considered General Rule: An automobile injury that occurred in Montana involved a Nevada insurer that filed an action in Nevada prior to plaintiff's case being filed in Montana. The insurer contended that the Montana court should have abstained from jurisdiction under the doctrine of priority jurisdiction, which holds that the first court to exercise concurrent jurisdiction retains jurisdiction to dispose of the entire case. The Supreme Court recognized that it had applied priority jurisdiction in Agri W. v. Koyama Farms, Inc., 281 M 167, 933 P2d 808 (1997), but that case involved federal law and tribal court jurisdiction and was distinguishable from the present case. The doctrine has not been adopted as a general rule, and the court declined to apply it in this case. Tenas v. Progressive Preferred Ins. Co., 2008 MT 393, 347 M 133, 197 P3d 990 (2008).

District Court Jurisdiction to Determine Contractual Appurtenance of Water Rights Based on Historic Use: District Courts have jurisdiction to determine appurtenance of water rights based on historic use. Although a District Court may not have jurisdiction to reallocate disputed water rights absent a contract, in this case defendant contractually sold water rights to plaintiffs, and upon disagreement over which water rights were sold, the District Court was asked to resolve the disagreement and did so by interpreting the contract, which was wholly within the court's jurisdiction and did not impose on the exclusive domain of the Water Court. Kruer v. Three Creeks Ranch of Wy., L.L.C., 2008 MT 315, 346 M 66, 194 P3d 634 (2008). See also Castillo v. Kunnemann, 197 M 190, 642 P2d 1019 (1982), Axtell v. M.S. State Court Jurisdiction Over Real Property Dispute Involving Federal Easement: A public lands access group sued Jones for blocking access to public lands that were previously accessible via a road across Jones's land. When the access group subsequently discovered that the federal Bureau of Reclamation had an express, nonexclusive easement over the road for irrigation and maintenance purposes since the road was constructed, the Bureau was joined as a party defendant. The Bureau and the access group then entered an agreement acknowledging the Bureau's easement, recognizing that the Bureau had never blocked public access to the road, and dismissing the Bureau from the suit. Jones then moved to dismiss the suit on grounds that the access group's claim for a prescriptive easement raised a dispute in title between the group and the United States and that because federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction over such title disputes under the federal Quiet Title Act (FQTA), 28 U.S.C. 2409, et seq., the state District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction over the claim, so the claim could not proceed in state court. The District Court agreed and dismissed the claim with prejudice. The access group appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The United States, through the Bureau, had been named as a defendant, knowingly and expressly disavowed a dispute in title between the Bureau and the access group, and agreed to be voluntarily dismissed from the suit. Therefore, a disputed title between the access group and the federal agency, which is required for jurisdiction under the FQTA, did not exist, nor did Jones provide any authority for the proposition that a defendant in a property dispute can assert a property interest of the United States under the FQTA in order to remove the cause of action to federal District Court. Jones failed to establish that the FQTA applied in this case, so the District Court did have subject matter jurisdiction over the action against Jones, and the action was remanded to District Court for further proceedings. Pub. Lands Access Ass'n, Inc. v. Jones, 2008 MT 12, 341 M 111, 176 P3d 1005 (2008). See also Leisnoi, Inc. v. U.S., 170 F3d 1188 (9th Cir. 1999).

Challenge to Invalidate Signatures for Minimum Wage Initiative Rendered Moot by Election: Montanans for Equal Application of Initiative Laws (Montanans for Equal Application) filed an action to invalidate signatures gathered by supporters of Initiative Measure No. 151 (I-151), a proposal to raise the state minimum wage, and to enjoin the Secretary of State from including I-151 on the general election ballot. Supporters of I-151 filed a motion for summary judgment, contending that Montanans for Equal Application's challenge was barred by the 30-day limitation period then provided in this section (see 13-27-317 for similar limitation).

The District Court granted summary judgment for Raise Montana, ruling that Montanans for Equal Application's claim was untimely under this section because it was not filed within the then-required 30 days after the date on which the Secretary of State notified the Governor that a sufficient number of signatures had been obtained to qualify for the ballot. Montanans for Equal Application appealed, arguing that the District Court ignored the plain meaning of this section, which allowed a challenge of a ballot issue "at any time" after discovery of illegal signatures. Raise Montana countered that not only did the District Court correctly interpret the former version of this section to bar a claim filed 83 days after certification, but more importantly, Art. III, sec. 4, Mont. Const., which prohibits a challenge of the sufficiency of an initiative after an election, rendered the challenge moot. Agreeing with Raise Montana, the Supreme Court ruled that Montanans for Equal Application did not begin their litigation in sufficient time to appeal the trial court's decision before the election and the unambiguous language of Art. III, sec. 4(3), Mont. Const., became operative. Montanans for Equal Application of Initiative Laws v. St., 2007 MT 75, 336 M 450, 154 P3d 1202 (2007).

Justice's Court Action Complete — Award of Attorney Fees Pursuant to District Court Appeal: Bugger sued McGough and Johnson in Justice's Court in a landlord tenant action. The District Court dismissed Johnson from the action, and McGough was granted summary judgment. Bugger then filed an amended complaint in District Court. The District Court awarded Johnson $20,479.71 in attorney fees. Bugger appealed on grounds that the award exceeded the jurisdictional limit of $7,000 in 3-10-301 for Justice's Court claims. The Supreme Court disagreed. Once the Justice's Court ruled, Bugger's Justice's Court action was ended, and the District Court action was a new action, not an appeal. The District Court acted within its original jurisdictional capacity under this section, and the limit in 3-10-301 did not apply. The award was affirmed. Bugger v. McGough, 2006 MT 248, 334 M 77, 144 P3d 802 (2006).

District Court Jurisdiction Over Grandparent-Grandchild Contact Proceedings: In the case of a petition for grandparent-grandchild contact brought under Title 40, ch. 9, the District Court retains jurisdiction to hear the petition and to issue a ruling on it. In re Grandparent-Grandchild Contact of Stewart v. Evans, 2006 MT 102, 332 M 148, 136 P3d 524 (2006).

Subject Matter Jurisdiction of District Court to Determine Whether Franchise Exists: Plaintiff filed an action under 61-4-210, contending that defendant failed to follow the notice provisions in 61-4-205 in terminating plaintiff's dealership agreement and that defendant needed to exhaust its administrative remedies before the District Court could obtain subject matter jurisdiction. Defendant contended that the Department of Justice Motor Vehicle Division lacked jurisdiction because the dealer agreement did not constitute a franchise, so the administrative and notice provisions did not apply. The Supreme Court noted that a vehicle dealer that believes that its agreement with a manufacturer, distributor, or importer constitutes a franchise and that the notice requirements have not been complied with may bring a direct action in District Court pursuant to 61-4-210 for violation of the notice requirement. That is what plaintiff did. However, an action under 61-4-210 is not connected to the administrative contested case proceedings provided for in 61-4-205 and 61-4-206 and does not require a party to initiate and exhaust administrative proceedings prior to bringing the action. Thus, the District Court had subject matter jurisdiction over the question of whether a franchise agreement existed between the parties. Hi-Tech Motors, Inc. v. Bombardier Motor Corp. of Am., 2005 MT 187, 328 M 66, 117 P3d 159 (2005).

No Montana Personal Jurisdiction Over Regional Out-of-State Insurer: Carter, a part-time "snow bird" resident of Montana, was injured in an automobile accident in Montana shortly after moving from Mississippi. Carter filed a declaratory judgment action against the defendant, a regional out-of-state insurer that did not do business in Montana, requesting interpretation of an insurance contract issued on Carter's vehicles in Mississippi. The insurer contested Montana's exercise of personal jurisdiction and moved for summary judgment. The District Court concluded that it did not have personal jurisdiction and granted summary judgment. Carter appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The court cited Bahn v. Chicago Motor Club, 634 A2d 63 (Md. 1993), for the holding that although an insurer's promise to provide nationwide coverage may establish that the insurer has agreed to submit to jurisdiction in any forum that has jurisdiction to adjudicate claims against its insured, this agreement does not imply a further agreement to allow the insured to bring suit against the insurer in any state. Even though the insurer could reasonably anticipate that the insured could suffer an injury within the insurer's 50-state coverage, that foreseeability, without more, was not sufficient to subject the insurer to personal jurisdiction in Montana courts. The underlying dispute related to coverage and had nothing to do with the fact that the accident occurred in Montana or that Carter was living in this state at the time. Thus, although Carter had every right to sue the insurer over its coverage issues, in this case, Montana courts did not have personal jurisdiction over the insurer that was required as a predicate to maintenance of an action in Montana. Summary dismissal was proper. Carter v. Miss. Farm Bureau Cas. Ins. Co., 2005 MT 74, 326 M 350, 109 P3d 735 (2005). See also Bi-Lo Foods, Inc. v. Alpine Bank, 1998 MT 40, 287 M 367, 955 P2d 154 (1998).

District Court Authority to Determine Constitutionality of Proposed County Ordinance: In 1994, Ravalli County voters passed three ordinances, seeking to control obscenity and the display and distribution of obscene material to minors. The ordinances were subsequently held unconstitutional, but in 2002, defendant again filed two proposed ordinances with the Ravalli County Clerk and Recorder, seeking to proscribe the same conduct. The county asked the District Court to rule on the constitutionality of the proposed ordinances pursuant to 7-5-135, but the court declined on grounds that: (1) the proposed ordinances were legislative rather than administrative and therefore valid under the Montana Constitution; (2) 7-5-135 did not vest a District Court with jurisdiction to determine the constitutionality of an ordinance prior to adoption; (3) a suit is not a method by which a party may have a District Court prematurely consider the constitutionality of the subject matter of a proposed initiative or referendum prior to placement of the measure on the ballot; (4) ruling on a proposed ordinance would force the court to issue an advisory opinion on constitutionality in the absence of any defined basis for a constitutional attack; and (5) under Hardy v. Progressive Specialty Ins. Co., 2003 MT 85, 315 M 107, 67 P3d 892 (2003), a preliminary ruling would allow the county to avoid the burden of showing the unconstitutionality of a legislative enactment beyond a reasonable doubt. The county appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The burden of proof requirement articulated in Hardy applies to constitutional challenges to existing statutes, not to proposed initiatives and referenda. Although the constitutionality of an enacted legislative statute is prima facie presumed, there is no presumption of validity of a proposed statute. Under the plain meaning of 7-5-135, a District Court must, after conducting any appropriate briefing and factfinding, determine whether a proposed ordinance would be constitutional and valid if passed. The case was remanded for substantive District Court review of the proposed ordinances. Ravalli County v. Erickson, 2004 MT 35, 320 M 31, 85 P3d 772 (2004).

Guidelines for Determining Whether Indian Tribe Has Waived Sovereign Immunity in Contract — Inapplicability of Statute of Frauds to Question of Subject Matter Jurisdiction: Plaintiff contended that he signed a 7-year contract with the Crow Tribe to provide consulting services and to act as a program manager for the planning and construction of a power plant on tribal property and that the tribe breached the contract and failed to pay him. The tribe moved to dismiss on grounds that the District Court lacked personal and subject matter jurisdiction because of the tribe's sovereign immunity. The District Court denied the motion but reserved the right to readdress the issue of subject matter jurisdiction. Following further discovery, neither party could produce a signed copy of the alleged contract. The District Court concluded that because the alleged contract was for employment for more than 1 year, the statute of frauds applied and noted that although plaintiff's performance would normally create an exception to the statute of frauds pursuant to the court's equitable powers, to exercise that power in this case would circumvent the tribe's sovereign immunity in contravention of federal law. The District Court further concluded that although there was an express agreement that was partially performed and that the agreement contained a waiver of tribal immunity from suit in state court, as indicated by affidavits submitted by plaintiff and the tribal presiding officer, because of the fact that a signed copy of the contract was not produced, there was insufficient evidence to overcome the presumption against waiver of tribal immunity, so the action was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The Montana statute of frauds in 28-2-903 limits the enforceability of certain contracts but does not affect a District Court's subject matter jurisdiction, so a District Court need not consider the statute of frauds when determining subject matter jurisdiction; furthermore, the court does not need to invoke its equitable powers to find jurisdiction. Rather, the question facing the District Court was whether the tribe clearly and unequivocally waived its sovereign immunity. The Supreme Court found that plaintiff's complaint alleged sufficient facts that, if true, would vest the District Court with subject matter jurisdiction. The tribe produced no evidence to refute the affidavits or to controvert the recollections of the affiants. Absent any factual issue to resolve, the Supreme Court concluded that plaintiff presented undisputed evidence proving the establishment of a contract that included an unequivocal waiver of sovereign immunity, so dismissal of the complaint by the District Court on jurisdictional grounds constituted reversible error. Bradley v. Crow Tribe of Indians, 2003 MT 82, 315 M 75, 67 P3d 306 (2003). On remand, the District Court again granted Bradley's motion for summary judgment after holding that the tribe's motion to alter or amend was denied because the court did not rule on the motion within 60 days. The Supreme Court held that because there is no provision in former Rule 56, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), for entry of summary judgment by default, denial of the tribe's motion was erroneous, and because questions of fact existed regarding contract ambiguity and damages, the case was again reversed and remanded for further consideration. Bradley v. Crow Tribe of Indians, 2005 MT 309, 329 M 448, 124 P3d 1143 (2005).

Venue Versus Jurisdiction — Failure to Move for Change of Venue at Initial Appearance Constituting Waiver of Right to Later Object to Venue: A mother filed in District Court in Judith Basin County for review of a child support modification consent order by the Department of Public Health and Human Services Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) reducing the father's child support obligation. CSED moved for dismissal, claiming that the mother had failed to exhaust her administrative remedies. The District Court granted the motion based on lack of jurisdiction, concluding that the petition should have been filed in a different county. The mother appealed, contending that the court confused the concepts of venue and jurisdiction and contending that dismissal of the petition for lack of jurisdiction was erroneous as a matter of law. The Supreme Court agreed and reversed. The District Court's interpretation of 2-4-702 as a requirement that a petition for judicial review must be filed in the correct venue for the court to obtain jurisdiction was incorrect as a matter of law. Jurisdiction is a court's authority to hear and determine a case that goes to the power of the court and cannot be waived or conferred by consent of the parties when there is no basis for jurisdiction under the law, while venue refers to the place where a case is to be heard or where the power of the court is to be exercised and is a personal privilege of defendant that may be waived and that is considered waived pursuant to former Rule 12(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), unless a motion to change venue is made at defendant's initial appearance. Thus, the mother's petition for judicial review vested the Judith Basin County District Court with jurisdiction under 2-4-702. Whether venue was proper in the county where the petition was filed was an entirely different issue. Section 2-4-702 also sets forth the proper place where a contested administrative decision can be heard, providing that the petition must be filed in the District Court for the county where the petitioner resides or has a principal place of business or where the agency maintains its principal office. Upon proper motion, the matter should have been transferred to the proper county, but CSED failed to move for a change of venue at the initial appearance, thereby waiving its right to later object to venue, opting instead to move to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction. Therefore, Judith Basin County was a proper place for trial absent agreement by the parties to transfer venue. In re Support Obligation of McGurran, 2002 MT 144, 310 M 268, 49 P3d 626 (2002).

Failure to Remove Reference in Referendum — Substantive Defect: A legislative referendum purported to eliminate the Office of Secretary of State but failed to address a provision in the constitution assigning a duty to the Secretary of State or to designate who would assume that duty. Although judicial intervention in referenda or initiatives prior to an election is not encouraged, the Supreme Court exercised its statutory prerogative of judicial review and held that the omission was a substantive defect, not a defect of form. If passed, the referendum would have left a defect in the constitution that could not be remedied except by another election. The Secretary of State was thus properly enjoined from presenting the referendum to electors. Cobb v. St., 278 M 307, 924 P2d 268, 53 St. Rep. 920 (1996). See also Reichert v. St., 2012 MT 111, 365 Mont. 92, 278 P.3d 455.

Taxpayer Properly Held in Contempt for Refusal to File Income Tax Returns — Privilege Against Self-Incrimination No Defense: Gillispie failed to file an income tax return for 4 years. The District Court ordered her to file the returns or to show cause why she should not be required to file them. At the hearing, the Department of Revenue introduced Gillispie's W-2 forms, which showed that she had made the minimum income necessary to require her to file returns. The District Court ordered her to file the returns or be found in contempt. When Gillispie failed to file the returns, the District Court held her in contempt, and Gillispie filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus with the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held that the District Court had jurisdiction to order Gillispie to file the returns and jurisdiction to hold Gillispie in contempt and that the District Court also had sufficient evidence to do so. The Supreme Court also held that Gillispie's privilege against self-incrimination does not justify the outright refusal to file a return and cannot be used as a method of evading payment of lawful taxes. The Supreme Court held that she must demonstrate the specific parts of the returns that would result in self-incrimination. Gillispie v. Sherlock, 279 M 21, 929 P2d 199, 53 St. Rep. 507 (1996).

Civil Action by Indians Against Non-Indians — Jurisdiction Upheld: Lamberts, enrolled members of the Fort Peck Tribe, sued Ryozik and others who were Canadian citizens for injuries sustained in an automobile accident that occurred within the exterior boundaries of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation. The District Court dismissed the action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Citing Emerson v. Boyd, 247 M 241, 805 P2d 587 (1990), and using the three-part test applied in Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973), the Supreme Court held that there was no threat to tribal sovereignty posed by Indian citizens of Montana seeking to invoke the jurisdiction of the District Court as plaintiffs in an action against non-Indians for injuries sustained on a reservation. The Supreme Court noted that the use of the courts is guaranteed to all state citizens under Art. II, sec. 16, of the Montana Constitution. A failure to recognize that right would constitute a denial of due process guaranteed by Art. II, sec. 17, of the Montana Constitution and a denial of equal protection guaranteed by Art. II, sec. 4, of the Montana Constitution. Lambert v. Ryozik, 268 M 219, 886 P2d 378, 51 St. Rep. 1250 (1994). In In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, the Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear in its entirety and Lambert v. Ryozik to the extent it relied on the Iron Bear test.

No State Jurisdiction of Indian Reservation Commercial Transactions — Preemption by Tribal Jurisdiction: A state District Court did not have primary subject matter jurisdiction over a civil debt action arising out of a commercial transaction on an Indian reservation and brought by a non-Indian creditor against an enrolled tribal member debtor, both of whom resided on the reservation. State assumption of such jurisdiction interfered with tribal sovereignty and the tribe's right of self-government. Therefore, the state court's jurisdiction over the commercial transaction was preempted by tribal jurisdiction. Geiger v. Pierce, 233 M 18, 758 P2d 279, 45 St. Rep. 1257 (1988), followed in Balyeat Law, PC v. Pettit, 1998 MT 252, 291 M 196, 967 P2d 398, 55 St. Rep. 1038 (1998) (the state has no jurisdiction over an action to collect a debt for medical bills arising out of transactions, either on or off the reservation, brought by a non-Indian creditor against an enrolled tribal member residing on a reservation whose spouse incurred the debt but who engaged in no significant off-reservation contacts so as to subject herself to state jurisdiction).

Civil Controversy Between Indian and Non-Indian — No Jurisdiction: In a civil dispute between a non-Indian and an enrolled member of the Fort Peck Sioux and Assiniboine Tribes, arising within the boundaries of the reservation, the District Court's exercise of jurisdiction interferes with tribal sovereignty and the right to self-government of the tribes. Subject matter jurisdiction over civil litigation between Indians and non-Indians arising out of conduct on an Indian reservation is governed by the three-part test of State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973). Under that test, before a District Court can assume jurisdiction in any matter submitted to it, it must determine subject matter jurisdiction by considering: (1) whether the applicable federal treaties and statutes have preempted state jurisdiction; (2) whether the exercise of state jurisdiction would interfere with tribal self-government; and (3) whether the tribal court is currently exercising jurisdiction or has exercised jurisdiction in such a manner as to preempt state jurisdiction. The first and second elements are disjunctive; if either is present, as in the present case, the state lacks subject matter jurisdiction. Milbank Mut. Ins. Co. v. Eagleman, 218 M 58, 705 P2d 1117, 42 St. Rep. 1393 (1985). In In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, the Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear in its entirety and Milbank Mut. Ins. Co. v. Eagleman to the extent it relied on the Iron Bear test. See also Emerson v. Boyd, 247 M 241, 805 P2d 587, 48 St. Rep. 180 (1991), distinguished in Lambert v. Ryozik, 268 M 219, 886 P2d 378, 51 St. Rep. 1250 (1994).

Probate Court's Jurisdiction Over Title to Real Property: Weeks after executing a will identical to her husband's, leaving their property to each other or to the husband's heirs, the decedent executed a new will naming a personal representative of her estate and giving him full power of attorney. Shortly before decedent's death, her personal representative transferred part of decedent's real property to her heirs. Husband's conservator sought to set aside the conveyances and remove decedent's personal representative. The District Court denied conservator's motion for summary judgment and determined that while sitting in probate, it lacked the requisite jurisdiction to determine title to real property. The Supreme Court affirmed. In Montana, title to real property, whether determined incidentally or intentionally, must be resolved in proper proceedings instituted for that purpose. In re Estate of Thomas, 216 M 87, 699 P2d 1046, 42 St. Rep. 662 (1985).

Title to and Public Use of Dearborn River — Subject Matter Jurisdiction Found: Landowner along the Dearborn River claimed the District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over action for determination of the public's right to use the river, basing his claim on the presumption that he held title to the riverbed and that the State had no power to strip him of that title under the guise of determining navigability of the waters over the riverbed. The claim lacked merit because the State holds title to the riverbed and the water flowing over it, so that there was no question of the District Court's subject matter jurisdiction. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Probate Court's Jurisdiction Over Wrongful Death Action in Another District: Estate was being probated in one District Court, and personal representative's wrongful death action was being considered in another district. The probate court exceeded its jurisdiction when it assumed jurisdiction over the settlement of the wrongful death action, approved it, and ordered dismissal of the action. The Supreme Court stated that whether the proceeds of the settlement or award in the wrongful death action belonged to the estate or to the heirs was pertinent to the issue of the probate court's jurisdiction over the wrongful death action and that the probate court had jurisdiction only if the proceeds belonged to the estate. The Supreme Court did not appear to definitively decide the underlying issue, though it leaned toward the traditional rule that the proceeds belong to the heirs, are personal to them, and constitute no part of the estate. The court stated that it was for the Legislature to decide whether a District Court acting as a probate court should have some jurisdiction over a wrongful death claim filed in another District Court. In re Pegg's Estate, 209 M 71, 680 P2d 316, 41 St. Rep. 558 (1984).

Jurisdiction of State Court Over Nonresident Federally Chartered Bank — Sufficiency of Evidence — Denial of Due Process and Equal Protection: Officers of the plaintiff corporation traveled to Reno, Nevada, to deposit money in the defendant branch bank in anticipation of business in Nevada and later brought an action in a Montana District Court against the defendant for unlawful dishonor of a check and associated charges. The District Court did not err in dismissing the action for lack of jurisdiction. Under the provisions of 12 U.S.C. § 94, a federally chartered bank may be sued, among other places, where it is "located". The U.S. Supreme Court in Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Bougas, 434 US 35, 54 L Ed 2d 218, 98 S Ct 88 (1977), construed the term "located" to mean wherever branch offices are found. Because there is no branch bank in Montana and there has been no business operation conducted by the defendant in Montana that would constitute a waiver of the protection of federal law, the District Court had no jurisdiction. There was, moreover, sufficient evidence before the District Court for it to make the determination that there was no voluntary waiver, and the U.S. Supreme Court has held in Mercantile Nat'l Bank at Dallas v. Langdeau, 371 US 555, 9 L Ed 2d 523, 83 S Ct 520 (1963), that Congress "unquestionably" has the authority to determine those situations in which national banks can be sued. Hamelly Int'l, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank of Nev., 199 M 221, 648 P2d 282, 39 St. Rep. 1304 (1982).

Comity — Jurisdiction Declined: Wyoming residents were divorced under a Wyoming divorce decree which provided that disagreements between the parties arising out of any transaction relating to the decree were to be submitted to the Wyoming District Court for resolution. A disagreement arose in connection with the parties' interests in property located in Montana. Husband filed suit in Montana, and wife sought a ruling that the Montana court lacked jurisdiction and that the Wyoming court was the proper forum. The Montana District Court properly decided that it should decline to exercise jurisdiction on the basis of the doctrine of comity, though it did have jurisdiction. Application of the comity doctrine did not contravene the public policy of Montana or the open court policy mandated by the Montana Constitution. Kane v. Kane, 198 M 335, 646 P2d 505, 39 St. Rep. 1036 (1982).

District Court Jurisdiction Over Probate of and Claim and Delivery Action by Estate of Enrolled Tribal Indian: Where, following the death of an enrolled member of an Indian tribe, the decedent's wife petitioned the District Court to probate her deceased husband's estate, and estate property consisting of a road grader was later unlawfully sold by the deceased's wife to her brother, the District Court erred in holding that it did not have jurisdiction over the claim and delivery action instituted on behalf of the estate to recover the road grader or its value. The fact that there is no federal treaty or statute preempting the jurisdiction of the District Court and the fact that the tribal court has not and is not exercising jurisdiction over the case properly resulted in the District Court taking jurisdiction of the probate of the estate. Because the action for claim and delivery in the enforcement process to recover property within the jurisdiction of the probate court, the District Court should have exercised subject matter jurisdiction over the claim and delivery action as well. Estate of Standing Bear v. Belcourt, 193 M 174, 631 P2d 285, 38 St. Rep. 1064 (1981), overruled in part in In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121.

Crow Tribal Court — Exclusive Jurisdiction Over Divorces: The Crow Tribal Court exercises exclusive jurisdiction over divorce actions between tribal members living on the reservation by virtue of the duly enacted Crow Tribal Code. State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290, 37 St. Rep. 635 (1980). See also In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998).

Jurisdiction and Federal Bankruptcy Decrees: The court has jurisdiction over a plenary proceeding by a trustee in bankruptcy. While the court must clearly enforce the terms of a bankruptcy reorganization plan, it cannot refuse to entertain defenses or related counterclaims arising out of events occurring after confirmation of the bankruptcy plan. Double X Ranch v. Savage Bros., 167 M 231, 536 P2d 1176 (1975).

Probate Powers Over Heirship Proceedings: Heirship proceedings are committed to the District Courts with all the power, authority, and jurisdiction made inherent in such courts by the Montana Constitution and affirmed by this section. In re Baxter's Estate, 101 M 504, 54 P2d 869 (1936).

Probate Court Status Under 1889 Constitution: The District Court sitting in probate is not the probate court of territorial days and therefore not an inferior court but is a court of record exercising the general jurisdiction granted it by the Montana Constitution adopted in 1889, the limitation placed upon its jurisdiction by statute relative to the exercise of its probate powers not affecting its character as a court of general jurisdiction. Thelen v. Vogel, 86 M 33, 281 P 753 (1929), explained in In re Baxter's Estate, 101 M 504, 54 P2d 869 (1936).

FELONIES

Defendant Not Entitled to Indictment by Grand Jury: The defendant was convicted of sexual assault and abuse. On appeal, the defendant argued that he was entitled to an indictment by a grand jury. The Supreme Court noted that although Montana law provides four methods for commencing a prosecution, including an indictment by a grand jury, the defendant was not entitled to any one specific procedure. St. v. Montgomery, 2015 MT 151, 379 Mont. 353, 350 P.3d 77.

District Court Jurisdiction to Apply Persistent Felony Offender Designation to Felony DUI: Yorek pleaded guilty to and was sentenced on a felony DUI charge. The District Court determined that it had jurisdiction and imposed a persistent felony offender designation. Yorek sought postconviction relief on grounds that the District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to impose a persistent felony offender designation for felony DUI. The District Court denied the petition for postconviction relief, concluding that sentencing for felony DUI is not solely governed by 61-8-731 and 61-8-734, that nothing in the persistent felony offender statute excludes felony DUI offenders from its application, and that Yorek waived any jurisdiction claim by pleading guilty. The Supreme Court affirmed. Nothing in 46-18-502 distinguishes between or among the types of felonies to which it applies, or excludes DUI offenders. Rather, if the underlying charge meets the definition of a felony and if the state has provided proper notice of its intent to seek persistent felony offender status under 46-13-108, a District Court has the statutory authority to designate and sentence an offender as a persistent felony offender. Yorek's crime met the definition of a felony, and Yorek fell squarely within the persistent felony offender statute. The state met the notice provisions, and the District Court possessed subject matter jurisdiction to designate Yorek as a persistent felony offender. Because the jurisdiction question was dispositive, the Supreme Court did not reach the question of whether Yorek's guilty plea was a procedural bar against bringing the claim. St. v. Yorek, 2002 MT 74, 309 M 238, 45 P3d 872 (2002), followed in St. v. Pettijohn, 2002 MT 75, 309 M 244, 45 P3d 870 (2002), St. v. Damon, 2005 MT 218, 328 M 276, 119 P3d 1194 (2005), and St. v. Burns, 2011 MT 167, 361 Mont. 191, 256 P.3d 944.

Permissive Joinder — Not Grant of Jurisdiction: Relator was charged with misdemeanor assault and burglary (a felony). Relator contends that the District Court had no jurisdiction to try him for a misdemeanor. Section 46-11-404 allows an information to charge two or more offenses connected in their commission. This section is a permissive joinder statute for offenses within the jurisdiction of a given court, not a grant of jurisdiction. Jurisdiction for the misdemeanor assault lies with the Justice's Court. State ex rel. Rasmussen v. District Court, 189 M 183, 615 P2d 231, 37 St. Rep. 1498 (1980). (In 1981 this section was amended to give the District Court jurisdiction in such instances.)

ORIGINAL MISDEMEANOR JURISDICTION

Appeal of Guilty Plea in Justice's or City Court: From the standpoint of reason, justice, and public policy, an appeal of a guilty plea in Justice's Court or City Court may be tried anew in District Court provided it is properly perfected. However, this holding does not give the District Court original jurisdiction of a DUI case in violation of 3-5-302. St. v. Waymire, 226 M 406, 736 P2d 106, 44 St. Rep. 759 (1987).

Criminal Contempt and Contempt of Court Distinguished — District Court Without Jurisdiction to Try Criminal Contempt: Criminal contempt, a misdemeanor crime defined in 45-7-309, is an offense against society prosecuted by the state, whereas contempt of court is a judicial power arising out of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., and Title 3 that allows a court to enforce its own judgments and maintain decorum in its proceedings. Thus, while only the District Court could have found the defendant in contempt of court for failure to pay a fine from a criminal proceeding of that court, it lacked jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor criminal contempt action for failure to pay the fine because criminal contempt, like most other misdemeanors, must be brought in Justice's Court. St. v. Abrams, 209 M 508, 680 P2d 585, 41 St. Rep. 871 (1984).

Justice's Court as Having Jurisdiction Despite Associated Felony Violation: A District Court did not have jurisdiction (prior to the 1981 amendment of this section) to try a misdemeanor offense of endangering the welfare of children, proscribed in 45-5-622, even though this offense was committed together with a felony offense. Section 46-11-404, which states that an information may charge two or more different offenses connected together in their commission, is not a grant of jurisdiction but is simply a permissive joinder statute for offenses within the jurisdiction of a given court. Under 3-5-302 and 3-10-303, providing that the District Court has original jurisdiction in all felony criminal cases and "cases of misdemeanor not otherwise provided for", the Justice's Court has jurisdiction over the misdemeanor offense of endangering the welfare of children. St. v. Campbell, 191 M 75, 622 P2d 200, 38 St. Rep. 19 (1981).

District Court Jurisdiction Over DWI Charge: Jurisdiction of the District Court over criminal matters depends on the maximum sentence that can be imposed for committing the crime (except for misdemeanors under subsection (2), inserted in 1981). When the maximum sentence increases to give the District Court jurisdiction because of repeated DWI offenses, proof of prior offenses does not become an element that must be proved at trial and can be proved at any time until sentencing. Thus, failure to introduce evidence of prior convictions at trial does not deprive the District Court of jurisdiction. St. v. Campbell, 189 M 107, 615 P2d 190, 37 St. Rep. 1337 (1980).

Aggregation of Jurisdictional Amounts: Where there are several causes of action, each for less than the jurisdictional minimum for the court, they may be prosecuted in the District Court where their aggregate exceeds the jurisdictional minimum. Stokke v. Graham, 129 M 96, 281 P2d 1025 (1955). See, however, the concurring opinions.

CONCURRENT MISDEMEANOR JURISDICTION

Concurrent Justice's Court and District Court Jurisdiction Over Misdemeanor Family Assault No Right to Trial De Novo From Court of Record: Brockway was charged with two misdemeanor and two felony counts of family member assault. Brockway moved to sever the misdemeanor counts and have them tried first in Justice's Court so that he would have the opportunity to appeal to District Court. The District Court concluded that it lacked jurisdiction to try the misdemeanor charges, so the misdemeanor charges were severed and remanded for trial in Justice's Court. The state appealed. The Supreme Court held that the District Court's conclusion that it did not have jurisdiction to try the misdemeanors was erroneous. Under 3-10-303, District Courts have concurrent jurisdiction with Justices' Courts over misdemeanor charges of partner or family member assault. Additionally, under 46-17-311, there is no right to a trial de novo from District Court or from a Justice's Court that is a court of record, so Brockway was entitled to one jury trial in a court of record—in this case, the District Court—and if convicted, Brockway could then appeal to the Supreme Court. The case was remanded for trial in District Court on all charges. St. v. Brockway, 2005 MT 179, 328 M 5, 116 P3d 788 (2005).

Trespass Charge Properly in Justice's Court — Motion to Dismiss and Writ for Review Denied: Shiplet was charged in Justice's Court with criminal misdemeanor trespass. He moved to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, claiming that subsequent to the filing of the charge, he filed a civil action in District Court seeking to enjoin the people claiming trespass from interfering with his purported ditch easement. Shiplet argued that the District Court, as opposed to the Justice's Court, was a better forum to determine whether he was legally exercising his ditch rights because it had jurisdiction over his civil suit and concurrent jurisdiction over the trespass charge. Shiplet's motion was denied, and his District Court petition for writ of review was denied. The Supreme Court stated that a writ of review can be granted only if the petitioner establishes both that: (1) the Justice's Court exceeded its jurisdiction; and (2) there is no appeal or there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy. The Supreme Court held that Shiplet could not meet the two-pronged test because a Justice's Court clearly has jurisdiction over a misdemeanor trespass charge and that he had the right to appeal a Justice's Court decision. The Supreme Court also stated that the District Court did not have concurrent jurisdiction over the criminal charge under the requirements for concurrent jurisdiction delineated in this section. Shiplet v. Egeland, 2001 MT 21, 304 M 141, 18 P3d 1001 (2001).

Criminal Contempt and Contempt of Court Distinguished — District Court Without Jurisdiction to Try Criminal Contempt: Criminal contempt, a misdemeanor crime defined in 45-7-309, is an offense against society prosecuted by the state, whereas contempt of court is a judicial power arising out of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., and Title 3 that allows a court to enforce its own judgments and maintain decorum in its proceedings. Thus, while only the District Court could have found the defendant in contempt of court for failure to pay a fine from a criminal proceeding of that court, it lacked jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor criminal contempt action for failure to pay the fine because criminal contempt, like most other misdemeanors, must be brought in Justice's Court. St. v. Abrams, 209 M 508, 680 P2d 585, 41 St. Rep. 871 (1984).

EQUITY

Remand of Issue of Legality of Retroactive Designation of Funds as Business Loan: In an action concerning the sale of business property owned by tenants in common, the trial court, acting in equity, awarded each owner a portion of the sale proceeds in proportion to his initial capital investment. The issue of division of the sale proceeds was remanded to the court to make specific findings concerning the designation of certain advancements to the business as loans. Felska v. Goulding, 238 M 224, 776 P2d 530, 46 St. Rep. 1222 (1989).

Holdover Tenants Not Entitled to Restitution: Holdover tenants on agricultural land sought restitution for planting and harvesting costs under a theory of unjust enrichment when their lessors foreclosed on the property. The tenants were not holding over in good faith under color of title and had no right to remain on the property during the time for which they sought restitution. Because they did not come to court with clean hands, the tenants clearly were not entitled to restitution. Ruegsegger v. Welborn, 237 M 317, 773 P2d 305, 46 St. Rep. 833 (1989).

Equitable Power to Order Construction of Cattle Guard: Landowners who desired to use their property for cattle grazing were enjoined from maintaining a fence that unreasonably interfered with their neighbors' ingress and egress to the neighbors' property pursuant to a general easement right granted to the neighbors. The portion of the injunction order that allows the landowners to install a cattle guard at their own expense does not pose an additional burden upon the landowners not contemplated in the original easement. The court sitting in equity is empowered to determine the questions involved in the case and to do complete justice. Strahan v. Bush, 237 M 265, 773 P2d 718, 46 St. Rep. 789 (1989).

All Parties in Equity Court Entitled to Have Their Legal Claims and Counterclaims Tried by Jury: Although, in the past, the court has purported to permit a court of equity to rule on all questions in a case, the court has never held that a court sitting in equity may try those issues of fact raised by plaintiff in a legal cause of action. The modern merger of law and equity courts and the liberal joinder provisions of the Rules of Civil Procedure force reevaluation of the traditional justification for permitting an equity court to decide legal issues. Upon timely demand, all parties are entitled to have their legal claims and counterclaims tried by jury. Gray v. Billings, 213 M 6, 689 P2d 268, 41 St. Rep. 1910 (1984). (To the extent that Butler Bros. Dev. Co. v. Butler, 111 M 329, 108 P2d 1041 (1941), and its progeny have been interpreted to deny plaintiff a right to jury trial of his legal claims, the cases are overruled.)

WRITS AND SPECIAL ACTIONS

Appeal From District Court's Denial of Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus Prohibited: After the District Court denied a criminal defendant's petition for a writ of habeas corpus, the defendant appealed to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court held it will no longer consider as an original petition a party's appeal from a District Court's denial of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. A petitioner must file an original petition for a writ of habeas corpus in the Supreme Court in order for the court to consider it. Thomas v. Doe, 2011 MT 283, 362 Mont. 454, 266 P.3d 1255.

District Court Without Authority to Issue Writ of Supervisory Control to City Court: Maloney was convicted in City Court of speeding and driving under the influence of alcohol. Maloney appealed his conviction de novo for a trial in District Court and, at the same time, filed a petition for a writ of review, mandamus, and supervisory control, asking the District Court to direct the City Court to dismiss the charges. The District Court denied the petition. The Supreme Court held that the District Court had no authority to issue a writ of supervisory control to a City Court. Maloney v. Gordon, 254 M 314, 837 P2d 1341, 49 St. Rep. 834 (1992).

Mandamus Against Those Determining Qualifications of Public Contract Bidders: The Department of Administration and Board of Examiners, in determining whether bidders for the construction of a public building are qualified and will perform the contract in conformity with the specifications and terms of the solicitation for bids, as required by 18-2-103, are acting in a discretionary manner, and mandamus may not be used to control their discretion. Martel Constr., Inc. v. Bd. of Examiners, 205 M 332, 668 P2d 222, 40 St. Rep. 1340 (1983).

Certiorari:

Where one adjudged guilty of contempt in a proceeding before a Justice of the Peace sought relief by Writ of Certiorari in the District Court where a peremptory writ was denied, the proper means of securing relief from the Supreme Court was by appeal and not by certiorari. State ex rel. Mercer v. District Court, 115 M 385, 145 P2d 527 (1943).

While the statutes relating to the Writ of Certiorari make no provision as to the limitation of time within which proceeding must be brought, the limitation of 5 years provided by section 93-2613, R.C.M. 1947 (now 27-2-231), in an "action" not otherwise provided for, is controlling under section 93-2720, R.C.M. 1947 (now 70-19-101), including special proceedings of a civil nature. Shaffroth v. Lamere, 104 M 175, 65 P2d 610 (1937), overruled in Jones v. District Court, 2001 MT 276, 307 M 305, 37 P3d 682 (2001), to the extent that Shaffroth holds that the general 5-year statute of limitations in 27-2-231 applies to all writs of review authorized in 27-25-102 because pursuant to former Rule 5, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), a petition for a writ of certiorari to review contempt proceedings must be filed with the Clerk of the District Court within 30 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding, unless the state is a party, in which case the petition must be filed within 60 days of the date on which the District Court enters the contempt finding.

Case Notes

Trial De Novo Rather Than Hearing Appropriate Absent Evidence of Prosecutor Conduct Warranting Mistrial: On an appeal from City Court on a DUI conviction, Whittinghill contended that the District Court should have held an evidentiary hearing on whether the prosecutor goaded Whittinghill into moving for a mistrial. However, Whittinghill did not present any cogent argument or statement of available evidence indicating that the situation was a product of prosecutor misconduct and only speculated about why the prosecution's only witness gave offending testimony. Absent a showing that the prosecutor did anything to goad the defense into moving for a mistrial, the District Court properly denied an evidentiary hearing and granted a trial de novo. Helena v. Whittinghill, 2009 MT 343, 353 M 131, 219 P3d 1244 (2009).

Pending Appeal Not Divesting District Court of Jurisdiction Over Subsequent Petitions Filed Under Same Cause Number: The District Court Uniform Caseload Filing Standards are intended solely for recordkeeping purposes within the office of the Clerk of Court, and nothing in the standards suggests that a respondent's pending appeal of a single commitment order divests a District Court of subject matter jurisdiction over any subsequent petitions filed under the same cause number. An appeal to the Supreme Court divests the District Court of jurisdiction over only the order or judgment from which the appeal is taken. In re G.M., 2007 MT 100, 337 M 116, 157 P3d 687 (2007). See also McCormick v. McCormick, 168 M 136, 541 P2d 765 (1975).

Standard of Appellate Review of District Court: Acting within its appellate capacity, a District Court is not in a position to make findings of fact or discretionary trial court rulings, but rather is confined to review of the record and questions of law. The court reviews any factual findings under the clearly erroneous standard, any discretionary rulings for abuse of discretion, and both legal conclusions and mixed questions of law and fact under the de novo standard. A District Court's review of an appeal from a lower court of record is no broader than the Supreme Court's review of a lower court judgment. In the case at bar, the judgment rendered by a Justice's Court was an appealable judgment as contemplated by 3-10-115, and the District Court thus had jurisdiction over the appeal. Likewise, the District Court's judgment constituted a final determination of the issues presented on appeal, and the Supreme Court therefore had jurisdiction pursuant to former Rule 1, M.R.App.P. (now superseded). Stanley v. Lemire, 2006 MT 304, 334 M 489, 148 P3d 643 (2006).

Out-of-Time Appeal in Criminal Matters — Exclusive Jurisdiction With Supreme Court: Under 46-20-101, the only method for review in criminal cases is by notice of appeal. Time limits for filing an appeal are mandatory and jurisdictional. If a defendant takes no action to perfect an appeal within 90 days of judgment, the District Court loses its jurisdiction and the appeal is out-of-time. However, an out-of-time appeal is a remedy that may be available to a criminal defendant who, through no fault of the defendant, misses a deadline for filing an appeal. Although former Rule 21(b), M.R.App.P. (now superseded), precludes an out-of-time appeal in a civil case, the Supreme Court is not precluded from addressing a motion for an out-of-time appeal in a criminal case. Further, a District Court lacks jurisdiction to grant an out-of-time appeal. The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction to grant a motion for an out-of-time appeal, and the motion is considered an original proceeding subject to the provisions of former Rule 17, M.R.App.P. (now superseded). Upon a showing that the failure to timely notice a criminal appeal was excusable under the circumstances, the Supreme Court may conclude that an out-of-time appeal is the appropriate remedy pursuant to former Rule 21(b), M.R.App.P. (now superseded). In that event, the matter will be remanded to the District Court with instructions to vacate and reenter judgment to afford the defendant a second opportunity to act within the statutory timeframes for filing notice of appeal. St. v. Tweed, 2002 MT 286, 312 M 482, 59 P3d 1105 (2002).

Authority of Municipal Court to Commit Mentally Incapacitated Defendant: A plain reading of 3-6-104 provides that Municipal Courts have all powers and duties of District Courts over matters within their jurisdiction, including the power and duty to commit mentally incapacitated criminal defendants to the Department of Public Health and Human Services, pursuant to the procedures and requirements of Title 46, if the Municipal Court determines that the defendant suffers from a mental disease or defect and lacks the fitness to proceed to trial. If there is any question regarding a Municipal Court's commitment of a criminal defendant, the issue may be appealed to the District Court pursuant to this section. Great Falls v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2002 MT 108, 309 M 467, 47 P3d 836 (2002).

No Authority to Appeal Justice's Court Order Denying Motion to Withdraw Guilty Plea: The Feights got into a fight with a highway patrol officer at a high school basketball game and were charged with misdemeanor assault. They were informed of their rights in Justice's Court, waived their right to counsel, and pleaded guilty. More than a month later, they moved through counsel to withdraw their guilty pleas, claiming good cause under 46-16-105. The Justice's Court denied the motion, holding that the Feights had been given due process and had voluntarily, knowingly, and willingly entered guilty pleas. The Feights appealed the denial of their motion to withdraw their guilty pleas to District Court. The state moved to dismiss the appeal, contending that the District Court lacked jurisdiction to review denial of the motion to withdraw a plea. The District Court dismissed the appeal but remanded to Justice's Court with a recommendation that the Feights be allowed to withdraw their pleas. Instead, the Justice's Court reinstated judgment, and the Feights appealed to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court affirmed. The statutes that provide for and determine the jurisdiction of a District Court to entertain an appeal from a Justice's Court include 46-12-204, 46-17-203, 46-17-311, and this section. However, none of these statutes provide authority for appeal to the District Court from the denial of a motion to withdraw a guilty plea. Further, the specific language of these sections prevails over the general language in 46-20-104 defining the scope of appeal by a criminal defendant. The Legislature has not created a statutory right of appeal from a Justice's Court denial of a motion to withdraw a guilty plea, and the Supreme Court refrained from creating one. St. v. Feight, 2001 MT 205, 306 M 312, 33 P3d 623 (2001), distinguishing St. v. Rogers, 267 M 190, 883 P2d 115 (1994), and followed in St. v. Fox, 2001 MT 209, 306 M 353, 34 P3d 484 (2001).

City Not Liable for City Judge's Civil Rights Violations — City Judge Acts Under State Authority: Claims of the indigent defendants, who were not effectively informed by a City Judge of their right to appointed counsel, were properly dismissed. Under Montana law, a City Judge's acts and decision in advising defendants of the right were performed under the state's authority rather than the city's authority, thereby precluding imposition of civil rights liability on the city. Further, the indigent defendants did not have standing to seek declaratory and injunctive relief. There are other remedies for indigent defendants in future situations—they can file a complaint with the state body charged with overseeing judicial conduct, they can appeal their convictions to a higher court, and they can sue a judge individually because a judge does not enjoy judicial immunity for unconstitutional behavior when the facts are sufficient to grant declaratory or injunctive relief. Eggar v. Livingston, 40 F3d 312 (9th Cir. 1994).

Retrial of Unconvicted Offense Prohibited — Dismissal of Conviction for Uncharged Offense Affirmed: Barker was charged with DUI but was convicted of reckless driving by the Ravalli County Justice of the Peace. Barker appealed to the District Court and filed a motion to dismiss, which the District Court granted. On appeal by the state, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the reckless driving charge and the DUI charge were inapposite charges and that reckless driving was not a lesser included offense of DUI. The Supreme Court also held that while a defendant's statutory remedy for appealing a Justice's Court decision is a trial de novo in the District Court, it would be a violation of the prohibition against double jeopardy to try Barker again on the DUI charge because Barker was originally charged with that offense and jeopardy had attached when the first witness was sworn. When Barker appealed from the erroneous conviction of an uncharged offense, he did not waive his constitutional protection against double jeopardy for charges of which he was acquitted. St. v. Barker, 260 M 85, 858 P2d 360, 50 St. Rep. 970 (1993).

Order Absent Jurisdiction Void: An order entered in the absence of jurisdiction is void. In re the Marriage of Schultz v. Schultz, 183 M 20, 597 P2d 1174, 36 St. Rep. 1993 (1979), following State ex rel. Thompson v. District Court, 75 M 147, 242 P 959 (1926).

Incomplete Appeal: Where an appeal from a Justice's Court was never perfected, that court had exclusive jurisdiction of the cause and nothing done by the District Court therein could affect the judgment rendered by the Justice, and dismissal of the attempted appeal was correct. Greenough v. Rannel, 71 M 578, 230 P 1094 (1924).

Water Rights Adjudication: In an action to adjudicate water rights on a main river and its tributaries, the District Court of a county in which plaintiffs' lands lay and through which the main river flowed had jurisdiction to adjudicate the rights to waters of a tributary flowing entirely within another county, under the Montana Constitution and this section. Whitcomb v. Murphy, 94 M 562, 23 P2d 980 (1933), distinguished in State ex rel. McKnight v. District Court, 111 M 520, 111 P 292 (1941).

Sale of Automobile Franchise — Error in Failure to Resolve Mootness as Threshold Issue Before Underlying Dispute Addressed: Ford Motor Company (Ford) notified franchisee Shamrock Motors (Shamrock) that it intended to terminate Shamrock's automobile dealer franchise because Shamrock had sold 80% of its stock without Ford's knowledge or consent, which violated their franchise agreement. The Motor Vehicle Division of the Department of Justice issued a ruling that Ford had good cause, so Shamrock filed for judicial review in the District Court. Ford then removed to federal court, where the ruling was reversed, so Ford appealed to the Ninth Circuit Court. Shamrock then sold the dealership, and the decision was vacated because of lack of jurisdiction. The case was remanded to state court, where Ford moved to dismiss for mootness. The District Court denied the motion without discussion and ruled for Shamrock, concluding that the franchise could not be terminated as a result of the sale of 80% of the franchise stock. Reversing on appeal, the Supreme Court cited Adkins v. Livingston, 121 M 528, 194 P2d 238 (1948), in holding that mootness is a threshold issue that must be dealt with before the underlying dispute may be addressed. A matter is moot when, because of an event or happening, the issue has ceased to exist and no longer presents an actual controversy. A question is moot when a court cannot grant effective relief. If the parties cannot be restored to their original position, an appeal becomes moot. When Shamrock chose to sell the franchise during the appellate process, the question of whether Ford had good cause to terminate the franchise in the first instance became academic and thus moot. The District Court erred when it did not resolve the issue of mootness before addressing the merits of the claim, not recognizing that once Shamrock sold the dealership and was no longer the franchisee, there was no effective relief that the court could fashion under Title 61, ch. 4, part 2, so the appeal from the Motor Vehicle Division's ruling should have been dismissed as moot. Shamrock Motors, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 1999 MT 21, 293 M 188, 974 P2d 1154, 56 St. Rep. 99 (1999), followed in Shamrock Motors, Inc. v. Chrysler Corp., 1999 MT 39, 293 M 317, 974 P2d 1154, 56 St. Rep. 164 (1999).

Abuse of Discretion for Court to Correct Failure to Sentence by Nunc Pro Tunc Order: The District Court failed to sentence Winterrowd, in either open court or by written judgment, on his misdemeanor theft conviction. Four months later, the court issued an order nunc pro tunc, sentencing Winterrowd to 6 months' imprisonment. It is within a District Court's power to enter an order nunc pro tunc modifying or amending a judgment in order to remedy certain types of clerical errors or to make the record reflect what was actually decided. However, in this case, not only was the sentence omitted from the written sentencing order, but the sentence was not even discussed at the sentencing hearing. The Supreme Court reversed and vacated the nunc pro tunc order and sentence. St. v. Winterrowd, 1998 MT 74, 288 M 208, 957 P2d 522, 55 St. Rep. 307 (1998).

District Court Without Authority to Issue Writ of Supervisory Control to City Court: Maloney was convicted in City Court of speeding and driving under the influence of alcohol. Maloney appealed his conviction de novo for a trial in District Court and, at the same time, filed a petition for a writ of review, mandamus, and supervisory control, asking the District Court to direct the City Court to dismiss the charges. The District Court denied the petition. The Supreme Court held that the District Court had no authority to issue a writ of supervisory control to a City Court. Maloney v. Gordon, 254 M 314, 837 P2d 1341, 49 St. Rep. 834 (1992).

Court Not to Change Original Intent of Order: A District Court may correct clerical errors to make the record speak the truth as to what was actually decided, but it may not change what was originally intended. Reinstatement of a dismissed information was impermissible. St. v. Onstad, 234 M 487, 764 P2d 473, 45 St. Rep. 2071 (1988), followed in St. v. District Court, 265 M 445, 877 P2d 1008, 51 St. Rep. 599 (1994).

Award of Attorney Fees by Judge Who Did Not Try Case — No Abuse of Discretion: Parties had 2 months following judgment and prior to a change in jurisdiction to bring the matter of attorney fees before the judge who presided over a lien foreclosure action. Neither side did, and jurisdiction of the action was transferred from the 13th to the 16th Judicial District. Defendant later claimed the new judge abused his discretion by awarding fees in a case he did not try because he could not know all of the circumstances surrounding the foreclosure action. The Supreme Court held that a judge's jurisdiction over a case is a matter of law and that while it is preferable that the presiding trial judge consider the matter of attorney fees, it is not mandatory. Finding no abuse of discretion, judgment was affirmed. Donnes v. Orlando, 221 M 356, 720 P2d 233, 43 St. Rep. 890 (1986).

Error in Sentencing Order — Correction "Nunc Pro Tunc" Two Years Later Upheld: The District Court, as a condition of sentence, ordered defendant to pay certain medical expenses and called the required payment "restitution" in the order. The payment was not restitution, but the court did have statutory authority to require payment. The court's effort to correct nunc pro tunc the original order 2 years after it was entered was proper. The error was clerical in nature. Every court has the inherent right to correct clerical errors. Dahlman v. District Court, 215 M 470, 698 P2d 423, 42 St. Rep. 550 (1985), followed in St. v. Owens, 230 M 135, 748 P2d 473, 45 St. Rep. 89 (1988). See also St. v. Christianson, 1999 MT 156, 295 M 100, 983 P2d 909, 56 St. Rep. 613 (1999).

No Discretion to Issue Probationary Driver's License: A District Court Judge clearly does not have the power to issue a probationary license in a court hearing to determine habitual traffic offender status under 61-11-210. State ex rel. Majerus v. Carter, 214 M 272, 693 P2d 501, 41 St. Rep. 2468 (1984).

Judge's Reappointment to Finish Case Started Before Retirement: That trial Judge retired prior to his issuance of orders in the case at issue did not make the orders void. Under the recent decision in State ex rel. Wilcox & Bradley v. District Court, 41 St. Rep. 397 (1984), the trial Judge had authority to perform all functions of an active District Judge, including the issuance of final orders and judgments. In re Pegg's Estate, 209 M 71, 680 P2d 316, 41 St. Rep. 558 (1984). (Annotator's Note: The District Court's records indicate that the Judge retired after beginning work on the case and was reappointed to finish the case.)

Retired Judges Eligible for Assignment for Temporary Service: The term "other judges" in subsection (3) of Art. VII, sec. 6, Mont. Const., includes retired judges. That subsection empowers the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, upon request of a District Judge, to assign retired judges for temporary service to any judicial district or county in Montana. Further, that provision is a constitutional grant of power exclusive of any statutory grant by the Legislature. State ex rel. Wilcox v. District Court, 208 M 351, 678 P2d 209, 41 St. Rep. 397 (1984).

Habeas Corpus — No Jurisdiction to Declare Children Dependent and Neglected: In a consolidated proceeding based on a petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus by a natural parent and a petition by a nonparent for guardianship, the court was without jurisdiction to find the children involved dependent and neglected and to enter an order granting custody to the nonparent petitioners. Unless 41-3-401 (renumbered 41-3-422) is followed, the court is without jurisdiction to deprive the parent of custody. In re the Marriage of Schultz v. Schultz, 183 M 20, 597 P2d 1174, 36 St. Rep. 1993 (1979), following Guardianship of Aschenbrenner 182 M 540, 597 P2d 1156 (1979), and Guardianship of Evans, 179 M 438, 587 P2d 372 (1978). However, see also In re L.E.B., 259 M 492, 856 P2d 1382, 50 St. Rep. 895 (1993), in which Aschenbrenner was distinguished in a case brought under adoption proceedings rather than guardianship proceedings.

Absence of Judge From County: When a District Judge was invited to another district to hear and determine an action to quiet title but at chambers in his own county sustained a motion for judgment on the pleadings, the judgment so rendered was made without jurisdiction. Eustance v. Francis, 52 M 295, 157 P 573 (1916).

Temporary Judge: The power of a Judge at chambers to determine any matter left pending in the district into which he has been called ceases when he has returned to his own district. State ex rel. Mannix v. District Court, 51 M 310, 152 P 753 (1915).

Contempt of Court: Where there has been disobedience of an order made at a term of court, the Judge at chambers in vacation has power to punish the same as a contempt. State ex rel. N. Pac. Ry. v. Loud, 24 M 428, 62 P 497 (1900).

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

Common-Law Recognition and Sovereignty of Little Shell Tribe — Suit Against Tribal Officials Barred: Plaintiffs were candidates in an election of the Little Shell Tribe of Indians and sued in Montana District Court for tort damages and injunctive relief against the incumbent candidates, claiming that plaintiffs had won the election. The District Court dismissed on grounds of lack of jurisdiction, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court noted that the tribe had been pursuing federal tribal recognition since the 1930s, but as yet, the tribe is not recognized by the federal government. Nevertheless, Montoya v. U.S., 180 US 261 (1901), establishes criteria for common-law recognition of a tribe. The court examined the Montoya criteria and held that the Little Shell Tribe satisfied each element of the test for common-law recognition, so the tribe is entitled to sovereignty. Tribal members are of the same or similar race, are united in a community, exist under one leadership or government, and inhabit a particular though sometimes ill-defined territory. Further, under Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 US 49 (1978), Indian tribes and their officials enjoy sovereign immunity from suit unless expressly limited by Congress. Thus, because the tribal officials in this case were acting in their official capacities, suit against them in state court was barred under the doctrine of sovereign immunity. Dismissal of the action by the District Court for lack of jurisdiction was affirmed. Koke v. Little Shell Tribe of Chippewa Indians of Mont., Inc., 2003 MT 121, 315 M 510, 68 P3d 814 (2003).

Guidelines for Determining Whether Indian Tribe Has Waived Sovereign Immunity in Contract — Inapplicability of Statute of Frauds to Question of Subject Matter Jurisdiction: Plaintiff contended that he signed a 7-year contract with the Crow Tribe to provide consulting services and to act as a program manager for the planning and construction of a power plant on tribal property and that the tribe breached the contract and failed to pay him. The tribe moved to dismiss on grounds that the District Court lacked personal and subject matter jurisdiction because of the tribe's sovereign immunity. The District Court denied the motion but reserved the right to readdress the issue of subject matter jurisdiction. Following further discovery, neither party could produce a signed copy of the alleged contract. The District Court concluded that because the alleged contract was for employment for more than 1 year, the statute of frauds applied and noted that although plaintiff's performance would normally create an exception to the statute of frauds pursuant to the court's equitable powers, to exercise that power in this case would circumvent the tribe's sovereign immunity in contravention of federal law. The District Court further concluded that although there was an express agreement that was partially performed and that the agreement contained a waiver of tribal immunity from suit in state court, as indicated by affidavits submitted by plaintiff and the tribal presiding officer, because of the fact that a signed copy of the contract was not produced, there was insufficient evidence to overcome the presumption against waiver of tribal immunity, so the action was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The Montana statute of frauds in 28-2-903 limits the enforceability of certain contracts but does not affect a District Court's subject matter jurisdiction, so a District Court need not consider the statute of frauds when determining subject matter jurisdiction; furthermore, the court does not need to invoke its equitable powers to find jurisdiction. Rather, the question facing the District Court was whether the tribe clearly and unequivocally waived its sovereign immunity. The Supreme Court found that plaintiff's complaint alleged sufficient facts that, if true, would vest the District Court with subject matter jurisdiction. The tribe produced no evidence to refute the affidavits or to controvert the recollections of the affiants. Absent any factual issue to resolve, the Supreme Court concluded that plaintiff presented undisputed evidence proving the establishment of a contract that included an unequivocal waiver of sovereign immunity, so dismissal of the complaint by the District Court on jurisdictional grounds constituted reversible error. Bradley v. Crow Tribe of Indians, 2003 MT 82, 315 M 75, 67 P3d 306 (2003). On remand, the District Court again granted Bradley's motion for summary judgment after holding that the tribe's motion to alter or amend was denied because the court did not rule on the motion within 60 days. The Supreme Court held that because there is no provision in former Rule 56, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), for entry of summary judgment by default, denial of the tribe's motion was erroneous, and because questions of fact existed regarding contract ambiguity and damages, the case was again reversed and remanded for further consideration. Bradley v. Crow Tribe of Indians, 2005 MT 309, 329 M 448, 124 P3d 1143 (2005).

No State Jurisdiction of Indian Reservation Commercial Transactions — Preemption by Tribal Jurisdiction: A state District Court did not have primary subject matter jurisdiction over a civil debt action arising out of a commercial transaction on an Indian reservation and brought by a non-Indian creditor against an enrolled tribal member debtor, both of whom resided on the reservation. State assumption of such jurisdiction interfered with tribal sovereignty and the tribe's right of self-government. Therefore, the state court's jurisdiction over the commercial transaction was preempted by tribal jurisdiction. Geiger v. Pierce, 233 M 18, 758 P2d 279, 45 St. Rep. 1257 (1988), followed in Balyeat Law, PC v. Pettit, 1998 MT 252, 291 M 196, 967 P2d 398, 55 St. Rep. 1038 (1998) (the state has no jurisdiction over an action to collect a debt for medical bills arising out of transactions, either on or off the reservation, brought by a non-Indian creditor against an enrolled tribal member residing on a reservation whose spouse incurred the debt but who engaged in no significant off-reservation contacts so as to subject herself to state jurisdiction).

Jurisdiction to Issue Investigative Subpoenas: The plain language of 46-4-301 vests every District Court Judge with the power to issue investigative subpoenas with no jurisdictional limitation. There simply is no requirement, explicit or implicit, that the subpoena be issued by the sitting judge of the district where the crime allegedly occurred. The venue statutes have no application to the jurisdictions of any District Court to issue such subpoenas, which jurisdiction is coextensive with the state boundaries. St. v. Holmes, 212 M 526, 687 P2d 662, 41 St. Rep. 1535 (1984).

Actions by Judge Not Assigned:

Where judge of the second department assumed jurisdiction of a divorce suit, even though under the rules it was properly assignable to the first department, it was beyond the power of the judge of the first department to interfere in any way and proceedings wherein he set aside the divorce were void. Deich v. Deich, 136 M 566, 323 P2d 35 (1958).

Order Signed During Judge's Term of Office, but Not Filed Until After Expiration of Judge's Term, Considered Binding: One day before the expiration of her legal term of office, a District Court Judge signed an order affirming an administrative decision in a labor dispute, but the order was not filed until 3 days after the judge's term of office expired. The judge's successor struck the order and directed further proceedings. The union then petitioned the Supreme Court for supervisory control, contending that striking the original order was a mistake of law. The Supreme Court agreed, applying Plumb v. District Court, 279 M 363, 927 P2d 1011 (1996), and accepted supervisory control because of the absence of a plain, speedy, or adequate remedy at law. The court noted that states generally recognize that judgments undergo three phases of final development, including rendition, reduction to writing, and entry, but that states vary in their determination of the stage at which a judgment binds the parties before the court. The court determined that the case most directly on point to the facts in the present case was Cirro Wrecking Co. v. Roppolo, 605 NE 2d 544 (Ill. 1992). The filing of the District Court's order was merely a ministerial function performed by the Clerk of the District Court. The judgment was otherwise properly rendered during the pendency of the judge's term and was binding on the parties at that point, even though it was entered by the clerk after the judge's vacation of office. Further, for purposes of commencing time periods, judgments continue to take effect from the date on which they are filed with the clerk, so that a fixed date is established and known to the parties. 2001 Amendments — Composite Section: (Temporary version) Chapter 278 in (2) in last sentence after "within the meaning of" deleted "7-6-2351, 7-6-2352, and". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

(Version effective July 1, 2002) Chapter 585 in (1) substituted "Each court reporter who is an independent contractor under 3-5-601 is entitled to compensation as provided in the contract" for "Each reporter is entitled to receive a base annual salary of not less than $28,000 or more than $35,000 and no other compensation except as provided in 3-5-604, unless the judge decides to solicit bids for the work performed by the reporter, in which case the salary must be for the amount specified in the bid accepted by the judge. The salary must be set by the judge for whom the reporter works. The salary is payable in monthly installments out of the general funds of the counties composing the district for which the reporter is appointed and out of an appropriation made to the supreme court administrator as provided in subsection (2)"; in (2) substituted "The supreme court administrator shall pay the compensation due under subsection (1) as provided in 3-5-901 and 3-5-902" for "The supreme court administrator shall determine the total number of civil and criminal actions commenced in the preceding year in the district court or courts in the judicial district for which a reporter is appointed. The state shall pay its portion of the reporter's salary based on the proportion of the total number of criminal actions commenced in the district court or courts in the district and the amount appropriated for that purpose. Each county shall pay its portion of the remainder of the salary based on its proportion of the total number of civil and criminal actions commenced in the district courts in the district. The judge or judges of the district shall, on January 1 of each year or as soon thereafter as possible, apportion the amount of the salary to be paid by each county in the district on the basis prescribed in this subsection. The portion of the salary payable by a county is a district court expense within the meaning of 7-6-2351, 7-6-2352, and 7-6-2511"; in (3) in first sentence substituted "compensation provided for in subsection (1) and fees" for "salary and fees provided for in subsection (1)" and in second sentence substituted "expenses are payable as provided in subsection (2)" for "expenses must be apportioned and are payable in the same way as the salary"; and made minor changes in style.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 384 in (1), near middle of first sentence, increased minimum salary from $23,000 to $28,000 and increased maximum salary from $30,000 to $35,000 and at end inserted "unless the judge decides to solicit bids for the work performed by the reporter, in which case the salary must be for the amount specified in the bid accepted by the judge"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 10 near end of (1) and at beginning of (2) substituted "supreme court administrator" for "department of commerce"; at end of first sentence of (3) deleted "from the time he leaves his place of residence until he returns thereto"; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment (Temporary): In middle of first sentence of (1) increased base to $23,000 from $16,000 and increased cap to $25,000 from $23,000; and made minor change in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1989 Amendment (Effective July 1, 1991): In middle of first sentence of (1) increased base to $23,000 from $16,000 and increased cap to $30,000 from $23,000. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 680 in (1) near end after "appointed", inserted "and out of an appropriation made to the supreme court as provided in subsection (2)"; in (2), inserted first two sentences relating to number of actions and state payment, in third sentence, after "portion", inserted "of the remainder" and at end of third sentence, after "district", deleted "in the preceding year", in fourth sentence, near beginning after "judge", inserted "or judges" and near end after "his" inserted "or their", and in last sentence of (2) at beginning substituted "The portion of the salary payable by a county" for "The salary".

Chapter 1, Sp. L. 1985, amended Ch. 680, L. 1985, near end of (1) by substituting "department of commerce" for "supreme court", and near beginning of (2) by substituting "department of commerce" for "supreme court administrator".

Interim Study Committee Bill: Chapter 680, L. 1985, which amended this section, was introduced by request of Joint Interim Subcommittee No. 3 of the 48th Legislature. See Committee report entitled "Court Unification in Montana", Montana Legislative Council, December 1984.

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), substituted "a base" for "an" before "annual salary"; increased the salary range to between $16,000 and $23,000 from between $14,000 and $20,000; substituted "for whom" for "in the district in which" before "the reporter works"; substituted "The salary" for "It" before "is payable in monthly installments"; and inserted last sentence providing that the salary is a judicial expense under 7-6-2351, 7-6-2352, and 7-6-2511.

1981 Amendment: Increased the district court reporter's salary from between $12,500 and $18,000 to between $14,000 and $20,000; inserted "Each county shall pay its portion of the salary based on its" after "appointed" in (1); inserted "of the total" before "number of civil and criminal actions" in (1); substituted "courts" for "court" after "district" in (1); substituted "in the district" for "in and for each county" after "district courts" in (1); made minor changes in phraseology.

Severability: Section 17, Ch. 528, L. 1979, was a severability section.

Full-Time District Court Reporters Subject to Statutory Workweek Requirement — Recordkeeping Required — Designation of Court Reporter's "Workstation": A District Court reporter who is treated as a full-time salaried county employee is subject to the statutory 40-hour workweek requirement in 7-5-2108, and recordkeeping to document a court reporter's working hours, including overtime, annual leave, and sick leave, must be as determined by the District Court Judge who employs the court reporter. However, any method used to fulfill these requirements must comport with the District Court Judge's authority to control court assistants because allowing a Board of County Commissioners to enforce county personnel policies on court reporters would infringe on that authority. Any mandatory location of work for a court reporter that is set by anyone but the District Court Judge would interfere with the necessary flexibility of the judge. Thus, a court reporter's "workstation" is wherever that reporter is required to be to perform the duties for the judge for whom that court reporter works. (See 2001 amendment.) Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 2000 MT 258, 301 M 496, 10 P3d 805, 57 St. Rep. 1061 (2000).

Court Reporter Salary Dispute — Writ of Supervisory Control Appropriate: The Board of Lewis and Clark County Commissioners set the salary for court reporters, based on its interpretation of the 1997 amendment to this section. The salary did not include fringe benefits because the statute states that a court reporter is to receive the base salary "and no other compensation except as provided in 3-4-604", which allows a court reporter to collect only certain fees for providing transcripts. The District Court Judges ordered the Board to give the court reporters the maximum raise allowed and to continue their benefits at the prior level. The Board appealed the order directly to the Supreme Court. The judges contended that the appeal was improper because the Board filed no appropriate underlying civil action, whether a petition for a writ of mandamus, a petition for a writ of prohibition, or another action, and sought to have the appeal dismissed. The Board characterized the judges' order as a final appealable order rather than an administrative action. The Supreme Court found some merit to both arguments. Applying the rationale in Awareness Group v. School District, 243 M 469, 795 P2d 447 (1990), the court found that neither a writ of mandamus nor a writ of prohibition was appropriate and that they would not provide meaningful relief because it would be futile to seek to prohibit or to compel an act already accomplished. While granting the judges' motion to dismiss without prejudice to the underlying merits of the case, the Supreme Court held that if the Board decided to do so, it could file a petition for a writ of supervisory control with the Supreme Court, pursuant to former Rule 17, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), and could raise whatever legal questions that it determined were at issue. If the Supreme Court determined it necessary, it could then remand for an evidentiary hearing in a neutral District Court in the same manner as in Gallatin County v. District Court, 281 M 33, 930 P2d 680 (1997). (See 2001 amendment.) In re District Court Budget Order, 1998 MT 4, 287 M 137, 952 P2d 427, 55 St. Rep. 9 (1998).

Court Reporter Failing to File Trial Notes — Not a Denial of Trial Transcript: Petitioner was not denied due process on the grounds that he was denied a transcript of his criminal trial when the court reporter failed to file his notes with the Clerk of Court, as required by this section. The defendant attempted to get a free transcript as provided by 3-5-604 but failed to allege anything to warrant moving any court's discretion to order one; therefore, he was not denied a transcript merely because the court reporter kept his notes. Spurlock v. Crist, 188 M 449, 614 P2d 498, 37 St. Rep. 1146 (1980).

Waiver of Reporter: Defendant, an experienced lawyer who was warned by the court of the consequences, waived his right to question the court's discretion by actively participating in the trial after his request for a reporter had been denied. Niewoehner v. District Court, 142 M 1, 381 P2d 464 (1963).

Attendance Within Court's Discretion:

The court may in its discretion dispense with the stenographer's services in the absence of a request by the parties or one of them that he be present. In view of the importance of preserving a record in controverted matters, the court should, in the absence of an express stipulation waiving the recording of the testimony, inquire of the contending parties whether a record is desired; and where the testimony is not taken the records should show the reason, whether by stipulation or because of the court's exercise of its discretion. State ex rel. Stimatz v. District Court, 105 M 510, 74 P2d 8 (1937).

Where County Attorney during argument attempted repeatedly to present to jury the fact of an attempt to commit a second robbery although there was no evidence of such offense in the record, and defense counsel objected thereto and requested the attendance of the official stenographer, the court's refusal to comply with his request was an abuse of discretion. St. v. Hogan, 100 M 434, 49 P2d 446 (1935), distinguished in State ex rel. Stimatz v. District Court, 105 M 510, 74 P2d 8 (1937).

Exceptions to Rulings: An exception to an adverse ruling by the District Court is a matter of right, not one of grace or discretion on the part of the court, and when taken, the court stenographer must enter it, any opinion of the trial court to the contrary notwithstanding. St. v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 53 M 104, 161 P 953 (1916).

Payment of Fees: The fees for stenographers must be paid to official stenographers appointed by the court. Mont. Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 27 M 288, 70 P 1114 (1902).

Mandamus: Mandamus lies to compel the stenographer to write out and file a list of the objections, rulings, and exceptions occurring on the trial, where the order of the trial court is insufficient. State ex rel. Kranich v. Supple, 22 M 184, 56 P 20 (1899); explained in State ex rel. Donovan v. Ledwidge, 27 M 197, 70 P 511 (1902).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 154 substituted (1) concerning provision of a transcript by a court reporter for former language that read: "(1) Each court reporter shall furnish, upon request, with all reasonable diligence, to a party or a party's attorney in a case in which the court reporter has attended the trial or hearing a transcript from stenographic notes of the testimony and proceedings of the trial or hearing or a part of a trial or hearing upon payment by the person requiring the transcript of $2 a page for the original transcript, 50 cents a page for the first copy, and 25 cents a page for each additional copy, except as otherwise provided in this section"; inserted (2) regarding compensation for transcripts; in (4)(a) inserted third sentence allowing the court administrator to pay only for ordinary transcripts but not daily or expedited transcripts; in (4)(c) at end substituted "must be paid for by the county pursuant to subsection (2)" for "only the reporter's actual costs of preparation may be paid by the county"; inserted (6) defining terms used in this section; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 254 in (3) in first sentence added reference to county attorney and attorney general; deleted former (3)(b) that read: "(b) If the county attorney or the attorney general requires a transcript in a criminal case, the reporter shall furnish the transcript and only the reporter's actual cost of preparation may be paid by the county or the office of the attorney general"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2005.

(Version effective July 1, 2006) Chapter 449 in (1) at end inserted exception clause; in (3)(a) substituted "office of court administrator" for "state"; in (4)(a) after "If" deleted "it appears to the judge that a defendant in a criminal case or a parent or guardian in a proceeding brought pursuant to Title 41, chapter 3, part 4 or 6, is unable to pay for a transcript", inserted reference to public defender requesting a transcript, after "furnished to the" substituted "public defender" for "party", after "state" inserted "office of public defender", and at end deleted "3-5-901" and inserted "47-1-201"; inserted (4)(b) requiring office of court administrator to pay for transcript for pro se indigent defendant; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2006.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 254, L. 2005, provided: "WHEREAS, stenographic court reporters are important to the efficient functioning of the courts and save the court time and money during trial and appeals; and

WHEREAS, in 2001, the state assumed the costs of funding District Courts; and

WHEREAS, as part of state assumption, court reporters were given the option of becoming state employees, foregoing transcript fees, having the state provide and maintain all equipment and supplies, and receiving overtime for time spent in transcript preparation; becoming state employees, purchasing and maintaining their own equipment, receiving transcript fees, and foregoing overtime for time spent in transcript preparation; or being independent contractors; and

WHEREAS, the court reporters in this state entered into written agreements that incorporated the options available to them under the 2001 state assumption; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, in 2003, changed the law relating to compensation of court reporters and provided that all reporters shall provide transcripts to County Attorneys and the Attorney General at "actual cost", which has been interpreted by the District Court Council as meaning the cost of paper, printing, and photocopying."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 583 in (3)(a) at beginning before "judge" deleted "county attorney, attorney general, or"; inserted (3)(b) concerning county attorney or attorney general requiring a transcript; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 585 inserted (2) requiring deposit of certain transcription fees in state general fund; in (3) substituted "If the county attorney, attorney general, or judge requires a transcript in a criminal case, the reporter shall furnish it. The transcription fee must be paid by the state as provided in 3-5-901" for "If the county attorney, attorney general, or judge requires a transcript in a criminal case, the reporter is entitled to the reporter's fees for the transcript, but the reporter shall furnish it. Upon furnishing it, the reporter must receive a certificate for the sum to which the reporter is entitled. The reporter shall submit the certificate to the supreme court administrator who, in accordance with 3-5-902, is responsible for the prompt payment of all or a portion of the amount due the reporter. If the state, in accordance with 3-5-902, pays none or only a portion of the amount due, the county shall pay the balance upon receipt of a statement from the reporter"; in (5) at end substituted "paid for by the state as provided in 3-5-901" for "paid for by the state in the manner provided in subsection (2) to the extent funds are available. The county shall pay the remainder as required in 3-5-901"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2002.

Code Commissioner Instruction: Pursuant to sec. 47, Ch. 257, L. 2001, in (2) in version effective July 1, 2002, the code commissioner changed "state treasurer" to "department of revenue".

Indigent Criminal Defendants:

Proper showing must be made to the District Court that a defendant in a criminal case is unable to pay for a transcript so as to secure an order that it be furnished him and paid for by the county. (Under a 1985 amendment to this section payment is by the state, county, or both.) St. v. Davis, 139 M 616, 362 P2d 1013 (1961).

Where a defendant convicted of crime is unable to meet the expense incident to procuring a transcript of the evidence to enable him to present his appeal to the Supreme Court for review, it is the duty of the court to order the county to pay therefor. (Under a 1985 amendment to this section payment is by the state, county, or both.) State ex rel. Parmenter v. District Court, 111 M 453, 110 P2d 971 (1941).

Appeals to Supreme Court: This section governs only the furnishing of copies of the transcript of record for use in the trial court and has nothing to do with appeals to the Supreme Court. Sullivan v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 124 M 364, 224 P2d 135 (1950).

Certiorari Proceedings: Although it is the duty of the Clerk of Court to prepare the return required by the Supreme Court on issuance of a Writ of Certiorari, the court to which the Writ is directed has the power to order the court stenographer to prepare not only a transcript of the evidence heard in the particular case but the entire transcript, as one of his implied duties, without extra compensation. Pelletier v. Glacier County, 107 M 221, 82 P2d 595 (1938).

Waiver of Reporter: A party is entitled to a record of the testimony only when the stenographer has in fact attended the trial or hearing, not when the services of the stenographer have been dispensed with by the court, either by waiver or agreement of the parties or by the court's exercise of its discretion. State ex rel. Stimatz v. District Court, 105 M 510, 74 P2d 8 (1937).

Fees of Clerk: Charges by stenographer were considered excessive. Mont. Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston & Mont. Consol. Copper & Silver Min. Co., 33 M 400, 84 P 706 (1905).

Fees of Reporters:

The stenographer may not require the State or its Attorney General to pay the amount of his fees in advance. State ex rel. Donovan v. Ledwidge, 27 M 197, 70 P 511 (1902).

Fees paid court stenographers for transcribing testimony from their notes are chargeable as part of the costs. State ex rel. King v. District Court, 25 M 1, 63 P 402 (1901), explained in Gahagan v. Gugler, 103 M 521, 63 P2d 145 (1936).

Mandamus:

The appropriate remedy to compel the court stenographer to furnish the transcript in a civil cause is a Writ of Mandate. State ex rel. Donovan v. Ledwidge, 27 M 197, 70 P 511 (1902).

Where the stenographer failed to furnish an indigent defendant with a copy of the transcript when ordered to do so under this section, the Supreme Court will not compel obedience thereto by mandamus. State ex rel. Dempsey v. District Court, 24 M 566, 63 P 389 (1901), distinguished in State ex rel. Donovan v. Ledwidge, 27 M 197, 70 P 511 (1902).

Attorney General's Opinions

Transcript Fees: Prior to the 1981 amendment this section provided for a 7½ cents per folio page fee, and the Attorney General issued an opinion stating that court reporters may only charge 7½ cents per folio, as defined in 1-1-203, per copy for transcripts to be used on appeal to the Supreme Court. The charge applies to each page of the original and copies, including the title pages and the index pages. 37 A.G. Op. 85 (1977).

Court Reporter Serving Grand Jury: The taking of grand jury testimony is not an official duty of official court reporters, and additional compensation is due for that work performed. 36 A.G. Op. 110 (1976).

Case Notes

Notes of Other Persons: In making up statements or bills of exceptions, litigants may use the notes of any person which furnish a correct narrative of the proceedings. York v. Steward, 30 M 367, 76 P 756 (1904).

Effect of Certificate: The certificate of the stenographer that the transcript contains all the evidence cannot supply the certificate of the judge to that effect or an omission of the bill of exceptions itself to show that it does. St. v. Shepphard, 23 M 323, 58 P 868 (1899). See Conklin v. Cullen, 25 M 214, 64 P 502 (1901).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 358 in (1)(c), (1)(d), (1)(e), (1)(f), and (1)(h) substituted "47-1-119" for "47-1-201(5)". Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 140 in (1)(b)(iv) at beginning after "psychiatric" substituted "examination" for "evaluation" and after "46-14-202(4)" deleted "(a)(i) and (4)(a)(iii)"; in (1)(b)(v) at beginning after "for" substituted "commitment" for "a psychiatric evaluation" and after "cost of" substituted "transporting the defendant to the custody of the director of the department of public health and human services to be placed in an appropriate facility of the department of public health and human services and of transporting the defendant back for any proceedings" for "the examination and other associated expenses"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: (Version effective July 1, 2006) Chapter 449 in (1) in first sentence at end inserted "under the judicial branch" and in second sentence substituted "office of court administrator" for "state"; in (1)(b)(i) after "3-5-604" deleted "expenses for indigent defense that are paid under contract or at an hourly rate, and expenses for psychiatric examinations"; inserted (1)(b)(ii) through (1)(b)(v) relating to witness fees and expenses, juror fees and expenses, psychiatric evaluations under 46-14-202, and psychiatric evaluations under 46-14-221; in (1)(c) at beginning inserted exception clause; in (1)(d) at beginning inserted exception clause; in (1)(e) at beginning inserted exception clause; deleted former (1)(f) that read: "(f) in involuntary commitment cases pursuant to 53-21-121, reasonable compensation for services and related expenses for counsel appointed by the court"; inserted (1)(f) relating to grand jury juror and witness fees and witness expenses; in (1)(h) at beginning inserted exception clause; in (1)(i) after "contractors" deleted "but excluding the cost of providing district court office, courtroom, and other space as provided in 3-1-125"; in (1)(j) near beginning after "costs" inserted reference to operation and maintenance and at end after "chapter 5" deleted "and the costs of providing youth court office, courtroom, and other space as provided in 3-1-125"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) In addition to the costs assumed under the state-funded district court program, as provided in subsection (1), the state shall fund and directly pay the expenses of the appellate defender program. These costs must be allocated to and paid by the appellate defender program"; in (2) at beginning deleted "In addition to the costs assumed under the state-funded district court program, as provided in subsection (1)", inserted reference to costs not paid directly by office of court administrator, and substituted "the county shall pay the cost and the office of court administrator shall reimburse the county within 30 days of receipt of a claim" for "the state shall reimburse counties, within 30 days of receipt of a claim, for the following:

(a) in district court criminal cases:

(i) expenses for indigent defense that are not paid under subsection (1)(b);

(ii) juror fees and necessary expenses; and

(iii) witness fees and necessary expenses as provided in 46-15-116;

(b) in proceedings under subsection (1)(e):

(i) expenses for appointed counsel for the youth; and

(ii) expenses for appointed counsel for the parent, guardian, or other person having physical or legal custody of the youth; and

(c) costs of juror and witness fees and witness expenses before a grand jury"; in (3) in introductory clause after "costs" inserted "paid by the office of court administrator"; deleted former (4)(a) through (4)(c) that read: "(a) one-half of the salaries of county attorneys;

(b) salaries of deputy county attorneys;

(c) salaries of employees and expenses of the offices of county attorneys"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2006.

Saving Clause: Section 78, Ch. 449, L. 2005, was a saving clause.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 583 in (1) at end substituted reference to subsection (4) for reference to subsection (2); in (1)(b) at end substituted "expenses for indigent defense that are paid under contract or at an hourly rate" for "witness fees and necessary expenses, juror fees"; deleted former (1)(f) that read: "(f) costs of juror and witness fees and witness expenses before a grand jury"; inserted (1)(f) concerning involuntary commitment cases; in (1)(i) after "contractors" deleted "costs of the youth court and youth division offices, and costs of training for persons listed in subsections (1)(a)(i) through (1)(a)(v)"; inserted (1)(j) concerning youth court and youth court division operations; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), district court costs do not include:

(a) one-half of the salaries of county attorneys;

(b) salaries of deputy county attorneys;

(c) salaries of employees and expenses of the office of county attorney;

(d) costs for clerks of district court and employees and expenses of the office of the clerks of district court; or

(e) costs of providing district court office space"; in (2) at end inserted "and directly pay"; deleted former (3)(b) that read: "(b) district court expenses related to involuntary commitment proceedings and youth court proceedings in an annual amount not to exceed the district court expense for those proceedings in fiscal year 2001 plus a 3% growth factor each year. Any amount that exceeds the district court expense for those proceedings is the responsibility of the county"; in (3) at end inserted "within 30 days of receipt of a claim, for the following"; in (3)(a) at end deleted "only"; in (3)(a)(i) at end inserted "that are not paid under subsection (1)(b)"; inserted (3)(a)(ii) concerning juror fees and expenses; inserted (3)(a)(iii) concerning witness fees and expenses; inserted (3)(c) concerning juror and witness fees and witness expenses before grand jury; deleted former (4)(b) that read: "(b) If money appropriated for the expenses listed in subsection (4)(a) is insufficient to fully fund those expenses, the county is responsible for payment of the balance"; inserted (4) excluding enumerated expenses from district court costs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Chapter 585 in (1)(h) near middle after "trials if" substituted "similar expenses" for "those expenses" and at end substituted "district court fund or the county general fund in any previous year" for "district court budget in fiscal year 1998 or fiscal year 1999". Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: (Temporary version) Chapter 278 in (4)(a) at end substituted "7-6-4023" for "7-6-2352"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

(Version effective July 1, 2002) Chapter 585 substituted (1), (1)(a), and (1)(b) establishing state-funded district court program and delineating district court costs for former (1)(a) that read: "(1) To the extent that revenue is available under 61-3-509, the state shall fund:

(a) the following district court expenses in criminal cases only:

(i) salaries of court reporters;

(ii) fees for transcripts of proceedings;

(iii) witness fees and necessary expenses;

(iv) juror fees;

(v) expenses for indigent defense; and

(vi) expenses for psychiatric examinations"; in (1)(c) after "expenses" deleted "as listed in subsection (1)(a)"; deleted former (1)(e)(v) and (1)(e)(vi) that read: "(v) expenses for appointed counsel for the youth;

(vi) expenses for appointed counsel for the parent, guardian, or other person having physical or legal custody of the youth"; inserted (1)(f) relating to grand jury costs; inserted (1)(g) relating to costs of court-sanctioned educational programs and expenses of education; inserted (1)(h) relating to civil jury trial expenses paid out of district court budget in fiscal years 1998 and 1999; inserted (1)(i) relating to all other costs associated with operation and maintenance of district court except office, courtroom, and other space costs; deleted former (2), (3), and (4) that read: "(2) If revenue received under 61-3-509 exceeds the amount appropriated by the legislature to fund the expenses of the appellate defender program, the excess amount is statutorily appropriated, as provided in 17-7-502, to the supreme court to fund the expenses described in subsections (1)(a) through (1)(d), the district court grant program as described in subsection (4)(a), and the costs of administering this section.

(3) All revenue disbursed under this section must be deposited in and credited to the district court fund. If a district court fund does not exist, the revenue must be deposited in the county general fund for district court operations.

(4) If money appropriated for the expenses listed in subsection (1):

(a) exceeds the amount necessary to fully fund those expenses, the remaining excess amounts must be used for district court grants as provided in 7-6-2352; or

(b) is insufficient to fully fund those expenses, the county is responsible for payment of the balance"; inserted (2) delineating what costs are not district court costs; inserted (3) providing that the state will fund certain percentage of expenses of appellate defender program and district court expenses related to involuntary commitment proceedings and youth court proceedings; inserted (4) providing for state reimbursement of indigent defense in criminal cases and appointed counsel in child abuse and neglect proceedings up to amount of appropriation; and made minor changes in style. Subsections (3)(b) and (4)(b) terminate June 30, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 394 inserted (1)(d) itemizing expenses to be funded by the state pertaining to certain proceedings involving a youth; in (2) near end after "through" substituted "(1)(d), the district court grant program as described in subsection (4)(a)" for "(1)(c)"; inserted (3) concerning deposit of revenue; in (4)(a) after "expenses" deleted "up to $500,000 of the excess amount must be used for youth court and probation foster care placements if the department of corrections certifies to the supreme court that appropriations for youth court and probation foster care placements will be inadequate to fund those costs and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment — Coordination Instruction: Chapter 535 in (1)(a)(ii), at beginning, inserted "fees for"; in (1)(a)(v), at beginning, inserted "expenses for"; deleted (1)(f) that read: "(f) expenses of the appellate defender commission and the office of appellate defender"; in (1)(a)(vi), at beginning, inserted "expenses for"; inserted (1)(b) regarding funding of District Court expenses in postconviction and habeas corpus proceedings; inserted (1)(c) regarding funding of certain state expenses in federal habeas corpus cases; substituted (2) regarding statutory appropriation of excess funding for the appellate defender program for former language that read: "The revenue received under 61-3-509 is statutorily appropriated, as provided in 17-7-502, to the supreme court for funding the expenses listed in subsection (1) and the costs of administering this section"; in (3)(a), near beginning after "expenses", substituted "up to $500,000 of the excess amount must be used for youth court and probation foster care placements if the department of family services certifies to the supreme court that appropriations for youth court and probation foster care placements will be inadequate to fund those costs and remaining excess amounts" for "the excess amount"; in (3)(b), after "expenses", deleted "the appellate defender commission and the office of appellate defender must be funded first and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Section 2, Ch. 535, L. 1995, provided: "If both [this act] [Senate Bill No. 127] and Senate Bill No. 83 are passed and approved and if both include a section that amends 3-5-901, then 3-5-901 must read as follows". (See 1995 Session Law for text.) Senate Bill No. 83 was approved April 21, 1995, as Ch. 509, L. 1995, and included an amendment to 3-5-901. Therefore, the version of 3-5-901 in sec. 2, Ch. 535, L. 1995, is the effective version and has been codified accordingly.

Code Commissioner Change — Correction: Pursuant to sec. 2, Ch. 546, L. 1995, the Code Commissioner substituted Department of Corrections for the erroneous substitution of Department of Public Health and Human Services for Department of Family Services.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 330 in (1), after "extent that", substituted "revenue is available under 61-3-509" for "money is appropriated"; in (2) substituted statutory appropriation of revenue for funding expenses and costs for "The supreme court administrator, in consultation with the district judges for each judicial district, shall include within the supreme court's biennial budget request to the legislature a request for funding the expenses listed in subsection (1)"; deleted former (3)(b) that read: "(b) If no money is appropriated, the county is responsible for payment of all expenses"; and inserted (4) providing that money deposited in the state general fund during fiscal year 1992 in excess of the legislative appropriation is statutorily appropriated to the Supreme Court for District Court and courts of limited jurisdiction automation purposes during the 1995 biennium. Amendment effective April 13, 1993.

Termination Date Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 323, L. 1993, repealed sec. 13, Ch. 781, L. 1991, which would have terminated the 1991 amendments to this section regarding the Appellate Defender Commission effective July 1, 1993. The effect of the repealer is to make the amendments permanent. Repealer effective April 12, 1993.

Termination: Section 7, Ch. 330, L. 1993, provided: "The amendment to 3-5-901, enacting subsection (4) for purposes of the 1995 biennium, terminates July 1, 1995."

Judicial Unification and Finance Commission: Chapter 632, L. 1993, provided for the establishment of a Judicial Unification and Finance Commission, effective July 1, 1993, and terminating June 30, 1995. Because of the temporary nature of the Commission, Ch. 632, L. 1993, was not codified.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 704 in (1), at beginning, deleted "Effective July 1, 1985"; and in (2), near beginning, substituted "supreme court administrator" for "department of commerce" and near middle substituted "supreme court's" for "department's". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 781 inserted (1)(f) to include expenses of Appellate Defender Commission and Office of Appellate Defender; in (2), after "judicial district", inserted "and the appellate defender commission"; and in (3)(a)(ii), before "county", inserted language concerning first funding Appellate Defender Commission and Office of Appellate Defender. Amendment effective May 17, 1991, and terminates July 1, 1993.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 781, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 2] [2-15-1020, now repealed] grants the appellate defender commission rulemaking authority for the conduct of the commission's affairs. It is the intent that the commission adopt rules of procedure necessary to implement and carry out the duties of the commission."

1987 Amendment: Inserted (3)(a)(i) stating that if money appropriated for expenses listed in subsection (1) exceeds what is needed, the excess must be used as provided in 7-6-2352.

1985 Amendment: In (2) near beginning substituted "department of commerce" for "supreme court administrator, under the direction of the supreme court and"; and near middle of (2) before "biennial budget request" substituted "department's" for "supreme court's".

Case Notes

No Error in Disallowing State Payment of Court-Sanctioned Custody Evaluation: In establishing a parenting plan, the District Court directed the parties to obtain a psychological custodial evaluation. The father claimed that he did not have the funds to pay for the evaluation and requested that his share of the cost be paid out of the fund established in 40-4-226. The request was denied, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Section 40-4-226 does not provide that a District Court may order the state to pay for custody evaluations. The fund in 40-4-226 is for payment of costs of a court-ordered educational program, and because neither parent was ordered to attend a court-sanctioned educational program, the District Court did not err in disallowing the father's costs. In re Parenting of N.P. v. Perkins, 2006 MT 10, 330 M 293, 127 P3d 1035 (2006).

Reimbursement for Costs Incurred in Procuring Witness Testimony: Hardaway sought reimbursement for costs incurred in procuring the testimony of two out-of-state witnesses, one who appeared in person under subpoena and one who was deposed telephonically. The District Court denied reimbursement because Hardaway's counsel was retained rather than court-appointed. However, the only prerequisites that appear in the applicable statutes are that the court has revenue available and that the witness be subpoenaed. The procedural requirements of 46-15-113 for compelling the attendance of an out-of-state witness do not apply to an out-of-state witness who voluntarily appears and acknowledges service of a subpoena. Further, under 46-15-202, costs of a telephonic deposition are within the scope of a reimbursable deposition. The statutes do not distinguish between court-appointed and retained attorneys, but rather rely on the indigency of the defendant. Hardaway was declared indigent and remained so throughout the proceedings and, as such, was entitled to reimbursement for witness costs and deposition costs. St. v. Hardaway, 1998 MT 224, 290 M 516, 966 P2d 125, 55 St. Rep. 936 (1998).

County Employment of Independent Contractor to Provide Legal Services: There is no express prohibition under Montana law preventing a county from entering into an independent contractor relationship for the provision of certain juvenile and civil legal services. Hamner v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 233 M 271, 760 P2d 76, 45 St. Rep. 1481 (1988).

Attorney General's Opinions

State Funding of Legal Defense Expenses of Indigent Defendants Limited to District Courts: The 2001 amendments to 46-8-201 (now repealed) and this section revised the manner in which District Courts are funded by providing for state assumption of most costs. However, the amendments did not revise funding for Justices' Courts, and nothing indicates that the Legislature intended to include costs associated with indigent defendants in Justices' Courts. Under 46-8-201 (now repealed), costs of remuneration for counsel appointed for indigent criminal defendants are paid by the state, but payments are limited to District Court criminal cases only. 49 A.G. Op. 21 (2002).

County, Not State, Required to Fund Legal Expenses of Indigent Juvenile Under Youth Court Act: Youth Court defense expenses are not included in this section as a specific expense that the state is required to fund; thus, the Legislature did not intend the state to be responsible for funding Youth Court expenses. Rather, pursuant to 41-5-104 (now repealed) and 41-5-111, the Board of County Commissioners is required to fund the legal defense expenses of an indigent youth against whom a petition has been filed in Youth Court. 48 A.G. Op. 16 (2000).

Case Notes

No Error in District Court's Affirmation of Particularized Suspicion for Traffic Stop Despite Lack of Municipal Court Record: Peterson appealed a Municipal Court DUI and careless driving conviction to District Court, asserting that the officer lacked a particularized suspicion to make the traffic stop. The District Court affirmed, despite the absence of a pretrial hearing tape. On appeal, Peterson contended that the District Court erred in affirming on an incomplete record. Although the Supreme Court noted a concern about sloppy Municipal Court recordkeeping and the number of cases appealed with inadequate, incomplete, unavailable, and disorderly Municipal Court records, in this case, the District Court had a sufficient record for review purposes. The court relied on the officer's experience in making DUI stops, the officer's observations of Peterson crossing a dividing line and making an improper turn, and Peterson's own admission that he was possibly swerving. The District Court was thus affirmed despite the absence of a pretrial hearing tape. Billings v. Peterson, 2004 MT 232, 322 M 444, 97 P3d 532 (2004), distinguishing FIRS Holding Co., Inc. v. Case Notes

Jurisdiction Over Municipal Court Protection Order: The Missoula County District Court issued a permanent injunction, based on a stalking violation of 45-5-220, prohibiting Gillispie from contacting his former wife "by a third person, except by telephone or correspondence through her attorney of record". Gillispie admitted contacting his former wife's mother in Missoula and was charged with and convicted in Municipal Court of an order of protection violation pursuant to 45-5-626. On appeal, Gillispie contended that the Municipal Court did not have jurisdiction over the offense. A Municipal Court has geographic jurisdiction over misdemeanors coextensive with the jurisdiction of Justices' Courts located in the same county. Although neither Gillispie nor the former wife was present in Missoula County at the time of the prohibited phone call, the former wife's mother received the call in Missoula County. Thus, the Municipal Court was vested with jurisdiction over the misdemeanor order of protection violation when the necessary result of Gillispie's third-party contact by telephone was committed within Missoula County. Missoula v. Gillispie, 1999 MT 268, 296 M 444, 989 P2d 401, 56 St. Rep. 1085 (1999).

Attorney General's Opinions

Cities' Use of County Jails: Because the consent of the County Commissioners is required before a municipality may use the county jail, it was not presumed that consent was meaningless and, therefore, counties may refuse the use of county jails for confinement of persons accused or convicted of violating local ordinances. Likewise, a county may charge a municipality for maintaining prisoners committed to county jail at the request of a municipal police department in the course of enforcing local ordinances and state laws. 37 A.G. Op. 10 (1977).

Electronic Recording of Municipal Court Evidentiary Hearing Part of Record on Appeal: Lyons contended on appeal of a DUI case that because the electronic recording of the Municipal Court's evidentiary hearing was not considered by the District Court, it was not part of the record and could not be considered on appeal. The Supreme Court disagreed. Regardless of whether the recording was used in District Court, it was part of the record available for Supreme Court review. Missoula v. Lyons, 2004 MT 255, 323 M 67, 97 P3d 1120 (2004).

No Error in District Court's Affirmation of Particularized Suspicion for Traffic Stop Despite Lack of Municipal Court Record: Peterson appealed a Municipal Court DUI and careless driving conviction to District Court, asserting that the officer lacked a particularized suspicion to make the traffic stop. The District Court affirmed, despite the absence of a pretrial hearing tape. On appeal, Peterson contended that the District Court erred in affirming on an incomplete record. Although the Supreme Court noted a concern about sloppy Municipal Court recordkeeping and the number of cases appealed with inadequate, incomplete, unavailable, and disorderly Municipal Court records, in this case, the District Court had a sufficient record for review purposes. The court relied on the officer's experience in making DUI stops, the officer's observations of Peterson crossing a dividing line and making an improper turn, and Peterson's own admission that he was possibly swerving. The District Court was thus affirmed despite the absence of a pretrial hearing tape. Billings v. Peterson, 2004 MT 232, 322 M 444, 97 P3d 532 (2004), distinguishing FIRS Holding Co., Inc. v. No District Court Error in Failing to Hold Trial De Novo in Municipal Court Appeal: Campbell was charged in Missoula Municipal Court with criminal trespass, disorderly conduct, and obstructing a police officer. Campbell failed to appear for trial and was tried in absentia and convicted on all charges. Campbell appealed to District Court, was notified of the appropriate Municipal Court appeal procedure in this section, and was given 10 days to file a brief. Campbell failed to file a brief, so the District Court dismissed the appeal and remanded to Municipal Court for further proceedings. Campbell appealed to the Supreme Court on grounds that the District Court should have conducted a trial de novo pursuant to 46-17-311. The Supreme Court disagreed. Campbell's appeal was from a Municipal Court and thus was governed by this section, rather than 46-17-311, so the appeal was confined to review of the record and questions of law. The District Court did not err in failing to conduct a trial de novo, and dismissal of Campbell's appeal for failure to file a brief was affirmed. Missoula v. Campbell, 2001 MT 271, 307 M 286, 37 P3d 670 (2001).

No District Court Jurisdiction of Appeal From Municipal Court When Defendant Not Incarcerated and Fine Less Than $300: Koestner was convicted in Municipal Court of reckless driving and was fined $175, court costs of $20, and a witness fee of $10, and no jail time was ordered. Koestner appealed the conviction and the denial of a request for a jury trial to District Court, but that court concluded that it did not have jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Koestner appealed to the Supreme Court, arguing that under the Montana Uniform Municipal Court Rules of Appeal to District Court (Title 25, ch. 30, part 2100), a city must have an ordinance in place to trigger the statutory amount necessary to bring an appeal and that because the city never presented evidence that such an ordinance existed, the District Court had jurisdiction under this section to review the Municipal Court decision. The Supreme Court agreed that because Koestner was not incarcerated and the fine imposed was less than $300, the District Court properly concluded that it was bound by Rule 1(b)(2), U.M.C.R.App. (Title 25, ch. 30, part 2100), which limits appeals in criminal cases to those in which the minimum amount in controversy is greater than $300, unless jail time is ordered. Although Koestner, under Rule 3, U.M.C.R.App., could have petitioned the District Court to hear the appeal in the interests of justice, no petition was filed. Koestner's arguments regarding lack of a city ordinance were not raised before the District Court, and the Supreme Court declined to address the issue for the first time on appeal. Kalispell v. Koestner, 2001 MT 53, 304 M 315, 21 P3d 622 (2001).

District Court Exceeding Scope of Appellate Review — Abuse of Discretion in Applying Particularized Suspicion of DUI to Traffic Stop Triggered by Report of Vandalism: Robertson was stopped after a vehicle of the description that he was driving was reported leaving the scene of a vandalism. He was subsequently convicted of DUI in City Court and appealed to District Court on grounds that his right to confront witnesses was denied and that the city had not sustained the necessary burden of proof to support the conviction. The District Court remanded to the City Court for dismissal on grounds that the arresting officer did not have a sufficient particularized suspicion to justify the investigative stop for DUI. However, the issue of a sufficient particularized suspicion was never raised or ruled on in City Court by either Robertson or the city. When a District Court exercises its power of appellate review, it must refrain from deciding issues not properly raised or objected to in the court below; thus, the District Court abused its discretion by exceeding the scope of its appellate review in addressing the issue of particularized suspicion, so the Supreme Court reversed the order of the District Court dismissing the City Court judgment against Robertson. Missoula v. Robertson, 2000 MT 52, 298 M 419, 998 P2d 144, 57 St. Rep. 250 (2000). See also Missoula v. Asbury, 265 M 14, 873 P2d 936, 51 St. Rep. 383 (1994), and St. v. Proper Cross-Appeal of Adverse District Court Decision Regarding City Court Denial of Motion for Continuance: The established doctrine governing appeals to all appellate courts is that a party must cross-appeal if the party seeks to change any part of the judgment below. Further, the Montana Supreme Court follows the rule that it has jurisdiction only over those issues addressed in the appeal or in a properly filed cross-appeal, not jurisdiction over the entire case. Conversely, it is also the general rule that a cross-appeal is not necessary to enable a prevailing party to defend its judgment on any ground properly raised below, whether or not that ground was relied upon, rejected, or even considered by the court below. The proper way for a respondent to raise an issue before the Supreme Court, if the issue would support the decision below and is an issue that the court below did not address because it found another issue to be dispositive, is to assert the issue in the brief to the Supreme Court and fully discuss it. If a respondent does not assert and fully discuss the issue, the Supreme Court may in its discretion: (1) review the issue itself; (2) decide that the respondent has waived the right to review of the issue; or (3) remand to the court below for a decision on the issue. Here, issues raised by respondent that the District Court declined to address, having found another issue dispositive, undoubtedly supported the District Court's decision reversing the City Court's judgment. Thus, because the respondent sufficiently asserted the issues and both parties fully briefed each one, the Supreme Court concluded that the respondent had properly cross-appealed and that it was proper to review the respondent's issues on appeal. Missoula v. Robertson, 2000 MT 52, 298 M 419, 998 P2d 144, 57 St. Rep. 250 (2000), following In Interest of Jamie L., 493 NW 2d 56 (Wis. 1992). See also Wash. v. City Not Liable for City Judge's Civil Rights Violations — City Judge Acts Under State Authority: Claims of the indigent defendants, who were not effectively informed by a City Judge of their right to appointed counsel, were properly dismissed. Under Montana law, a City Judge's acts and decision in advising defendants of the right were performed under the state's authority rather than the city's authority, thereby precluding imposition of civil rights liability on the city.

Further, the indigent defendants did not have standing to seek declaratory and injunctive relief. There are other remedies for indigent defendants in future situations—they can file a complaint with the state body charged with overseeing judicial conduct, they can appeal their convictions to a higher court, and they can sue a judge individually because a judge does not enjoy judicial immunity for unconstitutional behavior when the facts are sufficient to grant declaratory or injunctive relief. Eggar v. Livingston, 40 F3d 312 (9th Cir. 1994).

Failure to Present Issue to First Level Appellate Court as Precluding Consideration at Second Appellate Level: At their initial trial in Municipal Court, defendants raised an issue of reliance on treaties entered into by the United States, but the issue was not raised at the first level of appeal when the case was considered by the District Court pursuant to this section. As a result, the issue was held to be not properly before the Supreme Court at the second level of appeal. Missoula v. Asbury, 265 M 14, 873 P2d 936, 51 St. Rep. 383 (1994), followed in Missoula v. Robertson, 2000 MT 52, 298 M 419, 998 P2d 144, 57 St. Rep. 250 (2000). See also In re Marriage of Cadena v. Fries, 2015 MT 90, 378 Mont. 409, 346 P.3d 347.

(4) There must be two mandatory annual training sessions supervised by the supreme court for all elected and appointed municipal court judges. One of the training sessions may be held in conjunction with the Montana magistrates' association convention. Actual and necessary travel expenses, as defined and provided for in 2-18-501 through 2-18-503, and the costs of registration and books and other materials must be paid to the elected or appointed municipal court judge for attending the sessions by the city in which he holds or will hold court and must be charged against that city.

(5) Each municipal court judge shall attend the training sessions provided for in subsection (4). Failure to attend disqualifies a judge from office and creates a vacancy in the office. However, the supreme court may excuse a municipal court judge from attendance because of illness, a death in the family, or any other good cause"; and made minor changes in style. Supreme Court Orders: "The following Montana Supreme Court order, signed by all seven justices, was issued on June 10[, 2003]:

IN THE MATTER OF ESTABLISHING GREATER TRAINING REQUIREMENTS FOR MUNICIPAL COURT JUDGES AND FOR JUSTICES OF THE PEACE OF JUSTICE'S COURTS ESTABLISHED AS COURTS OF RECORD

Pursuant to Sec. 3, Ch. 389, L. 2003, the 2003 Montana Legislature, among other things, adopted certain amendments to § 3-6-202, MCA. Specifically, § 3-6-202, MCA, now provides in pertinent part:

(4) A municipal court judge shall complete a minimum of 15 hours of continuing judicial education requirements each year or a greater number established by the supreme court. Attendance at the two annual training sessions under 3-10-203 may fulfill the requirement provided for in this subsection.

(5) Completion of a course approved for continuing judicial or legal education hours applies to the judicial education requirements under subsection (4).

Similarly, Sec. 6, Ch. 389, L. 2003, amended § 3-10-203, MCA by providing, in pertinent part:

(4) A justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record, provided for in 3-10-101, must meet the requirements provided for in [section 10].

In that regard, Sec. 10, Ch. 389, L. 2003, provides in pertinent part:

(2) A justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record, provided for in 3-10-101, shall complete a minimum of 15 hours of continuing judicial education requirements each year or a greater number established by the supreme court. Attendance at the two annual training sessions under 3-10-203 may fulfill the requirement provided for in this subsection.

(3) completion of a course approved for continuing judicial or legal education hours applies to the judicial education requirements under subsection (2).

Aside from whatever other judicial or legal education courses a municipal court judge or a justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record may choose to complete, this Court has determined that attendance of such judges and justices at the two mandatory annual training sessions prescribed by § 3-10-203, MCA, must also be required.

These two mandatory annual training sessions provide judicial education directed specifically at Montana statutory and jurisprudential law and provide information relating to the efficient operation and standards of justice and judicial services expected from all courts of limited jurisdiction in Montana. Moreover, these two annual training sessions prepare the judges and justices of the courts of limited jurisdiction for the certification test which is prerequisite to the Commission on Courts of Limited Jurisdiction issuing certificates of completion of a course of education and training prescribed by § 3-1-1502 and 1503, MCA.

Therefore, this Court has determined that municipal court judges and justices of the peace for justice's courts established as courts of record are required to complete a greater number of hours of judicial education than the minimum hours specified in Secs. 3 and 10, Ch. 389, L. 2003. Accordingly,

IT IS ORDERED that pursuant to Article VII, Section 2(2) of the Constitution of Montana, Sec. 3, Ch. 389, L. 2003 and § 3-6-202(4) and (5), MCA, all municipal court judges shall attend the two mandatory annual training sessions provided for in § 3-10-203, MCA, in addition to whatever other courses of continuing judicial or legal education they may choose to complete.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that pursuant to Article VII, Section 2(2) of the Constitution of Montana, Sec. 10, Ch. 389, L. 2003, and § 3-10-203(4), MCA, all justices of the peace for justice's courts established as courts of record shall attend the two mandatory annual training sessions provided for in § 3-10-203, MCA, in addition to whatever other courses of continuing judicial or legal education they may choose to complete.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this order shall be effective July 1, 2003."

1991 Amendment: Inserted (3) requiring certification of municipal court judge; inserted (4) establishing mandatory annual training sessions; and inserted (5) requiring municipal court judge to attend training sessions. Amendment effective April 2, 1991.

Case Notes

Municipal Ordinance Prohibiting Outside Employment by Municipal Judge Void: The city of Bozeman passed municipal ordinance 2.06.050 prohibiting the Municipal Court Judge from obtaining outside employment. The city contended that under this section, it was allowed to enact an ordinance governing the qualifications of the judge, as long as the ordinance did not violate Art. VII, sec. 9, Mont. Const., and also argued that the ordinance was consistent with 3-1-604, which precludes a Municipal Court Judge from practicing law in that judge's own court. The Supreme Court agreed with the District Court that the ordinance was void because it conflicted with 3-1-604 when read in conjunction with 3-1-601. The legislative history also demonstrated that the statutes are intended to allow Municipal Court Judges to practice law in courts other than their own in order to supplement their income. Although the constitutional provision prohibits a District Court Judge from the outside practice of law and this section requires a Municipal Court Judge to have the same qualifications as a District Court Judge, qualifications should not be confused with restrictions. Although 3-1-604 does not affirmatively declare that Municipal Court Judges can practice law outside their own courts, its intent is clear. The ordinance conflicted with the statutes and was therefore void. Carlson v. Bozeman, 2001 MT 46, 304 M 277, 20 P3d 792 (2001).

Failure to Participate in Water Court Hearing — Attorney Fees Assessed as Sanction for Defense of Unreasonable Appeal: Despite warnings from the Water Court of the consequences, plaintiffs chose not to participate in a Water Court hearing, thereby creating no record of their issues and preserving none of their arguments for appeal. They appealed anyway, contending that the Water Court's findings were in error. The Supreme Court first found that the findings and conclusions were correct, then sanctioned plaintiffs pursuant to former Rule 32, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), finding that defendant was entitled to attorney fees incurred in defending an appeal that was taken without any substantial or reasonable grounds, that delayed the case, and that wasted the resources of defendant and the Supreme Court. Federal Reserved Water Rights — Dismissal of Federal Court Actions — Judicial Administration: When the United States brings actions in federal court for a general adjudication of Indian and other federal reserved water rights under 28 U.S.C. 1345, the actions are properly dismissed because the state courts have concurrent jurisdiction as a result of the McCarran Amendment, because the State has established a comprehensive system under state law for adjudication of all water rights in the state, including federal reserved rights, and because the policy of wise judicial administration announced in Colorado River Conservation District v. U.S., 424 US 800 (1976), requires the court to defer to the state system for efficient adjudication of these rights. N. Cheyenne Tribe v. Tongue River Water Users Ass'n, 484 F. Supp. 31, 36 St. Rep. 2265 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Water Divisions

3-7-101. Water divisions.

Compiler's Comments

1985 Amendment: In first sentence, after "water rights", inserted "and to conduct hearings in cases certified under 85-2-309".

Purpose: Subsection (1) of sec. 1, Ch. 697, L. 1979, provided: "[This act] amends the Montana Water Use Act to expedite and facilitate the adjudication of existing water rights."

Codification: Section 35, Ch. 697, L. 1979, provided: "(1) Sections 1 through 10 of this act are intended to be codified as an integral part of Title 3, and the provisions contained in Title 3 apply to this act.

(2) Sections 11 through 27 are intended to be codified as an integral part of Title 85, chapter 2, part 2, and the provisions contained in Title 85, chapter 2, apply to this act.

(3) If the provisions of this act are not codified as stated above, the code commissioner shall add to the MCA, if necessary, statutory language to convey the intent of this section."

Because of rearrangement of the new material, Ch. 697 is now codified in Title 3, ch. 7; Title 85, ch. 2, parts 2 and 7; and 2-15-212.

Severability: Section 36, Ch. 697, L. 1979, was a severability section.

3-7-103. Promulgation of rules and prescription of forms — advisory committee.

Case Notes

Petition to Adjudicate Water Rights — Reversed and Remanded to Allow Owner to File Exempt Claim: A ranch acquired Indian allotment land that had been previously held in trust by the United States and was later converted to fee status. The ranch petitioned the Water Court for adjudication of existing water rights appurtenant to the lands. The Water Court denied the petition, holding that the lands did not require a separate adjudication because they were part of the Crow Water Compact. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case with instructions that the petition be dismissed without prejudice so that the ranch could timely file an exempt claim with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. Part 5
Jurisdiction

Part Case Notes

Jurisdiction Required Before Judgment Effective: It is fundamental that a court rendering a decision in a particular case have jurisdiction over the parties. When the judgment roll on its face shows that the court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment, its pronouncement is in fact no judgment and cannot be enforced. No right can be derived from it. All proceedings founded upon it are invalid and ineffective for any purpose. Ciotti v. Hoover, 237 M 462, 774 P2d 406, 46 St. Rep. 969 (1989), following Apple v. 1981 Amendment: At end of (2) added "except as provided in 3-7-201 and 3-7-213".

Case Notes

District Court Error in Restraining Use of Contracted Irrigation Water: Micks contracted to purchase the right to 775 acre feet of water from the Deadman"s Basin Water Users Association, to be appropriated from the Deadman's Basin Reservoir, in order to irrigate a hay crop. In April 2000, the District Court appointed two Water Commissioners to distribute the reservoir water pursuant to a rotation plan. In August 2000, the District Court, on its own motion, found that the water level in the reservoir had reached a critical level, that the remaining water was necessary to maintain domestic, municipal, stock, and wildlife usage, and that the irrigation of crops from the river was prohibited as long as the reservoir level remained critically low. Micks determined that he had used only 431 acre feet of his contracted 775 acre feet, and based on his limited usage and other reasons, he presumed that the District Court prohibition did not apply to him, so he continued to irrigate his hay crop. Micks' continued irrigation was discovered, and he was ordered by the District Court to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for failure to comply with the prohibition order. Micks requested that the District Court reconsider its order, but the request was denied, so Micks appealed. The Supreme Court noted that under Mildenberger v. Galbraith, 249 M 161, 815 P2d 130 (1991), and Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260 (1992), the jurisdiction to interpret and determine existing water rights rests exclusively with the Water Courts and that although the District Court has the authority to supervise the distribution of previously adjudicated water or to enforce an existing water decree and may in certain cases fill in a pre-1973 decree with further delineations, such as time or season of use and acreage of application, in this case, the District Court made a priority determination regarding domestic and irrigation water consumption based on the court's own inclinations, exceeding its authority to simply fill in a water decree with further delineations. Micks' contract unambiguously required a pro rata reduction in water distribution when an inadequate amount existed to satisfy outstanding water purchase contracts. Therefore, the District Court erred as a matter of law when it employed a first come, first served policy in contravention of the water contract. Denial of Micks' motion to reconsider the prohibition order was reversible error, and his motion to restrain the Water Commissioners from interfering with use of Deadman's Basin Reservoir irrigation water to which he was entitled should have been granted. In re Petition of Deadman's Basin Water Users Ass'n to Appoint Water Comm'r to Distribute Stored Water, 2002 MT 15, 308 M 168, 40 P3d 387 (2002).

Jurisdiction of District Court to "Update" Old Water Rights Decree — Statute Governing Complaints by Dissatisfied Users Inapplicable: Pursuant to a previous writ of supervisory control, a remand to the District Court, and findings entered by the Senior Water Master, the Supreme Court found that the Order Authorizing Updated Decree, entered by the judges of the Fourth Judicial District in January of 1989, was beyond the jurisdiction of the District Court. The order was intended to deal with the problem of a 1902 water rights decree by a District Court, in which the judge adjudicated 27 water rights on Carlton Creek, that had become so brittle with age and damaged by time that the decree could not be readily handled. In the process of updating and reissuing the 1902 order, the Supreme Court found that the Fourth Judicial District Judges had actually made a de facto adjudication of water rights in an overly appropriated drainage and that that adjudication had been undertaken without notice and hearing to the holders of certain of those water rights. Citing Mildenberger v. Galbraith, 249 M 161, 815 P2d 130 (1991), and Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260 (1992), the Supreme Court held that under 85-2-234(6), it is within the sole jurisdiction of the Water Court to determine such things as priority dates, flow rates, place of use, and means of diversion with respect to a water right. The Supreme Court also held that the matters adjudicated by the decree were not within the scope of matters cognizable under 85-5-301 because that section concerns the correct administration of a water rights decree while the Updated Decree attempts to change the terms of the decree itself. For these reasons, the Supreme Court vacated the 1989 Updated Decree. State ex rel. Jones v. District Court, 283 M 1, 938 P2d 1312, 54 St. Rep. 460 (1997).

No Departmental Rulemaking Authority Regarding Water Claims — Jurisdiction in Water Courts — Rulemaking Reserved to Supreme Court: Legislation in 1979 placed the procedure for adjudication of water claims in the Water Courts and reserved the power of rulemaking with respect to pending judicial proceedings to the Supreme Court. Lacking express legislative authority, neither the Board nor Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has any rulemaking authority with respect to procedures in the adjudication of water rights before the Water Courts, and the Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not supply such authority. Functions of the Department respecting water claims are limited to rendering assistance to the Water Judges as set out in 85-2-243. In re Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 226 M 221, 740 P2d 1096, 44 St. Rep. 604 (1987).

Jurisdiction of Water Judge Beyond Boundaries of Water Division: The apparent purpose of 3-7-501(2) is to recognize the parochial nature of water usage and assure that Water Judges are conversant with the history of water usage when making water adjudications. The provisions of 3-7-213 (now repealed) must be interpreted in conjunction with the provisions of 3-7-501. A reading of the two sections together indicates that the intent of the Legislature was to provide that a District Judge, sitting as a Water Judge, could not serve beyond the boundaries of his division absent the showing required by 3-7-213 (now repealed). Granite Ditch Co. v. Anderson, 204 M 10, 662 P2d 1312, 40 St. Rep. 630 (1983), followed in Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989).

2005 Amendment: Chapter 557 in (5) in two places after "justice's" deleted "court established as a" and at end of first sentence substituted "3-10-115 and 3-10-116" for "3-10-115 through 3-10-117". Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 389 inserted (5) concerning a county's establishment of a justice's court as a court of record. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Grandfather Clause: Section 13, Ch. 389, L. 2003, provided: "An incumbent justice of the peace on [the effective date of this act] [effective July, 1, 2003], in a county in which a justice's court established as a court of record is established, who meets the minimum education requirements for a justice of the peace is eligible to run for the justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record in that county at the next and subsequent elections held for the justice of the peace for the justice's court established as a court of record unless the justice of the peace has a break in service."

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 389, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 393 in (1) inserted second sentence requiring county commissioners to designate number of justices in justice's court; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1981 Amendment: Rewrote section (see 1981 Session Law for text). Former language read: "(1) There must be at least one justice's court in each county of the state. The board of county commissioners of each county of the state shall have authority to constitute one additional justice's court in its respective county, as the board deems necessary.

(2) One justice's court in each county must be located at the county seat, and the board of county commissioners shall determine the location of the other justice's court in its respective county."

Case Notes

Elimination of Trial De Novo on Appeals From Justices' Courts of Record Not Unconstitutional: Hernandez contended that the elimination of trials de novo following appeals from Justices' Courts of Record in 3-10-101 violated Art. VII, sec. 4(2), Mont. Const., which requires District Courts to hear appeals from inferior courts as new trials unless otherwise provided by law. The Supreme Court held that the phrase "as otherwise provided by law" authorizes the Legislature to provide for something other than trials de novo in District Court and that elimination of trials de novo through the creation of Justices' Courts of Record is constitutionally permissible under Art. VII, sec. 4(2), Mont. Const. Hernandez v. Yellowstone County Comm'rs, 2008 MT 251, 345 M 1, 189 P3d 638 (2008).

No Constitutional Prohibition Against Justices' Courts of Record: Hernandez asserted that 3-10-101, allowing the creation of Justices' Courts of Record, violated the provisions of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., by abolishing constitutionally created Justices' Courts. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under 3-10-101, counties are given the option but are not required to create Justices' Courts of Record, so constitutionally created Justices' Courts are not abolished. Article VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., allows the Legislature to create inferior courts by law, and the Legislature properly exercised that authority in adopting 3-10-101 and provided operating rules for Justices' Courts of Record in 3-10-115 to govern operation of the inferior courts of record. Nothing in the constitutional provision prohibits the creation of Justices' Courts of Record, and 3-10-101 is not unconstitutional. Hernandez v. Yellowstone County Comm'rs, 2008 MT 251, 345 M 1, 189 P3d 638 (2008).

Justice's Court to Be Open on All Working Days — Limited Office Hours of Justice Permitted: A Justice's Court is always open for the transaction of business except on legal holidays and nonjudicial days. However, the office hours that must be kept by a Justice of the Peace each day are set by the County Commissioners and need not include hours on every day that the Justice's Court is open for the transaction of business. 40 A.G. 2001 Amendment: Chapter 6 in (1) at end of introductory clause substituted "justice's court" for "justice of the peace"; in (1)(a) after "enable" substituted "the justice of the peace and the clerk of justice's court, if any, to conduct business" for "him to perform his duties"; in (1)(b) near middle substituted "court" for "judicial office"; inserted (2) allowing for a clerk of justice's court; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Case Notes

Separation of Powers Doctrine Not to Preclude Compliance With Employee Grievance Procedure by Justice's Court: A Justice of the Peace involved in a disciplinary action against the court office manager contended that a grievance hearing before the County Commission would violate the separation of powers doctrine by interfering with the independence of the court by requiring the Justice of the Peace to be an adverse witness against court personnel, allowing the Justice of the Peace's decision on personnel matters to be overruled by another branch of government, and possibly requiring the Justice of the Peace to accept an employee believed to be unsatisfactory. However, as established in Hillis v. Sullivan, 48 M 320, 137 P 392 (1913), the hiring by the County Commission of a clerk to assist a court does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. In addition, the County Commission is statutorily required to provide a Justice of the Peace with clerical assistance. Thus, a grievance hearing before the County Commission does not violate the separation of powers doctrine because the County Commission's independent hiring of the office manager is consistent with the doctrine; nor does the County Commission's hearing of the grievance constitute an exercise of authority belonging to the Judicial Branch. Clark v. Dussault, 265 M 479, 878 P2d 239, 51 St. Rep. 642 (1994).

Agreement by County Commission to Pay Justice Court Expenses — Failure to Object — Appeal Precluded: A Justice of the Peace requested approval of funds from the County Commission for employment of a temporary clerical assistant. The County Commission initially refused to approve the funds. The claim was then submitted for certification pursuant to Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975), and was subsequently certified as an actual and necessary expense incurred in the performance of actual duties of the Justice Court. When the bill was still not paid, the Justice of the Peace filed a petition for a contempt order against the County Commissioners for failure to pay the certified claim. The order was amended to include attorney fees. The County Commission then agreed to pay the claim and did not oppose the motion to amend, nor did it file a responsive brief. However, it later alleged error. The Supreme Court held that the County Commission waived the right to appeal by agreeing to pay the claim and then failing to object to the District Court order to pay the claim and taking no further action to challenge the claim. In re Certain Justice Court Expenses, 264 M 510, 872 P2d 795, 51 St. Rep. 372 (1994).

Claim of Justice's Court for Unbudgeted Actual and Necessary Expenses: When Justice of Peace filed claim to pay necessary extra clerical assistance, County Commissioners did not have discretion to disallow claim under section 16-1906, R.C.M. 1947 (renumbered 7-6-2323 through 7-6-2325, 7-6-2327, and 7-6-2328, all sections now repealed), as section 93-412, R.C.M. 1947 (now 3-10-103 and 3-10-209), prevailed. When a specific statute conflicts with a general statute, the specific controls over the general to the extent of any repugnancy. State ex rel. Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975). (Annotator's Comment: In this case Supreme Court exercised supervisory powers to provide a procedure to prevent future actual or potential conflict between the Board of County Commissioners and Justice's Courts.)

Mandamus — Payment of Clerical Expenses: County Commissioners can be compelled to pay for necessary clerical expenses under this section and 3-10-209 when necessity is shown for the performance of duties. State ex rel. Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975).

Duty of Boards of County Commissioners to Accept and Pay Claims for Actual and Necessary Clerical Expenses of Justice's Court: Under this section, a duty is created on the part of Boards of County Commissioners to accept and pay claims for actual and necessary clerical expenses associated with the operation of Justices' Courts. If disputes arise regarding payment of those expenses, the procedural rule in State ex rel. Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975), applies. Although Boards may have some budgetary discretion when considering payment of actual and necessary court expenses, the statutes governing the county budgeting process do not preclude application of the Browman rule when disputes arise. 49 A.G. Case Notes

Landlord-Tenant Dispute — District Court Properly Ruled Before Justice Court's Action on In Forma Pauperis Motion — Award Exceeded Justice Court Statutory Limit: In a landlord-tenant dispute relating to the rental of mobile homes, the Justice Court held a bench trial over several dates. Throughout the course of the bench trial, the pro se tenants claimed to have not received notices because of a change in mailing address. Eventually, the Justice Court ruled in favor of the landlord and awarded attorney fees, damages, and costs in the amount of $21,950. The tenants filed a notice of appeal in the Justice Court, with a motion and application to proceed in forma pauperis. The District Court notified the parties that it received the record and provided briefing deadlines. The tenants did not file an appellate brief or request an extension of their deadline. The District Court then dismissed the tenants' appeal and affirmed the Justice Court. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that the District Court did not err in ruling before the Justice Court had ruled on the tenants' application to proceed in forma pauperis. However, the Supreme Court found that, although the tenants did not object, the Justice Court awarded damages in excess of $12,000, the limit of jurisdiction provided in 3-10-301. Alto Jake Holdings, LLC v. Donham, 2017 MT 297, 389 Mont. 435, 406 P.3d 937.

Absent Trial De Novo, District Court's Appellate Review Sufficiently Safeguards Defendant's Due Process Rights: There is no basis to conclude that properly trained nonlawyer judges are incapable of making factual determinations or exercising discretion appropriately, or that a license to practice law would improve their ability to do so. Therefore, the defendant's right to due process of law was not violated by having a trial before a nonlawyer justice of the peace without the opportunity for a trial de novo in District Court. St. v. Davis, 2016 MT 102, 383 Mont. 281, 371 P.3d 979.

Appeal From Small Claims Court to District Court — Municipal Court Appellate Rules Inapplicable: The defendants appealed from a judgment of the Small Claims Court to the District Court, and the District Court dismissed the appeal on the basis that the defendants failed to file their brief within the deadline imposed by Rule 14, U.M.C.R.App. (Title 25, ch. 30). On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, concluding that the Uniform Municipal Court Rules of Appeal are inapplicable to an appeal from Small Claims Court to District Court; rather, the appeal is governed by Title 25, ch. 35, part 8. The Uniform Municipal Court Rules of Appeal would have applied if the case been removed from Small Claims Court to Justice's Court and then appealed to the District Court. Kiser v. Kiser, 2015 MT 315, 381 Mont. 368, 360 P.3d 1139.

Appeal From Justice's Court — District Court to Review Brady Claims on Merits or to Order Further Proceedings in Justice's Court: The defendant was convicted of misdemeanor partner or family member assault in Justice's Court and appealed to the District Court. On appeal, the defendant attempted for the first time to introduce text messages between him and the victim that he believed were exculpatory, alleging that he had not introduced them at his trial because he assumed the state was going to. The District Court concluded that its appellate review was limited to the records of the Justice's Court and therefore it could not consider the text messages. On appeal, the Supreme Court disagreed with the District Court, ruling that when a District Court is confronted with possibly exculpatory evidence that was not introduced at trial, the District Court has authority either to consider the merits of the evidence or to remand the matter to the Justice's Court. The Supreme Court then considered the merits of the allegedly exculpatory evidence. The court concluded that the defendant did not establish a prima facie Brady claim because the evidence had not been suppressed by the state and that moreover, the defendant, who was the recipient and the sender of the text messages, was aware of the evidence before trial. The Supreme Court also concluded that given the extent of the inculpatory evidence offered at trial, the introduction of the text messages would not have resulted in the defendant's acquittal. St. v. Ellison, 2012 MT 50, 364 Mont. 276, 272 P.3d 646.

No Constitutional Prohibition Against Justices' Courts of Record: Hernandez asserted that 3-10-101, allowing the creation of Justices' Courts of Record, violated the provisions of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., by abolishing constitutionally created Justices' Courts. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under 3-10-101, counties are given the option but are not required to create Justices' Courts of Record, so constitutionally created Justices' Courts are not abolished. Article VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., allows the Legislature to create inferior courts by law, and the Legislature properly exercised that authority in adopting 3-10-101 and provided operating rules for Justices' Courts of Record in 3-10-115 to govern operation of the inferior courts of record. Nothing in the constitutional provision prohibits the creation of Justices' Courts of Record, and 3-10-101 is not unconstitutional. Hernandez v. Yellowstone County Comm'rs, 2008 MT 251, 345 M 1, 189 P3d 638 (2008).

Standard of Appellate Review of District Court: Acting within its appellate capacity, a District Court is not in a position to make findings of fact or discretionary trial court rulings, but rather is confined to review of the record and questions of law. The court reviews any factual findings under the clearly erroneous standard, any discretionary rulings for abuse of discretion, and both legal conclusions and mixed questions of law and fact under the de novo standard. A District Court's review of an appeal from a lower court of record is no broader than the Supreme Court's review of a lower court judgment. In the case at bar, the judgment rendered by a Justice's Court was an appealable judgment as contemplated by this section, and the District Court thus had jurisdiction over the appeal. Likewise, the District Court's judgment constituted a final determination of the issues presented on appeal, and the Supreme Court therefore had jurisdiction pursuant to former Rule 1, M.R.App.P. (now superseded). Stanley v. Lemire, 2006 MT 304, 334 M 489, 148 P3d 643 (2006).

Written Transcript of Electronically Recorded Proceedings in Courts of Record of Limited Jurisdiction Not Required on Appeal — Format of Electronically Recorded Proceedings: A written transcript of electronically recorded proceedings in courts of record of limited jurisdiction is no longer required. The Supreme Court designated acceptable formats for filing the electronically

Failure to File Brief Within Fifteen Days of Municipal Court Judgment — Summary Judgment Not Abuse of Discretion: Frazier was convicted of speeding in Justice's Court. Frazier filed a timely appeal to District Court, but failed to file a brief within 15 days after the record was filed with the District Court, as required by Rule 14(a), U.M.C.R.App. (Title 25, ch. 30, part 2400). The District Court summarily dismissed the appeal, and Frazier appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed, noting that under 25-33-304, the District Court has discretion to order an appeal to be dismissed for failure to prosecute an appeal or for unnecessary delay in bringing an appeal to a hearing. The Supreme Court declined to reverse the District Court for insisting that parties comply with statutory directives and rules of civil procedure, holding that it was not an abuse of discretion for the District Court to dismiss Frazier's appeal for failure to file a timely brief. St. v. Frazier, 2005 MT 99, 326 M 524, 111 P3d 215 (2005).

Substitute Justice of the Peace Not Duly Authorized or Properly Called — Search Warrants Invalid: A Justice of the Peace submitted a written waiver request form for proposing substitute Justices of the Peace but failed to create a list of proposed substitutes as required in 3-10-231. One of the designated substitutes took the judicial oath of office, but not in the form required by Art. III, sec. 3, Mont. Const. The substitute justice was called by a Deputy Sheriff, who requested warrants allowing a search of defendant's property. The warrants were issued and executed, but the warrants were challenged by defendants on the grounds that the warrants were not issued by a properly authorized substitute justice. The state argued that the authorization and call-in of the substitute justice were in substantial compliance with the law and that any technical errors in the procedures should not operate to suppress evidence. Applying Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319 (1994), the Supreme Court held that substantial compliance was insufficient. The procedure used in authorizing the substitute justice with a variant form of the constitutional oath of office was a major discrepancy in the authorization process, and the procedure of providing law enforcement with a menu of substitutes from which to choose clearly violated Potter. The substitute Justice of the Peace was not duly authorized, thus the warrants issued by the substitute were void ab initio. St. v. Supreme Court Orders: "The following Montana Supreme Court order, signed by all seven justices, was issued on June 10[, 2003]:

IN THE MATTER OF ESTABLISHING GREATER TRAINING REQUIREMENTS FOR MUNICIPAL COURT JUDGES AND FOR JUSTICES OF THE PEACE OF JUSTICE'S COURTS ESTABLISHED AS COURTS OF RECORD

Pursuant to Sec. 3, Ch. 389, L. 2003, the 2003 Montana Legislature, among other things, adopted certain amendments to § 3-6-202, MCA. Specifically, § 3-6-202, MCA, now provides in pertinent part:

(4) A municipal court judge shall complete a minimum of 15 hours of continuing judicial education requirements each year or a greater number established by the supreme court. Attendance at the two annual training sessions under 3-10-203 may fulfill the requirement provided for in this subsection.

(5) Completion of a course approved for continuing judicial or legal education hours applies to the judicial education requirements under subsection (4).

Similarly, Sec. 6, Ch. 389, L. 2003, amended § 3-10-203, MCA by providing, in pertinent part:

(4) A justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record, provided for in 3-10-101, must meet the requirements provided for in [section 10].

In that regard, Sec. 10, Ch. 389, L. 2003, provides in pertinent part:

(2) A justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record, provided for in 3-10-101, shall complete a minimum of 15 hours of continuing judicial education requirements each year or a greater number established by the supreme court. Attendance at the two annual training sessions under 3-10-203 may fulfill the requirement provided for in this subsection.

(3) completion of a course approved for continuing judicial or legal education hours applies to the judicial education requirements under subsection (2).

Aside from whatever other judicial or legal education courses a municipal court judge or a justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record may choose to complete, this Court has determined that attendance of such judges and justices at the two mandatory annual training sessions prescribed by § 3-10-203, MCA, must also be required.

These two mandatory annual training sessions provide judicial education directed specifically at Montana statutory and jurisprudential law and provide information relating to the efficient operation and standards of justice and judicial services expected from all courts of limited jurisdiction in Montana. Moreover, these two annual training sessions prepare the judges and justices of the courts of limited jurisdiction for the certification test which is prerequisite to the Commission on Courts of Limited Jurisdiction issuing certificates of completion of a course of education and training prescribed by § 3-1-1502 and 1503, MCA.

Therefore, this Court has determined that municipal court judges and justices of the peace for justice's courts established as courts of record are required to complete a greater number of hours of judicial education than the minimum hours specified in Secs. 3 and 10, Ch. 389, L. 2003. Accordingly,

IT IS ORDERED that pursuant to Article VII, Section 2(2) of the Constitution of Montana, Sec. 3, Ch. 389, L. 2003 and § 3-6-202(4) and (5), MCA, all municipal court judges shall attend the two mandatory annual training sessions provided for in § 3-10-203, MCA, in addition to whatever other courses of continuing judicial or legal education they may choose to complete.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that pursuant to Article VII, Section 2(2) of the Constitution of Montana, Sec. 10, Ch. 389, L. 2003, and § 3-10-203(4), MCA, all justices of the peace for justice's courts established as courts of record shall attend the two mandatory annual training sessions provided for in § 3-10-203, MCA, in addition to whatever other courses of continuing judicial or legal education they may choose to complete.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this order shall be effective July 1, 2003."

1987 Amendment: At beginning of (1) substituted "Under the supervision of the supreme court, a course of study must be presented" for "The university of Montana law school, under the supervision of the supreme court, shall present a course".

Transition: Section 16, Ch. 528, L. 1979, provided: "A judicial officer, as defined in 1-1-202, who is occupying his judicial office on the effective date of this act shall continue to be paid expenses on the same basis as he is receiving them on the effective date of this act until the expiration of his term of office. All judicial officers who take office or begin a new term of office after the effective date of this act shall receive expenses as provided in this act."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 557 in (4) after "justice's" deleted "court established as a". Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 114 in (1) deleted reference to subsection (1) of 7-4-2504. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Chapter 389 in (1) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsections (2) through (4)"; inserted (4) setting the salary of the justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Grandfather Clause: Section 13, Ch. 389, L. 2003, provided: "An incumbent justice of the peace on [the effective date of this act] [effective July, 1, 2003], in a county in which a justice's court established as a court of record is established, who meets the minimum education requirements for a justice of the peace is eligible to run for the justice of the peace for a justice's court established as a court of record in that county at the next and subsequent elections held for the justice of the peace for the justice's court established as a court of record unless the justice of the peace has a break in service."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 507 in (1) in first sentence after "resolution and" deleted "may, for all or the remainder of each fiscal year" and at end after "7-4-2504(1)" deleted "set their salaries at the prior fiscal year level if that does not result in a reduction in salary" and deleted former second sentence that read: "Salaries must meet the minimum requirements established by this section"; deleted former (2) and (3) that read: "(2) If the salary of the justice of the peace was determined on a fee basis for the years 1971 and 1972, he shall receive a monthly salary of not less than one-eighteenth of the total fees, civil and criminal, collected by the justice or his predecessor in office during the 2 years 1971 and 1972.

(3) If the salary of the justice of the peace was determined on a nonfee basis for the years 1971 and 1972, the justice shall be paid not less than the highest salary earned by the justice or his predecessor for the years 1971 and 1972"; at end of (2) after "county" deleted "except as provided for in subsections (1) and (5)"; in (3) inserted second sentence prohibiting reduction of justice's salary during term of office; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 2001.

1986 Amendment: In first sentence of (1) following "resolution", inserted remainder of sentence relating to setting salaries at the prior fiscal year level; and at end of (4) inserted reference to subsection (1).

Case Notes

Apparent Intent of Legislature to Improve Salaries: Court applied ordinary rules of grammar to the provisions of this section relating to nonfee Justices of the Peace that raised minimum salaries to level comparable to other county elected officials by combining 1971 and 1972 rates so as to insure significant improvement of the Justice's Court system as contemplated by the 1972 Montana Constitution. Attorney General's Opinions

Justice of the Peace Not Precluded From Acting as City Judge During Justice Court Office Hours: The office hours of a Justice Court are set by the County Commissioners, and during those hours, the court is always open for the transaction of business, such as the filing of court documents with the Clerk of Court. However, a Justice of the Peace is not statutorily required to be present in Justice Court during every hour the Justice Court is open for business. Thus, a Justice of the Peace is not precluded from acting as a city judge during office hours of the Justice Court. 43 A.G. Op. 49 (1989), overruling 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983), to the extent that it concludes that the Board of County Commissioners sets the hours of the Justice of the Peace.

Justice's Court to Be Open on All Working Days — Limited Office Hours of Justice Permitted: A Justice's Court is always open for the transaction of business except on legal holidays and nonjudicial days. However, the office hours that must be kept by a Justice of the Peace each day are set by the County Commissioners and need not include hours on every day that the Justice's Court is open for the transaction of business. 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983).

Justice of the Peace — Deduction From Full-Time Status: Absent a voluntary waiver by the incumbent, the proper time at which to reduce a full-time Justice of the Peace position to a part-time position is before the next election. 38 A.G. Op. 90 (1980).

Case Notes

Agreement by County Commission to Pay Justice Court Expenses — Failure to Object — Appeal Precluded: A Justice of the Peace requested approval of funds from the County Commission for employment of a temporary clerical assistant. The County Commission initially refused to approve the funds. The claim was then submitted for certification pursuant to Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975), and was subsequently certified as an actual and necessary expense incurred in the performance of actual duties of the Justice Court. When the bill was still not paid, the Justice of the Peace filed a petition for a contempt order against the County Commissioners for failure to pay the certified claim. The order was amended to include attorney fees. The County Commission then agreed to pay the claim and did not oppose the motion to amend, nor did it file a responsive brief. However, it later alleged error. The Supreme Court held that the County Commission waived the right to appeal by agreeing to pay the claim and then failing to object to the District Court order to pay the claim and taking no further action to challenge the claim. In re Certain Justice Court Expenses, 264 M 510, 872 P2d 795, 51 St. Rep. 372 (1994).

Claim of Justice's Court for Unbudgeted Actual and Necessary Expenses: When Justice of Peace filed claim to pay necessary extra clerical assistance, County Commissioners did not have discretion to disallow claim under section 16-1906, R.C.M. 1947 (renumbered 7-6-2323 through 7-6-2325, 7-6-2327, and 7-6-2328, all sections now repealed), as section 93-412, R.C.M. 1947 (now 3-10-103 and 3-10-209), prevailed. When a specific statute conflicts with a general statute, the specific controls over the general to the extent of any repugnancy. State ex rel. Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975). (Annotator's Comment: In this case Supreme Court exercised supervisory powers to provide a procedure to prevent future actual or potential conflict between the Board of County Commissioners and Justice's Courts.)

Mandamus — Payment of Clerical Expenses: County Commissioners can be compelled to pay for necessary clerical expenses under this section and 3-10-103 when necessity is shown for the performance of duties. State ex rel. Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975).

Attorney General's Opinions

Duty of Boards of County Commissioners to Accept and Pay Claims for Actual and Necessary Clerical Expenses of Justice's Court: Under 3-10-103, a duty is created on the part of Boards of County Commissioners to accept and pay claims for actual and necessary clerical expenses associated with the operation of Justices' Courts. If disputes arise regarding payment of those expenses, the procedural rule in State ex rel. Browman v. Wood, 168 M 341, 543 P2d 184 (1975), applies. Although Boards may have some budgetary discretion when considering payment of actual and necessary court expenses, the statutes governing the county budgeting process do not preclude application of the Browman rule when disputes arise. 49 A.G. Op. 19 (2002).

2013 Amendment: Chapter 248 in (1) before "3-1-803" inserted "provided for in" and after "shall" deleted "either"; in (1)(b) substituted current language regarding request to district court judge for "call a justice from a neighboring county to preside"; in (2)(a)(i) in first sentence after "absence" deleted "when another justice or city judge is not available" and inserted second sentence regarding occupation of listed persons; in (3) in first sentence near beginning after "absent" inserted "or otherwise unable to act", after "another justice" deleted "if there is one readily available", after "hold court for the" deleted "absent", and at end substituted "justice is able to act" for "absent justice's return"; in (4) in second sentence at end substituted "provided in subsection (3)" for "if the justice were sick or absent"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 22, 2013.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 150 in (1) substituted "3-1-803 and 3-1-805" for "subdivision 1, 2, or 3" and at end, after "preside", deleted "in his behalf"; in (2)(a) inserted introductory clause relating to requirements to qualify substitute Justice of the Peace; at end of (2)(a)(i), after second sentence, deleted "The county commissioners shall administer the oath of office to each"; inserted (2)(a)(ii) requiring sitting Justice of the Peace to obtain waiver of training for substitutes; in (2)(a)(iii), after "list", inserted "provided for in subsection (2)(a)(i), shall subscribe to the written oath of office" and inserted second sentence allowing oath to be subscribed before member of Board of County Commissioners or any other authorized officer; inserted (2)(b) requiring list, oath, and approval and waiver to be filed with County Clerk; inserted (2)(c) allowing County Clerk to provide list of substitutes to local law enforcement; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 150, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, in Potter v. District Court, 266 Mont. 384 (1994), the Montana Supreme Court ordered the suppression of evidence obtained under search warrants issued by an acting Justice of the Peace who had not been properly qualified; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court found that compliance with the statutory scheme for qualifying substitutes for Justices of the Peace is mandatory and that failure to follow the statutory requirements may result in an unqualified substitute attempting to act in a judicial capacity without authority; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that clarification of the statutory scheme for qualifying substitutes for Justices of the Peace may avoid future problems in which an unqualified substitute attempts to act in a judicial capacity and may avoid the consequences associated with such a situation.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to clarify the statutory scheme for qualifying substitutes for Justices of the Peace."

1991 Amendment: In (2) inserted second sentence regarding qualifications of persons listed, in third sentence, after "list", deleted "within the ensuing 30 days or", after "soon" deleted "thereafter", and after "possible" inserted "after the person has received a waiver of training from the supreme court". Amendment effective April 2, 1991.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) requiring Justice of the Peace to provide a list of persons qualified to hold court in his place during a temporary absence and requiring them to take an oath; in (3) substituted text authorizing Justice of the Peace or County Commissioners to call in a substitute for the Justice if he is sick, disabled, or absent for former text that read: "Whenever a justice is sick, disabled, or absent and the county commissioners find that there is a delay in the proper administration of justice or the county attorney makes a written request, another justice, if there is one readily available, or a city judge or some other qualified person shall be called in to hold court for the absent justice until his return"; and in (4) in last sentence, after "county", substituted "the justice of the peace may designate another person" for "the county commissioners shall handle the situation".

Case Notes

Authority of Properly Appointed Substitute Justice of the Peace to Issue Search Warrant: A search warrant was issued by a substitute Justice of the Peace, and Beaupre contended that the fruits of the search should be suppressed because no attempt was made to call in another Justice of the Peace or City Judge and because the substitute was not properly appointed. The Supreme Court dismissed the claims. The regular Justice of the Peace had letters from judges in nearby cities indicating that they were not available should the Justice of the Peace be absent, and the letters were updated every 6 months in accordance with the Attorney General's recommendations in 48 A.G. Op. 11 (2000). Further, the substitute was timely designated during the second term of the regular Justice of the Peace, and incorrect wording on the waiver of training form was inconsequential and did not affect the authority of the substitute to act. St. v. Beaupre, 2004 MT 300, 323 M 413, 102 P3d 504 (2004). See also Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319 (1994), and St. v. Vickers, 1998 MT 201, 290 M 356, 964 P2d 756 (1998).

Substitute Justice of the Peace Not Duly Authorized or Properly Called — Search Warrants Invalid: A Justice of the Peace submitted a written waiver request form for proposing substitute Justices of the Peace but failed to create a list of proposed substitutes as required in this section. One of the designated substitutes took the judicial oath of office, but not in the form required by Art. III, sec. 3, Mont. Const. The substitute justice was called by a Deputy Sheriff, who requested warrants allowing a search of defendant's property. The warrants were issued and executed, but the warrants were challenged by defendants on the grounds that the warrants were not issued by a properly authorized substitute justice. The state argued that the authorization and call-in of the substitute justice were in substantial compliance with the law and that any technical errors in the procedures should not operate to suppress evidence. Applying Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319 (1994), the Supreme Court held that substantial compliance was insufficient. The procedure used in authorizing the substitute justice with a variant form of the constitutional oath of office was a major discrepancy in the authorization process, and the procedure of providing law enforcement with a menu of substitutes from which to choose clearly violated Potter. The substitute Justice of the Peace was not duly authorized, thus the warrants issued by the substitute were void ab initio. St. v. Vickers, 1998 MT 201, 290 M 356, 964 P2d 756, 55 St. Rep. 859 (1998), distinguishing U.S. v. Leon, 468 US 897, 82 L Ed 2d 677, 104 S Ct 3405 (1984), and followed in Blodgett v. Justice's Court, 2012 MT 134, 365 Mont. 290, 280 P.3d 904.

Legal Qualifications of Justice of the Peace: According to applicable statutes and the rules of the Commission on Courts of Limited Jurisdiction, before a person is legally qualified to serve as a substitute Justice of the Peace, the following requirements must be met: (1) within 30 days of taking office, the elected or appointed Justice of the Peace must create a list of persons who are qualified to act in the sitting judge's absence when no other Justice or City Court Judge is available; (2) the sitting Justice of the Peace must request and obtain from the Commission a waiver of training for the substitute judge and show that the substitute judge is of good moral character and has good community support, a sense of community standards, and a basic knowledge of court procedure; and (3) the substitute judge must be sworn in by the County Commissioners. (See 1997 amendment.) A search warrant issued by a substitute judge in a case in which these qualifications were not met was held to be void ab initio because the statutory procedures to make him a judge and to vest him with the power to perform judicial functions had not been followed. Evidence seized pursuant to the warrant was suppressed. Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319, 51 St. Rep. 853 (1994).

Sitting Judge to Be Called Prior to Calling of Substitute Judge: In addition to the legal qualifications of a substitute judge, a sitting Justice of the Peace must first attempt to call in another Justice of the Peace, if there is one readily available, or a City Court Judge before resorting to calling in a qualified substitute judge from the list of substitute judges. A search warrant issued by a substitute judge in a case in which this procedure was not followed was held to be void ab initio because the statutory procedures to make him a judge and to vest him with the power to perform judicial functions had not been followed. Evidence seized pursuant to the warrant was suppressed. Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319, 51 St. Rep. 853 (1994).

Attorney General's Opinions

When Substitute Justice of the Peace May Be Called — Reliance on Letters of Unavailability: How a substitute Justice of the Peace is selected depends on the reasons for the absence of the sitting Justice of the Peace. If the sitting Justice of the Peace is disqualified pursuant to 3-1-803 or 3-1-805, only another Justice of the Peace may be called in and the substitute may not be a person qualified pursuant to subsection (2) of this section. If the sitting Justice of the Peace is sick, disabled, or absent, another Justice of the Peace or City Judge may be called in if available or a person may be called in who is qualified pursuant to subsection (2) of this section if another Justice of the Peace or City Judge is not readily available. If the sitting Justice of the Peace is on vacation or in training, the substitute is to be chosen in the same manner as if the sitting Justice of the Peace is sick, disabled, or absent, as long as there is not another Justice of the Peace from the county of the sitting Justice of the Peace. In determining who is available to act as a substitute, the sitting Justice of the Peace may rely on letters from other Justices of the Peace and City Judges that they are unavailable. However, after a reasonable time, the sitting Justice of the Peace should contact those who wrote the letters to determine if they are still unavailable. 48 A.G. Op. 11 (2000). See also 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983), and Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319 (1994).

County Residency Not Required of Acting Justice of the Peace: An acting Justice of the Peace who is called to act pursuant to this section and who is otherwise qualified to serve under 3-10-202 need not be a resident of the county where the court sits. 43 A.G. Op. 51 (1990).

Authority to Select Substitute Justice of the Peace — Substitution Choices: A Justice of the Peace has the primary authority to select his substitute during temporary absences. In the event the justice is sick, disabled, or absent and is unable to call in a substitute, one may be called in by the County Commissioners. The Justice of the Peace or the County Commissioners must look to the following substitution choices: (1) another justice, if available; (2) a city judge; or (3) a qualified person from the list provided for in subsection (2) of this section. In the event the Justice of the Peace is on vacation or attending a training session, if there is no other justice in the county, the Justice of the Peace must look to the same substitution choices. 43 A.G. Op. 49 (1989).

Qualifications for List of Temporary Substitute Justices: In order to be eligible for the list of persons provided by a Justice of the Peace as temporary substitute justices, persons must meet the qualifications set forth in 3-10-202(2) and the residency requirements of 3-10-204. 42 A.G. Op. 4 (1987).

No Requirement of Specific Length of Time of Absence of Justice Prior to Appointment of Substitute: There is no specific length of time for which a regular Justice of the Peace must be absent before the County Commissioners can appoint an acting Justice of the Peace. (See 1985 amendment.) 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983).

Acting Justice Not to Be Appointed in Advance: The Board of County Commissioners may not appoint an acting Justice of the Peace, in advance, to act whenever a Justice is sick, disabled, or absent. (See 1985 amendment.) 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983).

"Other Qualified Person" Not to Replace Disqualified Justice: Prior to the 1985 amendment, in a county where there was only one Justice of the Peace and the Justice was disqualified under 3-10-231(1), a Justice from a neighboring county had to be called in as a replacement. Section 3-10-231 did not authorize calling in "some other qualified person" in this situation. 40 A.G. Op. 26 (1983).

Part 3
Jurisdiction of Justices' Courts

Part Case Notes

Jurisdiction Required Before Judgment Effective: It is fundamental that a court rendering a decision in a particular case have jurisdiction over the parties. When the judgment roll on its face shows that the court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment, its pronouncement is in fact no judgment and cannot be enforced. No right can be derived from it. All proceedings founded upon it are invalid and ineffective for any purpose. Ciotti v. Hoover, 237 M 462, 774 P2d 406, 46 St. Rep. 969 (1989), following Apple v. Case Notes

Jurisdiction of Justice's Court in Landlord-Tenant Action — Failure to Timely Assert Quiet Title Action Constituting Waiver of Jurisdictional Claim: Plaintiffs filed an action in Justice's Court to enforce a rental contract that defendant allegedly violated. Both parties initially argued that the case was governed by landlord-tenant law, but defendant subsequently argued in District Court that the case was actually an action to quiet title in a life estate granted to defendant by the contract and that because Justice's Courts may not hear actions concerning title to real property, the Justice's Court did not have subject matter jurisdiction to hear the case. The District Court concluded that the Justice's Court had jurisdiction, and on appeal, the Supreme Court concurred. Plaintiffs' pleadings established that the action was based on landlord-tenant law, and the Justice's Court therefore had subject matter jurisdiction at the onset. If defendant had raised the quiet title action in a proper and timely manner, the Justice's Court could have been divested of jurisdiction, but because defendant did not raise the title question in answer to the pleadings or in a timely amended answer, the Supreme Court held that the question was waived, and the District Court was affirmed. Stanley v. Lemire, 2006 MT 304, 334 M 489, 148 P3d 643 (2006).

Justice's Court Action Complete — Award of Attorney Fees Pursuant to District Court Appeal: Bugger sued McGough and Johnson in Justice's Court in a landlord tenant action. The District Court dismissed Johnson from the action, and McGough was granted summary judgment. Bugger then filed an amended complaint in District Court. The District Court awarded Johnson $20,479.71 in attorney fees. Bugger appealed on grounds that the award exceeded the jurisdictional limit of $7,000 in this section for Justice's Court claims (see 2011 amendment). The Supreme Court disagreed. Once the Justice's Court ruled, Bugger's Justice's Court action was ended, and the District Court action was a new action, not an appeal. The District Court acted within its original jurisdictional capacity under 3-5-302, and the limit in this section did not apply. The award was affirmed. Bugger v. McGough, 2006 MT 248, 334 M 77, 144 P3d 802 (2006).

Remedy for Criminal Prosecution of Public Nuisance: Panasuk, convicted in City Court of misdemeanor criminal public nuisance charges under 45-8-111, contended that because former Rule 4(B), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), 25-31-102, and this section preclude a nonrecord court from hearing actions involving the title to or possession of real property, jurisdiction for prosecution of the public nuisance charge must lie with the District Court. He cited 45-8-112 as authority that any action to abate a nuisance must be brought in the name of the state and that because abatement is a form of injunctive relief, the District Court has exclusive jurisdiction. He also argued that 27-30-202 provides the exclusive civil and criminal remedies for public nuisance. His claims were dismissed for the following reasons: (1) charges filed under 45-8-111 were criminal rather than related to a civil action involving title to or possession of real property, which is regulated by the sections cited by Panasuk; (2) the remedy created by 27-30-202 has been supplemented by subsequent legislative action regarding a City Court's jurisdiction over misdemeanors and by the enactment of 46-17-101, which requires that all prosecutions brought in City Court be commenced by a sworn complaint; and (3) because Panasuk's interpretation would result in a direct contradiction between 27-30-202 and statutes subsequently enacted, the argument that 27-30-202 provides the exclusive remedies for public nuisance is erroneous. Billings v. Panasuk, 253 M 403, 833 P2d 1050, 49 St. Rep. 499 (1992).

Prosecutor's Quasi-Judicial Immunity From Civil Action: Plaintiff's civil action against a County Attorney, based upon alleged unlawful arrest by certain policemen and challenging the legality of the criminal prosecution against him, must be dismissed because the County Attorney enjoys absolute immunity for prosecutorial actions done in a quasi-judicial capacity. Hall v. Lympus, 478 F. Supp. 644, 36 St. Rep. 1692 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Jurisdictional Amounts: The jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace, in an action for a fine, penalty, or forfeiture, is not dependent upon the amount that the plaintiff might recover but upon the amount that he demands. Reynolds v. Smith, 48 M 149, 135 P 1190 (1913).

Actions Arising on Contract: This section does not clothe Justice's Courts with jurisdiction to entertain an action brought against a Sheriff for damages for nonperformance of an official duty and to recover a penalty imposed for its nonperformance, such an action not being one arising on contract. Oppenheimer v. Regan, 32 M 110, 79 P 695 (1905).

Attorney General's Opinions

Validity of Ordinance Allowing Escalating Penalty for Failure to Obtain Business License: A Lewistown city ordinance that allows an escalating monthly penalty for failure to obtain a local business license is valid despite Missoula v. Shea, 202 M 286, 661 P2d 410, 40 St. Rep. 91 (1983). The Shea case determined that escalating penalties for parking violations were criminal penalties and violative of Art. II, sec. 28, Mont. Const. In analyzing the Lewistown ordinance, the Attorney General observed that the crucial issue is whether the penalty imposed is civil or criminal in nature. Applying the five factors outlined in Brown v. Multnomah County District Court, 570 P2d 52 (Ore. 1977), he concluded that the instant ordinance imposed civil penalties and that the ordinance was valid. 40 A.G. Op. 75 (1984).

Case Notes

Original Court Jurisdiction Over Partner or Family Member Assault Charges, Misdemeanor or Felony: District Courts have original jurisdiction over felony partner or family member assault charges. District Courts and Justices' Courts have concurrent jurisdiction over misdemeanor partner or family member assault charges. St. v. Martz, 2008 MT 382, 347 M 47, 196 P3d 1239 (2008).

Concurrent Justice's Court and District Court Jurisdiction Over Misdemeanor Family Assault No Right to Trial De Novo From Court of Record: Brockway was charged with two misdemeanor and two felony counts of family member assault. Brockway moved to sever the misdemeanor counts and have them tried first in Justice's Court so that he would have the opportunity to appeal to District Court. The District Court concluded that it lacked jurisdiction to try the misdemeanor charges, so the misdemeanor charges were severed and remanded for trial in Justice's Court. The state appealed. The Supreme Court held that the District Court's conclusion that it did not have jurisdiction to try the misdemeanors was erroneous. Under this section, District Courts have concurrent jurisdiction with Justices' Courts over misdemeanor charges of partner or family member assault. Additionally, under 46-17-311, there is no right to a trial de novo from District Court or from a Justice's Court that is a court of record, so Brockway was entitled to one jury trial in a court of record—in this case, the District Court—and if convicted, Brockway could then appeal to the Supreme Court. The case was remanded for trial in District Court on all charges. St. v. Brockway, 2005 MT 179, 328 M 5, 116 P3d 788 (2005).

Failure to Show That Justice's Court Exceeded Its Jurisdiction in Holding Defendant in Contempt in DUI Case — Writ of Review Properly Denied: Schaefer was charged in Justice's Court with repeat misdemeanor DUI per se and sentenced to a chemical dependency course, but he did not complete all conditions of the course, so the court held him in contempt. Schaefer then filed a writ of review in District Court, but the writ was dismissed because the court concluded that a petition for postconviction relief provided Schaefer with a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy, so the court lacked jurisdiction. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed denial of the writ, but not because a petition for postconviction relief was more appropriate, but rather because the Justice's Court properly exercised its jurisdiction and because the conflicting evidence issue of aftercare remained in the exclusive jurisdiction of the Justice's Court. Although the District Court incorrectly found that a writ of review was not appropriate, denial of the petition was nevertheless affirmed because Schaefer failed to satisfy the first prong of the test in 27-25-102 by showing that the Justice's Court exceeded its jurisdiction by holding him in contempt. Schaefer v. Egeland, 2004 MT 199, 322 M 274, 95 P3d 724 (2004).

Jurisdiction Over Municipal Court Protection Order: The Missoula County District Court issued a permanent injunction, based on a stalking violation of 45-5-220, prohibiting Gillispie from contacting his former wife "by a third person, except by telephone or correspondence through her attorney of record". Gillispie admitted contacting his former wife's mother in Missoula and was charged with and convicted in Municipal Court of an order of protection violation pursuant to 45-5-626. On appeal, Gillispie contended that the Municipal Court did not have jurisdiction over the offense. A Municipal Court has geographic jurisdiction over misdemeanors coextensive with the jurisdiction of Justices' Courts located in the same county. Although neither Gillispie nor the former wife was present in Missoula County at the time of the prohibited phone call, the former wife's mother received the call in Missoula County. Thus, the Municipal Court was vested with jurisdiction over the misdemeanor order of protection violation when the necessary result of Gillispie's third-party contact by telephone was committed within Missoula County. Missoula v. Gillispie, 1999 MT 268, 296 M 444, 989 P2d 401, 56 St. Rep. 1085 (1999).

Expungement of Two of Three Prior DUI and BAC Convictions — Lack of District Court Jurisdiction — Felony Charge Dismissed: Sidmore was arrested for DUI in March 1996. His driving record revealed that he had a 1988 Idaho DUI conviction, a 1994 Montana DUI conviction, and a 1990 Montana BAC conviction. Pursuant to 61-8-714, Sidmore was charged with felony DUI, fourth offense. Sidmore agreed that under 61-8-714, both BAC and DUI convictions can be counted to determine the total number of convictions that a defendant has received. However, under the 1989 version of 61-8-722, Sidmore did not receive a subsequent BAC conviction within the 5-year period following the 1990 BAC conviction nor did the 1994 DUI conviction prevent expungement of the 1990 BAC conviction, so the 1990 BAC conviction was expunged from the record. Further, under the 1987 version of 61-8-714, Sidmore did not receive a subsequent DUI conviction within the 5-year period following the 1988 Idaho DUI conviction nor did the 1990 BAC conviction prevent expungement of the 1988 Idaho DUI conviction, so the 1988 Idaho DUI conviction was also expunged from the record, making the 1994 DUI conviction the only prior conviction that could be counted to support the felony DUI charge. Thus, under this section, the Justice's Court retained jurisdiction of the misdemeanor 1996 offense and the District Court erred in denying Sidmore's motion to dismiss the felony DUI charge for lack of jurisdiction. St. v. Sidmore, 286 M 218, 951 P2d 558, 54 St. Rep. 1381 (1997).

Fish and Game Restitution Not Within Jurisdiction of Justice Court: The Justice Court imposed a $515 fine, suspended fishing privileges, and ordered restitution in an amount necessary to mitigate the effects of the violation to be paid by a plaintiff who had intentionally introduced fish into Lake Mary Ronan. On appeal, the Supreme Court vacated the conviction and sentence, holding that the potentially limitless fine that could be imposed to mitigate the effects of a violation of the fish and game statute is inconsistent with the statute that grants Justices' Courts jurisdiction over violations of fish and game statutes that are punishable by a fine not exceeding $1,000. (See 1993 amendment.) Moseley v. Lake County Justice Court, 256 M 206, 845 P2d 732, 50 St. Rep. 28 (1993).

Misdemeanor Criminal Contempt — Jurisdiction Properly Exercised — Denial of Application for Writ of Certiorari Proper: The District Court properly denied defendant's application for a Writ of Certiorari to review his Justice's Court criminal contempt conviction. The Justice's Court clearly had jurisdiction under this section of a misdemeanor criminal contempt action. Thus, one of the three indispensable requisites to the granting of a Writ, that an inferior board has exceeded its jurisdiction, is absent. St. v. McAllister, 218 M 196, 708 P2d 239, 42 St. Rep. 1515 (1985).

Justice's Court — No Authority to Vacate Conviction and Order Alteration of Driver's Civil Records: A Justice's Court does not have authority to vacate a conviction or to direct alteration of the records of the Division of Motor Vehicles. Therefore, a Justice's Court could not order the Division to strike a prior DUI conviction and not consider it in revoking the driver's license on a second conviction. The District Court properly granted the Division's motion to quash a Writ of Mandate issued by the District Court staying the actions of the Division. Lancaster v. Dept. of Justice, 218 M 97, 706 P2d 126, 42 St. Rep. 1425 (1985).

Criminal Contempt and Contempt of Court Distinguished — District Court Without Jurisdiction to Try Criminal Contempt: Criminal contempt, a misdemeanor crime defined in 45-7-309, is an offense against society prosecuted by the state, whereas contempt of court is a judicial power arising out of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., and Title 3 that allows a court to enforce its own judgments and maintain decorum in its proceedings. Thus, while only the District Court could have found the defendant in contempt of court for failure to pay a fine from a criminal proceeding of that court, it lacked jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor criminal contempt action for failure to pay the fine because criminal contempt, like most other misdemeanors, must be brought in Justice's Court. St. v. Abrams, 209 M 508, 680 P2d 585, 41 St. Rep. 871 (1984).

District Court Jurisdiction Over DWI Charge: Jurisdiction of the District Court over criminal matters depends on the maximum sentence that can be imposed for committing the crime. When the maximum sentence increases to give the District Court jurisdiction because of repeated DWI offenses, proof of prior offenses does not become an element that must be proved at trial and can be proved at any time until sentencing. Thus, failure to introduce evidence of prior convictions at trial does not deprive the District Court of jurisdiction. St. v. Campbell, 189 M 107, 615 P2d 190, 37 St. Rep. 1337 (1980).

Jurisdiction Retained: Where District Court's jurisdiction is originally invoked by an information charging a felony, it is not lost by State subsequently reducing the charge to only a lesser included misdemeanor. St. v. Shults, 169 M 33, 544 P2d 817, 33 St. Rep. 20 (1976).

Justices of the Peace — Authority to Issue Search Warrants for Dangerous Drugs: Justices' Courts are constitutionally created, and when the Legislature has had the opportunity to limit their jurisdiction and has not seen fit to do so, a legislative intent to authorize the practice of Justices' Courts issuing search warrants is presumed as a Justice of the Peace meets the standard of "a neutral and detached magistrate" to examine the application for a search warrant and determine whether reasonable cause exists for its issuance. St. v. Snider, 168 M 220, 541 P2d 1204, 32 St. Rep. 1056 (1975).

Driving While Under Influence of Intoxicating Liquor: Since the offense of driving a vehicle on a highway while under the influence of intoxicating liquor is a misdemeanor, it falls within the jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace under this section. Wilson v. Brodie, 148 M 235, 419 P2d 306 (1966).

Maximum Penalties: Prior to a 1985 amendment, a Justice of the Peace had no jurisdiction of a misdemeanor where the offense charged was punishable by a fine exceeding $500 or imprisonment of more than 6 months. State ex rel. Freebourn v. District Court, 105 M 77, 69 P2d 748 (1937).

Petit Larceny: Justices of the Peace have exclusive jurisdiction of petit larceny (no longer an offense in Montana; see, generally, Title 45, ch. 6, part 3). In re Jones, 46 M 122, 126 P 929 (1912).

Cohabitation: The offense of living together in open and notorious cohabitation in a state of fornication (no longer an offense in Montana) was a misdemeanor and fell within the jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace. Hosoda v. Neville, 45 M 310, 123 P 20 (1912).

Venue of Justices: A Justice of the Peace elected in one township was held to have jurisdiction of an offense against local option committed in another township in the same county. St. v. O'Brien, 35 M 482, 90 P 514 (1907).

Constitutional Basis: In 1903, the sections of the statute enumerating the classes of cases of which a Justice of the Peace could take cognizance confined them strictly to the constitutional limitations in the 1889 Constitution. Shea v. Regan, 29 M 308, 74 P 737 (1903).

Attorney General's Opinions

Concurrent Jurisdiction Over Certain Misdemeanors: Misdemeanor prosecutions that are within the concurrent jurisdictions of both a City Court and a Justice's Court may at the election of the prosecuting officer be brought in either court. Prosecution of such offenses must be instituted in the name of the state. 37 A.G. Op. 42 (1977).

Private Citizen Without Power to Prosecute Complaint: Since the term "magistrate" includes Justices of the Peace in section 16-3101, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-15-501, 7-4-2711 through 7-4-2713, and 7-4-2715 through 7-4-2717), the County Attorney is charged with the responsibility of prosecuting complaints in Justices' Courts and a Justice of the Peace cannot allow a private citizen to prosecute a complaint. However, a County Attorney is vested with normal discretion and need not file and prosecute every individual's complaint when there is insufficient evidence to warrant prosecution or when such a prosecution would not be in the interests of justice. 36 A.G. Op. 47 (1975).

District Court Jurisdiction Over Gambling Acts: Pursuant to 46-2-201, District Courts have exclusive jurisdiction over violations of the Montana Card Games Act, the Bingo and Raffles Law, and the sports pools law. 35 A.G. Op. 86 (1974).

Failure to Show That Justice's Court Exceeded Its Jurisdiction in Holding Defendant in Contempt in DUI Case — Writ of Review Properly Denied: Schaefer was charged in Justice's Court with repeat misdemeanor DUI per se and sentenced to a chemical dependency course, but he did not complete all conditions of the course, so the court held him in contempt. Schaefer then filed a writ of review in District Court, but the writ was dismissed because the court concluded that a petition for postconviction relief provided Schaefer with a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy, so the court lacked jurisdiction. Although the District Court incorrectly found that a writ of review was not appropriate, denial of the petition was nevertheless affirmed because Schaefer failed to satisfy the first prong of the test in 27-25-102 by showing that the Justice's Court exceeded its jurisdiction by holding him in contempt. Schaefer v. Egeland, 2004 MT 199, 322 M 274, 95 P3d 724 (2004).

Misdemeanor Contempt Not Enforceable More Than One Year After Sentence Expired: On April 9, 1998, Dexter was sentenced in Justice's Court to 1 year in jail for third offense DUI. The sentence was suspended on condition that Dexter serve 90 days in jail and pay a $770 fine, but Dexter did neither. Sentence revocation proceedings could have been instituted under 46-18-203 during the time of Dexter's sentence, but were not. About 3 years later, Dexter was arrested on an outstanding warrant after the suspended sentence had expired, and the Justice's Court invoked its contempt powers to sentence Dexter to jail time for failing to fulfill the conditions of the suspended sentence. The Justice of the Peace contended that under this section, contempt proceedings could be brought at any time, and the District Court concluded that the Justice's

Court had the authority to enforce compliance with the lawful sentencing order, but on appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Under the penalties in 3-1-519 in effect at the time (repealed in 2001), contempt of court constituted a misdemeanor crime, which was required under 45-1-205(2)(b) to be prosecuted within 1 year of commission. The last day on which Dexter could have committed contempt was April 9, 1999, so prosecution was required to be commenced by April 9, 2000. Because the contempt prosecution did not commence until Dexter was arrested on January 23, 2002, the Justice's Court lacked jurisdiction to hold Dexter in contempt for failure to comply with the terms of a sentence that expired in April 1999. Dexter v. Shields, 2004 MT 159, 322 M 6, 92 P3d 1208 (2004). See also Milanovich v. Milanovich, 200 M 83, 655 P2d 959 (1982).

Appearance of Accused Through Attorney Allowed Unless Personal Appearance Ordered: Section 46-16-120 clearly allows persons charged with misdemeanor offenses to appear through their attorney only, unless the court specifically requires a personal appearance by the accused. In this case, a Justice of the Peace specifically ordered the defendant to "make all court appearances" but did not order the defendant to appear in person. Therefore, an appearance by the defendant's attorney satisfied the statute, and it was error for the defendant to be held in contempt for failure to appear. St. v. Voth, 270 M 349, 892 P2d 537, 52 St. Rep. 225 (1995).

Crime of Criminal Contempt — Section Not a Limitation: The provisions of this section apply only to the judicial contempt power vested in the courts by Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., and Title 3; they do not limit a Justice's Court's power to try and sentence for the misdemeanor crime of criminal contempt found at 45-7-309. St. v. Abrams, 209 M 508, 680 P2d 585, 41 St. Rep. 871 (1984).

Criminal Contempt and Contempt of Court Distinguished — District Court Without Jurisdiction to Try Criminal Contempt: Criminal contempt, a misdemeanor crime defined in 45-7-309, is an offense against society prosecuted by the state, whereas contempt of court is a judicial power arising out of Art. VII, sec. 1, Mont. Const., and Title 3 that allows a court to enforce its own judgments and maintain decorum in its proceedings. Thus, while only the District Court could have found the defendant in contempt of court for failure to pay a fine from a criminal proceeding of that court, it lacked jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor criminal contempt action for failure to pay the fine because criminal contempt, like most other misdemeanors, must be brought in Justice's Court. St. v. Abrams, 209 M 508, 680 P2d 585, 41 St. Rep. 871 (1984).

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 39 in (4)(a) increased amount to general fund from 27.88% to 44.81%; in (4)(d) decreased amount to traffic education account from 33.86% to 16.93%; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1994.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 296 at end of (2) inserted exception clause.

Chapter 667 in (4)(a) increased money to state general fund from 23% to 27.88%; in (4)(b) decreased money to fish and game account from 10% to 9.09%; in (4)(c) decreased money to state highway account from 12.5% to 11.76%; in (4)(d) decreased money to traffic education account from 36% to 33.86%; in (4)(e) decreased money to Department of Livestock account from 0.6% to 0.57%; in (4)(f) decreased money to crime victims compensation account from 16.9% to 15.9%; and in (4)(g) decreased money to Department of Family Services from 1% to 0.94%. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1987 Amendment: Deleted former (2) that read: "(2) He shall also file an itemized statement showing all fees received during the preceding month in his court. The statement shall state that all fees required by law to be paid during the preceding month in connection with matters pending before the court have been paid into the county treasury and listed in the itemized statement and that he has not received or been promised, nor has any one else received or been promised for him, any other moneys, emolument, or thing by virtue of or in connection with his office. The statement shall be subscribed and sworn to by the justice"; and inserted (2) through (4) relating to disposition of fines, penalties, and forfeitures by a Justice's Court, County Treasurer, and the State Treasurer.

Function Transfer: Pursuant to sec. 117, Ch. 609, L. 1987, the Governor by executive order transferred the function and authority contained in this section from the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services to the Department of Family Services.

Constables

3-10-701. Constables to attend court.

Attorney General's Opinions

Mileage Reimbursement for Constables: Parties involved in civil litigation in Justice's Court who desire to have legal process served by a constable should prepay the cost of service based upon the estimated round-trip mileage involved and the mileage reimbursement rate established in 2-18-503. A constable should be reimbursed for travel only upon the amount of miles actually traveled at the legally established rate. Any difference between the amount paid by the parties to litigation for service of process by a constable and the amount that the constable is reimbursed accrues to the benefit of the local governing body providing the service. 42 A.G. Persons Authorized to Serve Summons: This section did not affect section 93-6711, R.C.M. 1947 (pertinent part in 25-31-408, now repealed), authorizing a nonofficial person to serve a Justice's summons. State ex rel. Reagan v. Harrington, 31 M 294, 78 P 484 (1904).

Liability of Justice: An official act of a special officer, for which a Justice of the Peace will be liable, is what is done under color of or by virtue of his office but in excess of his authority. Ramsey v. Burns, 27 M 154, 69 P 711 (1902).

Proof of Service: When service of summons in an action pending in a Justice's Court is made by a person appointed by the Justice, proof of service must be made by affidavit. Layton v. Trapp, 20 M 453, 52 P 208 (1898).

Small Claims Division

Appeal From Small Claims Court to District Court — Municipal Court Appellate Rules Inapplicable: The defendants appealed from a judgment of the Small Claims Court to the District Court, and the District Court dismissed the appeal on the basis that the defendants failed to file their brief within the deadline imposed by Rule 14, U.M.C.R.App. (Title 25, ch. 30). On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, concluding that the Uniform Municipal Court Rules of Appeal are inapplicable to an appeal from Small Claims Court to District Court; rather, the appeal is governed by Title 25, ch. 35, part 8. The Uniform Municipal Court Rules of Appeal would have applied if the case been removed from Small Claims Court to Justice's Court and then appealed to the District Court. Kiser v. Part 1

Creation and Jurisdiction

Part Case Notes

No Error in City Court's Denial of Motion for Continuance After Similar Motions Granted: Over 2 years after charges were filed and after numerous motions of continuance were granted, a trial date was set pursuant to Robertson's motion for continuance to permit him to make travel arrangements after moving to California. Three weeks before trial, Robertson again moved for a continuance on the same grounds, but the City Court declined to grant it, and Robertson was tried in absentia. However, it was Robertson, not the court, who caused the trial to go forward without him. Not only did he have ample time to arrange for an appearance in Montana, but rescheduling trial dates upon motion is within the trial court's discretion and will be affirmed absent a showing that the court abused its discretion by acting arbitrarily without conscientious judgment or exceeding the bounds of reason, resulting in substantial injustice. Missoula v. Robertson, 2000 MT 52, 298 M 419, 998 P2d 144, 57 St. Rep. 250 (2000). See also Campbell v. Canty, 1998 MT 278, 291 M 398, 969 P2d 268 (1998).

City Not Liable for City Judge's Civil Rights Violations — City Judge Acts Under State Authority: Claims of the indigent defendants, who were not effectively informed by a City Judge of their right to appointed counsel, were properly dismissed. Under Montana law, a City Judge's acts and decision in advising defendants of their right were performed under the state's authority rather than the city's authority, thereby precluding imposition of civil rights liability on the city. Further, the indigent defendants did not have standing to seek declaratory and injunctive relief. There are other remedies for indigent defendants in future situations—they can file a complaint with the state body charged with overseeing judicial conduct, they can appeal their convictions to a higher court, and they can sue a judge individually because a judge does not enjoy judicial immunity for unconstitutional behavior when the facts are sufficient to grant declaratory or injunctive relief. Eggar v. Livingston, 40 F3d 312 (9th Cir. 1994).

Jurisdiction Required Before Judgment Effective: It is fundamental that a court rendering a decision in a particular case have jurisdiction over the parties. When the judgment roll on its face shows that the court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment, its pronouncement is in fact no judgment and cannot be enforced. No right can be derived from it. All proceedings founded upon it are invalid and ineffective for any purpose. Ciotti v. Hoover, 237 M 462, 774 P2d 406, 46 St. Rep. 969 (1989), following Apple v. Edwards, 123 M 135, 211 P2d 138 (1949).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 38 inserted (2) regarding city courts of record and their proceedings; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2011.

Saving Clause: Section 7, Ch. 38, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 292 deleted (2) that read: "(2) Police court is hereby renamed city court, and all references to police court or police judges in the Montana Code Annotated shall be considered amended to read city court or city judge"; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: In (1) inserted second sentence requiring the judge to establish regular sessions.

Case Notes

Limited Jurisdiction: Police courts (now city courts), like Justices' Courts, were courts of limited jurisdiction and had only such authority as was expressly conferred upon them. State ex rel. Marquette v. Police Court, 86 M 297, 283 P 430 (1929).

Attorney General's Opinions

Legality of Evening City Court Hours: A City Judge is not prohibited by 3-1-301, 3-1-302, or this section from establishing regular sessions of the court during evening hours as long as regular sessions are not convened on Sundays or other legal holidays and the court is open for business on judicial days. These sections place no limitations on the hours of business. Although 7-4-102 requires that City Court offices be open for business continuously from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. on weekdays, this does not prohibit a City Judge from setting office hours after 5 p.m. on weekdays. As long as the office is open during the required hours for the transaction of business, such as the filing of court documents with the clerk, the City Judge may set additional hours for regular court sessions. 43 A.G. Op. 61 (1990).

3-11-102. Concurrent jurisdiction.

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: In (1), near middle after "misdemeanors", deleted "punishable by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding 6 months or by both fine and imprisonment" and inserted remainder of subsection giving court concurrent jurisdiction over proceedings under chapter 10, part 3, of this title.

Case Notes

Authority of City Court to Try DUI Charge Under State Statute — No Error in District Court Failure to Dismiss: McCarvel was charged in Billings City Court with DUI in violation of 61-8-401. McCarvel moved to dismiss on the grounds that he was charged with a violation of a state statute rather than a city ordinance. The City Court refused to dismiss. McCarvel was convicted by a jury and took a de novo appeal to the District Court. The District Court refused to dismiss and McCarvel pleaded guilty. The Supreme Court held that the Billings City Court had jurisdiction over the DUI offense concurrent with the Justice's Court. Because McCarvel was charged with a violation of a state statute rather than a city ordinance, the language of the city ordinance was immaterial. Billings v. McCarvel, 262 M 96, 863 P2d 441, 50 St. Rep. 1460 (1993).

City Attorney's Authority to Try City Prosecution of Statutory DUI Violation Upheld: McCarvel was charged in Billings City Court with a violation of the state DUI statute. He was convicted by a jury and appealed to District Court in which, after the District Court refused to dismiss, he pleaded guilty. The Supreme Court held that the city attorney could lawfully prosecute a violation of a state statute in City Court because the City Court had concurrent jurisdiction with the Justice's Court and because it was the city attorney's duty to prosecute on behalf of the city offenses heard in that court. Billings v. McCarvel, 262 M 96, 863 P2d 441, 50 St. Rep. 1460 (1993).

City Court Jurisdiction Over Misdemeanor Public Nuisance Charges: Section 46-2-203 provides a City Court with jurisdiction over criminal misdemeanor charges as authorized by this section. A violation of 45-8-111, maintaining a public nuisance, is clearly a misdemeanor; therefore, a City Court has jurisdiction over a criminal prosecution for public nuisance. Billings v. Panasuk, 253 M 403, 833 P2d 1050, 49 St. Rep. 499 (1992).

Power of State to Enact and Courts to Enforce Laws Regulating Motor Vehicles: Appellant, appearing pro se, challenged as unconstitutional laws requiring driver's license, mandatory insurance, and vehicle registration. The Supreme Court held that the issues raised by the appellant were frivolous, unreasonable, and groundless in that the court had previously recognized the state's power to regulate motor vehicles in the interests of public safety at the expense of individual rights. Whitefish v. Hansen, 237 M 105, 771 P2d 976, 46 St. Rep. 657 (1989).

Search Warrants: Police magistrates (now City or Municipal Judges) have never been given authority by the Legislature to issue search warrants, and therefore a search warrant issued by such magistrate must be void. St. v. Tropf, 166 M 79, 530 P2d 1158 (1975), applied, with regard to substitute judges, in Potter v. District Court, 266 M 384, 880 P2d 1319, 51 St. Rep. 853 (1994).

Nature of Departments: Where the District Courts are divided into departments, the court presided over by each of the Judges is the District Court and not a departmental court; neither department is a court of concurrent jurisdiction with the other, and in the absence of rules either Judge has full authority to proceed in any matter properly before the court. State ex rel. P.S.C. v. Great N. Util. Co., 86 M 442, 284 P 772 (1930).

Misdemeanors: A Justice of the Peace had jurisdiction under this section, as it existed prior to 1903 amendment, over misdemeanors committed in a town or city within his township. In re Ryan, 20 M 64, 50 P 129 (1897).

Attorney General's Opinions

City Court Jurisdiction of Third Offense DUI: Prior to 1987, a city court had jurisdiction of a third offense DUI only if that offense was adopted as a city ordinance and prosecuted as such by the city attorney. The 1987 amendment to 3-11-102 enabled third offense DUI to be prosecuted in city court as a violation of state law as well. 42 A.G. Op. 34 (1987).

Jurisdiction Over DUIs: A City Court may issue an arrest warrant in the name of the state of Montana when a violation of 61-8-401 is charged. 41 A.G. Op. 95 (1986).

Responsibility to Prosecute Misdemeanors in City Court: The City Attorney has primary responsibility to prosecute in City Court offenses committed in the city limits and charged as violations of state law. 37 A.G. Op. 62 (1977).

Concurrent Jurisdiction Over Certain Misdemeanors: Misdemeanor prosecutions which are within the concurrent jurisdictions of both a City Court and a Justice's Court may at the election of the prosecuting officer be brought in either court. Prosecution of such offenses must be instituted in the name of the state. 37 A.G. Op. 42 (1977).

Necessity of Ordinance or Resolution to Implement City Court Misdemeanor Jurisdiction: Statutory jurisdiction granted City Courts by 3-11-102 is self-executing, and a city or town does not need to take any affirmative action by resolution or ordinance to effect such jurisdiction. 37 A.G. Op. 42 (1977).

3-11-103. Exclusive jurisdiction.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 284 throughout section increased jurisdictional limits from $5,000 to $9,500. Amendment effective July 1, 2011.

1991 Amendment: In (2), (3), (4), and (5) increased amount from $2,500 to $5,000.

1985 Amendment: Substituted "$2,500" for "$300" throughout.

Case Notes

Penalty Assessment of Fines: Statute providing for penalty assessments in addition to fines was void for indirectly enlarging jurisdiction of Justices' courts and police courts (now city courts) in terms of maximum fine which might have been imposed. State ex rel. Sanders v. Butte, 151 M 171, 441 P2d 190 (1968).

Defect in Complaint: The mere fact that an action for the violation of a city ordinance was entitled in the name of the "town" did not deprive the police court (now city court) of jurisdiction. State ex rel. Moreland v. Police Court, 87 M 17, 285 P 178 (1930).

Limited Jurisdiction: Police courts (now city courts), like Justices' Courts, were courts of limited jurisdiction and had only such authority as was expressly conferred upon them. State ex rel. Marquette v. Police Court, 86 M 297, 283 P 430 (1929).

False Imprisonment: A police (now city court) magistrate had jurisdiction to determine the validity of a town ordinance for a violation of which he sentenced plaintiff in an action for false imprisonment to serve a term in the county jail. Shampagne v. Keplinger, 78 M 114, 252 P 803 (1927).

Exclusive Jurisdiction of J.P. Designated to Act: A Justice of the Peace designated by the Town Council to act as police judge (now city court judge) had exclusive jurisdiction of all cases arising under the ordinances, in addition to his jurisdiction as a Justice. State ex rel. Streit v. Justice Court, 45 M 375, 123 P 405 (1912).

Prosecution in Name of Municipality: Prosecutions for violations of local ordinances must be conducted in the name of the municipality. State ex rel. Streit v. Justice Court, 45 M 375, 123 P 405 (1912).

Removal of Snow and Ice: Noncompliance with an ordinance making it the duty of an occupant of premises within the limits of a city to keep a sidewalk free from snow and ice was not in its essence a crime or misdemeanor, and actions arising therefrom were properly prosecuted in the name of the city. State ex rel. Streit v. Justice Court, 45 M 375, 123 P 405 (1912); Helena v. Kent, 32 M 279, 80 P 258 (1905). See also State ex rel. Butte v. District Court, 37 M 202, 95 P 841 (1908).

Vagrancy: The police court (now city court) of a city or town had exclusive jurisdiction of all proceedings for the violation of an ordinance defining vagrancy. State ex rel. Butte v. District Court, 37 M 202, 95 P 841 (1908).

Case Notes

Appeal of City Court Ruling — Trial De Novo in District Court Proper Remedy: Defendant was charged in Three Forks City Court with four counts of endangering the welfare of a minor. The City Court determined that a fair trial could not be had in Three Forks and, upon motion by the city for a change of venue, ordered the case and jurisdiction transferred to Madison County. A Madison County Justice's Court jury convicted defendant of one count and acquitted on three counts. Defendant appealed to Gallatin County District Court, requesting that the case be dismissed because the Three Forks City Court improperly granted the change of venue. The District Court denied the motion to dismiss, but concluded that the change of venue was an abuse of discretion and remanded to the Three Forks City Court for a new trial. The city appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The general rule is that, with few exceptions, District Courts must try appeals from Justices' Courts and City Courts de novo, rather than acting as courts of review. In this case, none of the statutory or case law exceptions to the general rule applied, so the District Court was limited to the remedy of conducting a de novo trial as required by 46-17-311, regardless whether the City Court's change of venue was erroneous. A trial de novo in District Court also cured any prejudice that might have been suffered by defendant occasioned by the change of venue. The case was remanded for a trial de novo in Gallatin County District Court. Three Forks v. Schillinger, 2007 MT 331, 340 M 211, 173 P3d 681 (2007), distinguishing Woirhaye v. District Court, 1998 MT 320, 292 M 185, 972 P2d 800 (1998), and St. v. Rensvold, 2006 MT 146, 332 M 392, 139 P3d 154 (2006).

Change of Place of Trial — Jurisdiction Retained by Original Court: When the location of a criminal trial is changed, the court in which the proceeding is commenced ordinarily retains jurisdiction. However, a City Court Judge may call in a substitute judge to act in the original judge's place. Three Forks v. Schillinger, 2007 MT 331, 340 M 211, 173 P3d 681 (2007).

Attorney General's Opinions

When Qualified Person May Be Called as Substitute for City Judge: A qualified person may be called in as a substitute City Judge when the acting City Judge is sick, absent, unable to act, or disqualified. There is no requirement to contact any City Judge or Justice of the Peace prior to calling in a qualified person. A substitute City Judge may be called in regardless of the availability of another City Judge or Justice of the Peace and whether or not the other justices have expressed that they are unavailable. 48 A.G. Op. 11 (2000).

Limitation on the Power of City Judge to Appoint Replacement: A Justice of the Peace who has been designated to act as a City Judge for a town must himself make the determination that he is "unable to act" under the provisions of this section. That determination does not, however, confer on a City Judge the authority to appoint a regular deputy or substitute City Judge with power and authority to act in all matters the same as the regular City Judge. The City Judge who has determined he is unable to act for any reason may call in a Justice of the Peace or a qualified resident of the town to act in his place, but the substitute may act only as long as the situations listed in this section exist. 38 A.G. Op. 113 (1980).

1989 Amendment: In first sentence of (1), at end, substituted "justice of the peace or the city judge of another city or town to act as city judge" for "justice court", at beginning of second sentence inserted "The justice of the peace or city judge shall reside in the", at beginning of the third sentence substituted "The city or town" for "to act as city court and", after "such" substituted "judge" for "court", after "county" inserted "the other city or town, or the justice of the peace or the judge", before "payment" deleted "proportionate", near beginning of fourth sentence, after "justice", substituted "of the peace or other city judge" for "court", after "commissioners" inserted "or governing body of the city or town", before "in all cases" substituted "judge" for "court", and near beginning of fifth sentence, after "peace", inserted "or city judge of another city or town"; and made minor changes in phraseology and punctuation.

1987 Amendment: In (1) substituted first two sentences, allowing council to designate Justice's Court to act as City Court and fix funding for the court and stating criteria for when the Justice's Court acts as City Court, for "In a town, the council may designate a justice of the peace of the county in which the town is situated to act as city judge and may by ordinance fix the compensation for his services. The justice of the peace so designated who agrees to act in that capacity shall act as city judge in all cases arising out of violations of ordinances in which the town is a party" and in last sentence, after "town", inserted "or city".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 56 inserted (2) allowing combination of offices of Justice of the Peace and City Judge.

Chapter 269 substituted "who agrees to act in that capacity shall act as city judge" for "may act as city judge" near the middle of (1).

Case Notes

Exclusive Jurisdiction of J.P. Designated to Act: A Justice of the Peace designated by the Town Council to act as police judge (now city court judge) had exclusive jurisdiction of all cases arising under the ordinances, in addition to his jurisdiction as a Justice. State ex rel. Streit v. Justice Court, 45 M 375, 123 P 405 (1912).

Attorney General's Opinions

Residency for Justice of the Peace Serving as City Judge: A Justice of the Peace may not be appointed to serve as a City Judge in a town in which he does not reside without violating Art. VII, sec. 9, Mont. Const. 41 A.G. Op. 82 (1986). (Annotator's note: However, see 1987 amendment note. The 1987 amendment allows the council to designate a Justice's Court of the county to act as City Court.)

Town Council to Designate City Judge From Justices of the Peace of Same County: The statutes concerning the selection of a City Judge for a town stand in stark contrast to those concerning cities. Title 7 has no provision that requires the appointment of a City Judge by a town in order to implement it. Therefore, a town is not authorized by 7-4-4103 to appoint a City Judge who is not a Justice of the Peace. Rather, 3-11-205 provides for the appointment by the Town Council of a Justice of the Peace of the county in which the town is situated to act as City Judge. The 1975 amendment, which changed the statute to read, "[t]he justice of the peace so designated may act as a police judge in all cases arising out of a violation of ordinances in which the town is a party" from "must act", simply provides a designated Justice of the Peace with some discretion in the performance of his duty as City Judge for a town, where formerly the duty was mandatory. The statute does not authorize the appointment of a City Judge who is not a Justice of the Peace of the county in which the town is situated. The City Judge must be designated by the Town Council. 38 A.G. Op. 80 (1980).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 6 in (1)(a) substituted "city court" for "judge"; in (1)(a)(i) after "enable the" substituted "judge and the clerk of city court, if any, to conduct business" for "judge to perform the judge's duties"; in (1)(a)(ii) near end substituted "court" for "judicial office"; inserted (1)(b) allowing for a clerk of city court; in (2) at beginning substituted "The provisions of 3-6-302(1) and" for "Except as provided in subsection (2)(b), the provisions of 3-6-301 through"; deleted former (2)(b) that read: "(b) If the governing body of a city establishes by ordinance the position of clerk of city court, 3-6-301 does not apply to the city court"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 174 inserted (3) allowing electronic filing or storage of documents; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) concerning conduct of City Court business.

1983 Amendment: In (1), substituted "must" for "shall"; in (2), substituted "may" for "shall", inserted "either" and the clause referring to the city or town as plaintiff, and inserted "must be brought" before "against the accused".

Authority of City Court to Try DUI Charge Under State Statute — No Error in District Court Failure to Dismiss: McCarvel was charged in Billings City Court with DUI in violation of 61-8-401.

McCarvel moved to dismiss on the grounds that he was charged with a violation of a state statute rather than a city ordinance. The City Court refused to dismiss. McCarvel was convicted by a jury and took a de novo appeal to the District Court. The District Court refused to dismiss and McCarvel pleaded guilty. The Supreme Court held that the Billings City Court had jurisdiction over the DUI offense concurrent with the Justice's Court. Because McCarvel was charged with a violation of a state statute rather than a city ordinance, the language of the city ordinance was immaterial. Billings v. McCarvel, 262 M 96, 863 P2d 441, 50 St. Rep. 1460 (1993).

Sanctions and Contempt Imposed on Attorney by City Court Invalid: A City Court imposed sanctions on an attorney for failing to appear to defend a client in a DUI case. The attorney argued that he had been required to attend a hearing in District Court and had diligently tried to inform the City Court of the conflict. The City Court refused to revoke the sanctions, adding instead a contempt charge. The Supreme Court ruled that the sanctions were improper in that the City Court acted arbitrarily in imposing them. The Supreme Court went on to reverse the contempt, finding on the basis that the sanctions did not constitute a lawful order and therefore the attorney could not be found in contempt for failing to pay the sanctions. Doran v. City Court of Whitefish, 239 M 94, 779 P2d 68, 46 St. Rep. 1539 (1989).

Power of State to Enact and Courts to Enforce Laws Regulating Motor Vehicles: Appellant, appearing pro se, challenged as unconstitutional laws requiring driver's license, mandatory insurance, and vehicle registration. The Supreme Court held that the issues raised by the appellant were frivolous, unreasonable, and groundless in that the court had previously recognized the state's power to regulate motor vehicles in the interests of public safety at the expense of individual rights. Whitefish v. Hansen, 237 M 105, 771 P2d 976, 46 St. Rep. 657 (1989).

Jurisdiction Required Before Judgment Effective: It is fundamental that a court rendering a decision in a particular case have jurisdiction over the parties. When the judgment roll on its face shows that the court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment, its pronouncement is in fact no judgment and cannot be enforced. No right can be derived from it. All proceedings founded upon it are invalid and ineffective for any purpose. Ciotti v. Hoover, 237 M 462, 774 P2d 406, 46 St. Rep. 969 (1989), following Apple v. 1989 Amendment: In (1), after "12 persons or", substituted "with the approval of the court, it may consist of" for "provided that, in civil actions and cases of misdemeanor, it may consist of 12"; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Case Notes

No Error in Disallowing Consideration of Punitive Damages by Jury of Less Than Twelve: Immediately after the verdict was entered, the trial court dismissed a juror without challenge, based on the juror's preannounced prior commitment. The court then disallowed consideration of punitive damages by the jury of 11, and plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed, noting that under this section, a jury must consist of 12 jurors unless the parties agree to a lesser number in open court. Defendant did not consent to a lesser number of jurors, so deliberation on punitive damages could not have occurred in any event. Winslow v. Mont. 1981 Amendment: Changed "juror" to "jury panel member" at the beginning of (1); added the last sentence of (1) relating to additional compensation of selected jurors; substituted "shall forfeit per diem and mileage" for "in the discretion of the court, may receive per diem and mileage" at the end of (2).

Attorney General's Opinions

Juror Fees as District Court Costs: Juror fees are District Court costs and may be paid out of the fund established by 7-6-2511. 38 A.G. Op. 31 (1979).

Compensation Only for Attendance: A juror ("juror" changed to "jury panel member" in 1981) is not in attendance before a court during any period that he is excused and thus may not be compensated for those periods. 27 A.G. Op. 34 (1957).

Travel Compensation: This section places no limitation on the number of trips a juror ("juror" changed to "jury panel member" in 1981) may be compensated for, and he should be compensated his travel mileage for each day he travels between his residence and the county seat. 27 A.G. Op. 34 (1957).

3-15-203. Fees in courts not of record and coroner inquests.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1991 Amendment: In (1), after "criminal actions", inserted "and coroner inquests"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Jurors in coroner's inquests shall receive a fee of $7.50 per day"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (1) at beginning of first sentence, substituted "A jury panel member" for "Jurors in courts not of record" and near middle of first sentence, after "$12 per day" inserted "for attendance before a court not of record and a mileage allowance, as provided in 2-18-503, for traveling each way between his residence and the court. A jury panel member selected for a case shall receive an additional $13 per day while serving"; and inserted (4) relating to forfeit of per diem and mileage by a juror excused on his own motion or a special juror not sworn in.

Case Notes

Declaratory Judgment on Requiring Prepayment of Jury Fees by Party Demanding Jury: The Supreme Court took original jurisdiction of, and heard, a petition for a declaratory judgment that it was unconstitutional to require prepayment, by a party requesting a civil jury trial, of each day's jury fees at or before the end of the prior day. The requirement was contained in Rule 14F, M.J.C.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 22) (superseded, 1990, see Title 25, ch. 23). There was a justiciable controversy of statewide impact in that the rule applied to all justice courts; delay could abridge vital constitutional rights of litigants; the purpose of the declaratory judgment would serve the office of a writ, and the court has jurisdiction to issue, hear, and determine writs; and it would promote judicial economy to accept jurisdiction rather than force piecemeal litigation on the constitutionality of the rule. The court said that the prepayment requirement was contained in the rule and 3-15-203, which provided that "In civil actions, the jurors' fees must be paid by the party demanding the jury and taxed as costs against the losing party", and declared both the statute and rule unconstitutional. Hammer v. Justice Court, 222 M 35, 720 P2d 281, 43 St. Rep. 1040 (1986).

3-15-204. Duties of clerk as to jurors.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 52 in both versions in (1) in second sentence substituted "court" for "county seat"; in (2) at beginning substituted "A juror must receive payments by" for "The clerk shall give to each juror at the time that the juror is excused from further service" and after "warrant" substituted "that lists" for "signed by the clerk, in which must be stated"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 152 in (2) near middle before "warrant" inserted "county"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 26, 2003.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: (Version effective on occurrence of contingency) Chapter 473 inserted (4) requiring clerk of court in county where asbestos-related claim is tried to perform outlined duties and requiring costs incurred by clerks to be paid from asbestos claims administration fund; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 585 in (3) substituted "The amount specified in the warrant must be paid by the state as provided in 3-5-901 and 3-5-902" for "On presentation of such warrant to the county treasurer, the amount specified in the warrant must be paid out of the general fund unless the county has a district court fund. If the county has a district court fund, the amount must be paid out of such fund"; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The clerk must make a detailed statement containing a list of the jurors and the amount of fees and mileage earned by each and file the same with the clerk of the board of county commissioners on the first day of every regular meeting of the board. No quarterly salary must be paid the clerk until such statement is filed. The board must examine such statement and see that it is correct"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2002.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 473, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that there are a large number of asbestos-related claims by Montana citizens that are primarily within the venue of the 19th Judicial District; and

WHEREAS, the large number of asbestos-related claims will impede the ability of the single District Court Judge in the 19th Judicial District to handle the normal case load of the District and will raise several potential conflicts of interest; and

WHEREAS, it is imperative that asbestos-related claims be dealt with expeditiously in order to allow Montana citizens with life-threatening illnesses to receive a speedy resolution of their claims; and

WHEREAS, Article VII, section 1, of the Montana Constitution allows additional courts to be provided by law."

Saving Clause: Section 55, Ch. 585, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1985 Amendment: In (3) after "general fund", inserted requirement that payment be out of district court fund if there is one.

1983 Amendment: In (2), after "service, a" substituted "warrant" for "certificate taken from a book containing a stub with a like designation"; after "by himself" deleted "under seal"; and in (3), substituted "warrant" for "certificate" twice.

Case Notes

Payment of Jurors: This section is mandatory both as to the duty of the Clerk and of the Treasurer, for the word "must" indicates that the duty of the Clerk becomes imperative as soon as a juror is entitled to his pay. It also indicates that the duty of the Treasurer is imperative as soon as a certificate ("certificate" was changed to "warrant" by a 1983 amendment) properly issued by the District Court Clerk is presented to him. 2001 Amendments — Composite Section: (Version effective on occurrence of contingency) Chapter 473 in (3)(a) inserted exception clause; inserted (3)(b) requiring costs collected by asbestos claims court to be deposited in asbestos claims administration fund; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 585 in (3) substituted "Costs collected under this section must be forwarded to the state treasurer for deposit in the state general fund" for "Costs collected under this section must be deposited in the county general fund unless the county has a district court fund. If the county has a district court fund, the costs must be deposited in the district court fund." Amendment effective July 1, 2002.

Code Commissioner Instruction: Pursuant to sec. 47, Ch. 257, L. 2001, in (3) in version effective July 1, 2002, and in (3)(a) in contingent version the code commissioner changed "state treasurer" to "department of revenue".

Saving Clause: Section 55, Ch. 585, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 356 in (1), near middle after "continuance and", inserted "then" and near end, after "3-15-201", deleted "and such other costs as may have been incurred by the court"; inserted (2) regarding assessment of certain reasonable public expenses; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: At end inserted requirement that payment be out of district court fund if there is one.

Case Notes

Claim of Juror to Be Psychic Not Violative of Due Process Rights: On the second day of jury deliberations, two jurors brought forward concerns that another juror with strong opinions in the case claimed to be a psychic. With counsel present, the trial court questioned the jury foreman as to whether that particular juror would be able to base a decision on the law and the evidence. The court and counsel ultimately determined that no problem existed, and deliberations continued. On appeal, DuBray argued that allowing a psychic juror constituted a due process violation. The Supreme Court noted that DuBray's counsel helped formulate the response to the situation and, finding nothing in the record to indicate that the juror's strong opinions were based on psychic powers or that the juror would not be able to lay aside the opinions and render a fair verdict, held that DuBray's right to a fair and impartial jury was not violated. St. v. DuBray, 2003 MT 255, 317 M 377, 77 P3d 247 (2003). See also St. v. McMahon, 271 M 75, 894 P2d 313 (1995).

Constitutionality: This section was held constitutional as providing a true cross section of the community and hence not violative of equal protection requirements. Defendants did not prove that the jury selection system was disadvantageous to a cognizable class or that the disadvantage, if any, was occasioned by discrimination in the selection process. St. v. Fitzpatrick, 174 M 174, 569 P2d 383 (1977).

Former Law — Jury Selection Based on Assessment Roll Not Violative of Equal Protection of the Law: Using the definition that an impartial jury is one where potential membership is drawn from a "cross section of the community", court held that the class of people who pay no property taxes is not such a definable class as to provide a basis for objection on an equal protection ground, as all persons who do not pay taxes are not necessarily poor. St. v. Taylor, 168 M 142, 542 P2d 100 (1975).

System for Juror Qualifications — Constitutional: Argument that since Legislature enacted different system for juror qualifications based on most recent list of registered electors rather than last assessment roll, without providing for jury selection commissions to meet after effective date of statute, and therefore no list of eligible jurors was available, failed because of Supreme Court's interpretation that various county jury selection commissions must meet as soon as possible after effective date of statute, invoking court's rulemaking power, under Art. VII, sec. 2(3), Mont. Const., by supplying a meeting and selection date. State ex rel. Bennick v. District Court, 167 M 389, 538 P2d 1369 (1975).

Taxpayers of School District: In an action by school district against fire insurers for loss of school building, taxpayers of district were not disqualified to act as jurors. School District v. Globe & Republic Ins. Co. of America, 142 M 220, 383 P2d 482 (1963).

Sanity of Juror: Under this section and section 93-1303, R.C.M. 1947 (now 3-15-303), a person is not qualified to act as a juror unless he is in possession of his natural faculties. St. v. Bucy, 104 M 416, 66 P2d 1049 (1937).

3-15-302. Inhabitants of local government jurisdiction competent.

Case Notes

Failure to Renew Venue Objection During Voir Dire — Fatal on Appeal: During the District Court's jury selection proceeding in a civil trial, the state failed to renew a motion for change of venue, and it ultimately agreed to the 12 empaneled jurors. On appeal, the state claimed that the District Court abused its discretion by denying the state's original motion to change venue, as there were reports in a local newspaper that were allegedly biased in favor of the plaintiffs. The Supreme Court applied St. v. Kingman, 2011 MT 269, 362 Mont. 330, 264 P.3d 1104, even though it was a criminal case, and held that the state waived the opportunity to object to venue when it failed to give the District Court an opportunity to revisit the venue ruling during the jury selection process. Weaver v. St., 2013 MT 247, 371 Mont. 476, 310 P.3d 495.

Status as Taxpayer Not Disqualifying Interest for Ability to Serve as Juror: Plaintiff contended that he could not seat a fair jury in Wheatland County because potential jurors knew that, as taxpayers, they would be responsible to pay for a verdict against the county. Based on this reasoning, plaintiff asserted that 3-15-302, which presumes that local residents are competent jurors, was therefore unconstitutional. The Supreme Court disagreed. Plaintiff cited no authority to support the proposition, and the court declined to adopt the position that simply being a taxpayer constitutes a disqualifying interest. Section 3-15-302 is presumed to be constitutional, and plaintiff failed to establish otherwise beyond a reasonable doubt. Eklund v. Wheatland County, 2009 MT 231, 351 M 370, 212 P3d 297 (2009).

Taxpayers of School District: In action by school district against fire insurers for loss of school building, taxpayers of district were not disqualified to act as jurors. School District v. Globe & Republic Ins. Co. of America, 142 M 220, 383 P2d 482 (1963).

Sanity of Juror: Under this section and section 93-1301, R.C.M. 1947 (now 3-15-301), a person is not qualified to act as a juror unless he is in possession of his natural faculties. St. v. Bucy, 104 M 416, 66 P2d 1049 (1937).

Waiver of Objection: Where counsel had the opportunity to inquire into the qualifications of a juror and exercised that right but failed to inquire whether he had ever been convicted of a felony, he will be held to have waived any objection thereto even though knowledge of the juror's incompetency did not come to counsel until after the trial. Stagg v. Stagg, 96 M 573, 32 P2d 856 (1934).

1983 Amendment: In introductory clause, after "court" inserted "or jury commissioner with the approval of the court"; at end of (2), deleted "or 3-15-507".

1981 Amendment: In (2) substituted "when it satisfactorily appears that the person should be excused under 3-15-313" for "when it satisfactorily appears that the person is exempt and claims the benefit of exemption".

3-15-313. Who may be excused — affidavit to claim excuse — permanent exclusion for chronically incapacitated.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 167 in (1) near middle of first sentence after "the person" inserted "a dependent of the person" and inserted second sentence providing excuse from jury duty for breastfeeding mother or personal obligation to provide care to another; in (2) in first sentence near beginning after "the person" inserted "a dependent of the person", after "served" inserted "by the person", and in third sentence after "the court" substituted "shall" for "may"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 345 inserted (3) providing that a person who is chronically incapacitated may file an affidavit with the jury commissioner and, upon approval of the court, may be permanently excused from jury service; inserted (4) establishing what constitutes chronic incapacity for the purpose of being permanently excused from jury service; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), after "The court" inserted "or jury commissioner with the approval of the court"; in (2), substituted "jury commissioner" for "clerk of the court" twice; in last sentence of (2), after "The court" inserted "or jury commissioner with the approval of the court"; and deleted former (3), which read: "A person may also be excused from jury service upon presentation of his excuse to the court as provided in 3-15-507."

1981 Amendment: Substituted subsections (1) and (2), mandating an excuse in a case of undue hardship and providing a procedure for an affidavit to claim the excuse, for former text that read: "A juror must not be excused by a court for a slight or trivial cause or for hardship or inconvenience to his business but only when material injury or destruction to his property or property entrusted to him is threatened or when his own health or the sickness or death of a member of his family requires his absence."

Case Notes

Justice's Court Jury Properly Drawn: Following several delays, a jury was hastily assembled the day before the deadline for a speedy trial dismissal in justice's court. Although several potential jurors were dismissed by the justice's court clerk for medical or travel reasons, the defendant failed to prove that there was not substantial compliance with 3-15-313. The defendant's assertion that he could not find sufficient evidence in the record to prove compliance with 3-15-313 was insufficient. St. v. Fehringer, 2013 MT 10, 368 Mont. 226, 293 P.3d 853.

Failure of Prospective Juror to File Affidavit to Be Excused From Particular Trial Not Violative of Right to Impartial Jury: Defendant argued that under this section, the submitting of affidavits by those jurors who claim an undue hardship is mandatory and that failure to do so created a material deviation in procuring a jury and was therefore a denial of defendant's constitutional right to an impartial jury. However, once a juror is drawn from the pool, he may, without filing an affidavit, attempt to demonstrate an undue hardship so as to be excused on a particular jury panel. Failure to file an affidavit at that stage of the jury selection process does not constitute a deviation in jury selection sufficient to warrant violation of the right to an impartial jury. St. v. Henry, 241 M 524, 788 P2d 316, 47 St. Rep. 476 (1990).

Improper Questioning and Excusing of Prospective Jurors by Court Clerk: In depositor's suit against bank, the court's clerks examined the prospective jurors, using questions given the clerks by depositor's counsel, without notice to bank's counsel. The clerks asked if the prospective jurors had business or transactions with the bank and released some prospective jurors based on their answers to the questions, thus excusing them for cause without notice to bank's counsel or a ruling by the court. This occurred before an initial jury panel was called. This action violated the procedure set out in 25-7-221, 25-7-224, and former Rules 47(a) and 47(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded); was outside the type of action permitted by 3-15-313; and constituted reversible error requiring a new trial. Tribby v. NW. Bank of Great Falls, 217 M 196, 704 P2d 409, 42 St. Rep. 1133 (1985).

Grounds for Excuse: A District Judge has the right to excuse jurors called for service who are incompetent for any of the reasons enumerated in section 93-1301, R.C.M. 1947 (now 3-15-301), but under this section (as it read prior to the 1981 amendment), a juror could not be excused for slight or trivial cause or for hardship or inconvenience to his business. State ex rel. School District v. Carroll, 87 M 45, 284 P 1008 (1930).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 24 near middle substituted "On or before the second Monday of April of each year, the secretary of state shall deliver the list to the office of court administrator. The office of court administrator" for "The secretary of state" and after "list submitted to the" substituted "office of court administrator" for "secretary of state". Amendment effective October 1, 2017.

2015 Amendment: Chapter 88 near beginning substituted "all registered active electors, as defined in 13-1-101" for "all registered electors". Amendment effective March 16, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 133 in first sentence at beginning deleted "Subject to subsection (2), at the meeting specified in 3-15-401, the officers present, working with the office of" and after "registered electors" deleted "as prepared by the county registrar, working with the office of the secretary of state" and in second sentence at beginning before "secretary of state" deleted "officers, working with the office of the" and near middle after "submitted to the" substituted "secretary of state" for "clerk of the district court"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The combined list prepared under subsection (1) may not include the name of a person permanently excluded from jury service under 3-15-313"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 5, 2007.

Extension of Effective Date: Section 1, Ch. 99, L. 2005, amended sec. 9, Ch. 441, L. 2003, by extending the effective date imposed by Ch. 441 to October 1, 2007. Effective March 24, 2005.

Applicability Date Extended: Section 2, Ch. 99, L. 2005, amended sec. 10, Ch. 441, L. 2003, to read: "[This act] applies to combined jury lists compiled partly from the lists submitted under [section 1] [61-5-127] by the department of justice to the clerks of the district courts on and after the second Monday of May 2008." Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 441 throughout section substituted "combined list" for "list" or "jury list"; in (1) in first sentence in two places inserted "working with the office of the secretary of state" and inserted second sentence providing that the officers shall submit a combined list to the district court ensuring that a person's name does not appear more than once on the list; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

Applicability: Section 10, Ch. 441, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies to combined jury lists compiled partly from the lists submitted under [section 1] [61-5-127] by the department of justice to the clerks of the district courts on and after the second Monday of May 2006."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 241 in (1) deleted former third sentence that read: "The numbers must be consecutive from "1" to the total number of jurors." Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 345 at beginning of (1) inserted "Subject to subsection (2)"; inserted (2) providing that the list of persons qualified to serve as jurors may not include a person permanently excluded from jury service under 3-15-313; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Inserted fourth sentence providing that a person's name may not appear on a jury list for more than one court during a 1-year term.

Case Notes

No Abuse of Discretion in Denial of Mistrial Based on Jury Selection Process Involving Combined List of Potential Jurors: Under 3-15-402 and 61-5-127, a list that included licensed drivers as well as registered voters was to be provided by the Secretary of State to the Clerk of the District Court of each county for the exclusive purpose of making a list of persons to serve as trial jurors during the ensuring year. The term "ensuing year" was not defined. The District Court concluded that the Legislature intended that the first combined jury list would be provided to Clerks of Court on or before the first Monday of May 2008 and that the Clerk of Court would use the combined list to prepare the annual jury panel for calendar year 2009. Norquay contended that the combined list should have been used to draw the jury in his trial in September 2008 and that failure to do so necessitated a mistrial. The Supreme Court held that the term "ensuing year" was ambiguous and that Norquay failed to carry the burden of demonstrating that the District Court abused its discretion in interpreting the statutory scheme and in denying his motion for a mistrial. The District Court was affirmed. St. v. Norquay, 2010 MT 85, 356 Mont. 113, 233 P.3d 768.

Fair and Impartial Jury: The jury was selected in substantial compliance with the law, and defendant's claim that he was denied a fair and impartial jury must fail. Having more numbers in the jury box than names on the jury list does not destroy the validity of the panel drawn; notifying jurors by telephone is permissible; having less jurors appear than were drawn does not invalidate a trial, as a defendant has no right to select a particular juror. St. v. Coleman, 177 M 1, 579 P2d 732, 35 St. Rep. 560 (1978).

Jury Selection — Constitutionality: A variation between the percentage of Air Force personnel in the county and the percentage of their representation on the jury panel, as taken from the assessment roll under former law, does not reflect a constitutional infirmity in the selection method. St. v. Stewart, 175 M 286, 573 P2d 1138 (1977).

Former Law — Jury Selection Based on Assessment Roll Not Violative of Equal Protection of the Law: Using the definition that an impartial jury is one where potential membership is drawn from a "cross section of the community", court held that the class of people who pay no property taxes is not such a definable class as to provide a basis for objection on an equal protection ground, as all persons who do not pay taxes are not necessarily poor. St. v. Taylor, 168 M 142, 542 P2d 100 (1975).

System for Juror Qualifications — Constitutional: Argument that since Legislature enacted different system for juror qualifications based on most recent list of registered electors rather than last assessment roll, without providing for jury selection commissions to meet after effective date of statute, and therefore no list of eligible jurors was available, failed because of Supreme Court's interpretation that various county jury selection commissions must meet as soon as possible after effective date of statute, invoking court's rulemaking power, under Art. VII, sec. 2(3), Mont. Const., by supplying a meeting and selection date. State ex rel. Bennick v. District Court, 167 M 389, 538 P2d 1369 (1975).

Duplication of Names: Allegation in challenge to the panel that many names were included more than once on the jury list was sufficient to require the court to hear the facts to determine whether there had been a material variation from the statutory procedure in making up the jury list. St. v. Chapman, 139 M 98, 360 P2d 703 (1961).

Presumption of Regularity: The presumption that jury lists were made up according to law prevails until an offer of proof to the contrary is actually made. St. v. Bowser, 21 M 133, 53 P 179 (1898).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 241 inserted (2) requiring retention of copy of latest jury list and description of approved computerized random selection process, if used; inserted (3) allowing clerk of court to omit certain names from jury list; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1981 Amendment: Changed "5 days" to "15 days" at the beginning of the last sentence.

Juror Questionnaire Mix-Up — Plaintiff's Material Rights Not Prejudiced — Motion for New Trial Properly Denied: A mistaken association of the wrong juror questionnaire with a juror was not a structural error that necessitated a new trial. The plaintiff failed to show how the questionnaire mix-up prejudiced her rights. The transcript from voir dire showed that the plaintiff's counsel questioned the juror during voir dire, learned about the juror's experience as a former police officer and his relationship with attorneys, and still passed the jury for cause. Ultimately, the juror voted in the plaintiff's favor. The Supreme Court held there was nothing in the record indicating that the plaintiff's material rights were prejudiced and that the District Court therefore did not abuse its discretion in denying the plaintiff's motion for a new trial. Suzor v. Int'l Paper Co., 2016 MT 344, 386 Mont. 54, 386 P.3d 584.

3-15-411. Term of service of jurors.

Case Notes

Jurors Called But Not Serving: When a panel of 89 persons was called and sworn as jurors for the term but was discharged before serving at any trial, such jurors had not served within the meaning of this section and it was proper to return such names to jury box No. 1 and not jury box No. 2. St. v. Allison, 122 M 120, 199 P2d 279 (1948).

Expiration of Term: Under this section, the persons selected by the jury commissioners in January of one year are, after the filing of the list containing their names with the Clerk of the Court, the regular jurors, the persons liable to be drawn for jury service until a new list is selected in January of the next succeeding year and filed, upon which filing the list of the preceding year becomes functus officio and thereafter a panel may no longer be drawn from such list. State ex rel. Clark v. District Court, 86 M 509, 284 P 266 (1930), distinguished in State ex rel. Adami v. Lewis & Clark County, 124 M 282, 220 P2d 1052 (1950).

Action After Expiration of Term: A grand jury organized in one year could return a valid indictment the next year despite the fact the jury list for the latter year had been made and filed before the date of the indictment. The term of service in the statute referred to the term during which a jury could be selected from the jury list and not to the term during which the actual duties were to be performed. State ex rel. Clark v. District Court, 31 M 428, 78 P 769 (1904).

Trial Juries — District Court

Part Case Notes

Error in Excusing Juror for Cause Before Voir Dire — Error Harmless Absent Showing of Prejudice: Prior to voir dire in defendant's trial for sexual intercourse without consent and incest, the prosecutor requested that juror no. 43 be excused. The juror had recently worked in the County Attorney's office and had access to a wide range of information relating to issues that defendant had been involved in, and the prosecutor had recently fired the juror for unsatisfactory performance. The trial judge dismissed the juror because of concerns that the juror might have feelings or predilections for one side or the other and because of the possibility of the juror communicating with other prospective jurors. Following conviction, defendant appealed the decision to excuse the juror for cause prior to voir dire. The Supreme Court concluded that the trial court erred in excusing the juror without an in-court examination to determine actual bias; however, the error was not a material failure to substantially comply with statutes governing procurement of a trial jury, so the dismissal was subject to harmless error review. Defendant could not demonstrate prejudice because even if juror no. 43 had not been dismissed, the juror would not have been on the jury because the last juror empaneled was juror no. 36. The Supreme Court affirmed. St. v. Bearchild, 2004 MT 355, 324 M 435, 103 P3d 1006 (2004), distinguishing St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204 (2000), and St. v. Blem, 610 NW 2d 803 (S. Dak. 2000).

Case Remanded Because Jury Improperly Summoned — Sufficient Evidence to Support Convictions for Felony Assault and Aggravated Burglary: Lopez was convicted of felony assault and aggravated burglary. On appeal, it was held that the District Court should not have denied Lopez's motion to strike the jury because under St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204 (2000), summoning a jury by telephone violates 3-15-505 (now repealed) and frustrates the random nature of the jury process. Lopez contended that the state did not meet its burden of proving the elements of either crime and that he should not be retried on those charges. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding that the state offered sufficient evidence to prove both offenses, and remanded for retrial. St. v. Lopez, 2001 MT 97, 305 M 218, 26 P3d 745 (2001).

Substantial Compliance Required With Statutes Providing for Method of Jury Panel Selection — Right to Speedy and Public Trial by Impartial Jury Implicated: Prior to Highpine's trial, the Clerk of District Court sent out questionnaires and summonses to potential jurors and then drew 200 names from the pool of those who returned the questionnaires. The clerk then served notice to the jurors by telephone. Those jurors who either failed to return the questionnaires or did so without including phone numbers were not contacted at all. Those who did not respond to the clerk's phone call were not contacted again once the requisite number of jurors had been contacted. Section 3-15-505 (now repealed) required that when "a person fails to respond to the notice, the clerk shall certify the failure to the sheriff, who shall then serve notice personally on such person and require a response to the notice". The District Court held that Highpine was not prejudiced by the clerk's method of selecting the jury panel. Highpine presented evidence to the Supreme Court of the number of Native American households that do not have telephones and are therefore disproportionately excluded from the panel as a result of the procedure used by the clerk. The Supreme Court held that the practice of the clerk did not substantially comply with the requirements of statute and pointed out, citing St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204 (2000), that a defendant's right to challenge a jury panel for substantial noncompliance with statutory procedures is directly connected to that defendant's right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury. The Supreme Court held that the District Court erred when that court held that Highpine was not prejudiced by the actions of the clerk, reversed the District Court, and remanded the case for a new trial. St. v. Highpine, 2000 MT 368, 303 M 422, 15 P3d 938, 57 St. Rep. 1573 (2000).

Case Notes

Failure to Summon Entire Panel by Telephonic Juror Summoning — New Trial Warranted: Of the 200-juror panel randomly drawn for Lamere's murder trial, over one-third of the prospective jurors were excluded from possible jury service by virtue of the manner in which a telephone-only notification method skewed the random nature and objectivity of the statutory jury selection procedures. By failing to summon the entire panel or array drawn for the trial, the purpose of juror notification was undermined. Jury duty cannot be lightly shirked, as a telephone summoning system allowed, without doing violence to the democratic nature of the jury system. Because the substantial failure to comply with the statutory requirements materially undermined the jury selection process, Lamere was granted a new trial. St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204, 57 St. Rep. 214 (2000), following Thiel v. S. Pac. Co., 328 US 217, 90 L Ed 1181, 66 S Ct 984 (1946), and applied retroactively in Robbins v. St., 2002 MT 116, 310 M 10, 50 P3d 134 (2002). See also St. v. Groom, 49 M 354, 141 P 858 (1914), and State ex rel. School District v. Carroll, 87 M 45, 284 P 1008 (1930).

Substantial Compliance Standard Clarified With Regard to Statutory Process for Forming Jury: The objective statutory procedures established by the Legislature for the random selection of jurors are intended to protect a defendant's fundamental right to a fair and impartial jury and must be substantially complied with. Under Montana case law, the substantial compliance standard is not an absolute rule inasmuch as it permits minor deviations from statutory procedure. These technical deviations do not constitute a substantial failure to comply and therefore do not give rise to a presumption of prejudice. In clarifying the substantial compliance standard, the Supreme Court took guidance from federal case law developed under the federal Jury Selection and Service Act of 1968, 28 U.S.C. 1861, et seq. In order to establish a violation under the federal Act, a defendant must show that the government substantially failed to comply with the methods set forth by statute for jury selection. Substantial failure has been construed as a violation that contravenes one of two basic principles: (1) random selection of jurors; and (2) determination of juror disqualification, excuses, exemptions, and exclusion on the basis of objective criteria. A successful challenge to the jury panel may be founded only on a material departure from the law, a deviation amounting to more than a technical irregularity. Thus, a substantial or material statutory departure that affects the random nature or objectivity of the jury selection process establishes a violation independently of the departure's consequences in an individual case, while a technical or nonmaterial violation constitutes nonprejudicial error under the substantial compliance standard. St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204, 57 St. Rep. 214 (2000), overruling St. v. Robbins, 1998 MT 297, 292 M 23, 971 P2d 359, 55 St. Rep. 1213 (1998).

Telephone Jury-Summoning Procedure Violative of Statutory Selection Process — Showing of Substantial Compliance, Not Prejudice, Required — Reversible Error: Lamere, charged with killing Brownlee, filed a pretrial motion to strike the jury panel, but the motion was denied. The question on appeal was whether the District Court erred in concluding that Lamere failed to show that the telephone-dependent summoning procedure used in Cascade County prejudiced Lamere's substantial rights to a jury drawn and summoned according to law. The Supreme Court applied St. v. Robbins, 1998 MT 297, 292 M 23, 971 P2d 359, 55 St. Rep. 1213 (1998), in holding that the method of summoning jurors by telephone failed to comply with statutes governing the impaneling of a jury because jurors were neither served by mail nor served personally by the Sheriff. However, to warrant reversal, Robbins also required a showing of actual prejudice in addition to a substantial failure to comply with statutory law in drawing a jury panel. The Supreme Court chose to return to the per se rule of reversal for failure to substantially comply with statutes governing procurement of a trial jury, overruling the Robbins requirement of prejudice. The decision turned on the U.S. Supreme Court's contemporary distinction between trial error, to which harmless error review applies, and structural error, to which harmless error review is inapplicable (see Johnson v. U.S., 520 US 461, 137 L Ed 2d 718, 117 S Ct 1544 (1997), and its predecessors). In Lamere's case, the automatic rule of reversal prevailed because errors in the jury selection process are structural in nature, affecting the very framework within which a trial proceeds—errors that indelibly affect the essential fairness of the trial itself. A material failure to substantially comply with Montana statutes governing procurement of a trial jury may not be treated as harmless error because: (1) it precedes the presentation of evidence to the jury and cannot be analyzed as a mere trial error without resorting to speculation; (2) it precedes the trial process and cannot be quantitatively assessed for its prejudicial impact relative to the evidence introduced at trial; (3) it affects the very framework within which the trial proceeds; and (4) the impartiality of the jury goes to the very integrity of the justice system and because the right to an impartial jury is so essential to the concept of a fair trial that its violation cannot be considered harmless error. The substantial compliance standard vindicates not only the rights of the individual defendant but also the rights of the public in ensuring that the jury system remains inviolate, protecting a defendant's right to an impartial jury by encouraging reasonably strict compliance with statutory procedures intended to implement the fair cross-section guarantee of the sixth amendment of the U.S. Constitution. St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204, 57 St. Rep. 214 (2000), following Chapman v. Calif., 386 US 18, 17 L Ed 2d 705, 87 S Ct 824 (1967), Satterwhite v. Tex., 486 US 249, 100 L Ed 2d 284, 108 S Ct 1792 (1988), and Ariz. v. Fulminante, 499 US 279, 113 L Ed 302, 111 S Ct 1246 (1991), followed in St. v. Lopez, 2001 MT 97, 305 M 218, 26 P3d 745 (2001), and applied retroactively in Robbins v. St., 2002 MT 116, 310 M 10, 50 P3d 134 (2002).

Improper Telephonic Notification of Jury Selection — Harmless Error: Rather than the statutory method of summoning jurors, the District Court Clerk sought to notify available jurors by telephone. If the juror was unavailable by telephone, the Clerk moved to the next name on the list. Robbins objected to the procedure, asserting that the 5-day mandate of 46-16-112 was not applicable to his motion to strike the venire and that the trial court erred by concluding that the challenge to the summoning process was untimely. The District Court found that the Clerk had substantially complied with the relevant statutes, but the Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the Clerk failed to comply with 3-15-505 (now repealed). However, because Robbins failed to adduce any actual prejudice in the summoning procedure, the error was held to be harmless. St. v. Robbins, 1998 MT 297, 292 M 23, 971 P2d 359, 55 St. Rep. 1213 (1998), followed, with regard to improper use of telephonic summoning of jurors, but overruled, with regard to applicability of the harmless error standard in 46-20-701 and the requirement of an actual showing of prejudice to sustain a challenge to the jury panel under the substantial compliance standard, in St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204, 57 St. Rep. 214 (2000).

Right to Draw From Box No. 3: Where 70 jurors were drawn from jury box No. 1, there was no abuse of discretion in not drawing more, and no constitutional rights were violated by drawing from jury box No. 3 after the original panel was exhausted. St. v. Hay, 120 M 573, 194 P2d 232 (1948), distinguished in St. v. Porter, 125 M 503, 242 P2d 984 (1952).

Summoning Jury by Interested Sheriff: The facts that the victim of a homicide was a Deputy Sheriff and that the Sheriff was a witness for the state did not disqualify the latter or his deputies from summoning the jury on the theory that they were interested in the outcome of the prosecution. St. v. Heaston, 109 M 303, 97 P2d 330 (1939).

Summons for Jury Service: The fact that the summons under which jurors were ordered to appear for service as petit jurors contained a note appended thereto that if they had any reason why they should not serve they should return the summons personally to the judge and present their excuses to him did not render the summons illegal. State ex rel. School District v. Carroll, 87 M 45, 284 P 1008 (1930).

Completion of Panel: A jury panel or array selected for the trial of cases in the District Court is not complete until the jurors are accepted for service and their names are placed in the trial juror box; only then can it be said that the array is impaneled. State ex rel. Clark v. District Court, 86 M 509, 284 P 266 (1930).

Nonprejudicial Irregularity: Where the trial court, instead of ordering a panel of regular jurors drawn in a number deemed by it sufficient for the term had them drawn under three successive orders as occasion required, defendant was not in position to complain of the procedure followed, he not having been prejudiced thereby. St. v. Vuckovich, 61 M 480, 203 P 491 (1921).

Mandatory Provisions: Provisions governing the drawing of a jury panel are mandatory. St. v. Landry, 29 M 218, 74 P 418 (1903).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 241 in (1)(b) deleted last sentence that read: "A copy of the latest jury list and a description of the approved computerized random selection process must be kept in the office of the clerk of court and be available for public inspection during normal business hours"; deleted former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) If the jury commissioner is satisfied that any person whose name is drawn is deceased or mentally incompetent or has permanently moved from the county, the name of the person shall be omitted from the list and another name shall be drawn in its place. The reason for the omission shall be entered upon the minutes of the court. The same procedure shall be followed as often as may be necessary, until the number of names of jurors required has been drawn.

(4) No person may be asked to serve for more than one term during any year unless all persons on the list established under 3-15-402 have been drawn and there are no other qualified jurors available"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1985 Amendment: At beginning of (1)(a) inserted "If the drawing of jurors is conducted by means of a jury box" and substituted "jury commissioner" for "clerk"; inserted (1)(b) providing computerized database drawing procedure and requiring a copy of the latest jury list and description of selection process to be kept in Clerk of Court's office and available for public inspection; at end of (2) after "jury box", inserted alternative relating to computerized selection; and in (4) after "all", substituted "persons on the list established under 3-15-402" for "the numbers in the jury box".

1981 Amendment: Changed "judge" to "jury commissioner" in the last sentence of (1); changed "court" to "jury commissioner" at the beginning of (3).

Case Notes

Elimination of Prospective Jury Members Based on Alphabetized Jury List Not Violative of Random Jury Selection: The Clerk of the District Court was instructed to prepare a jury pool of 80 prospective jurors for Azure's trial. The clerk had three smaller pools available and combined two entire pools plus the first 21 names from the other pool. Because the names had been chosen and alphabetized by computer, only people with names beginning with A through K were chosen from the 21 names in the third pool. Azure contended that eliminating persons from a jury pool based on the first letter of their names did not constitute a random sample of prospective jurors and violated his right to a fair trial. The Supreme Court disagreed. Mere alphabetization of a randomly selected list of names and the elimination of some of those names based exclusively on where they fell in the alphabet did not constitute a systematic exclusion of a distinct identifiable class of the community and did not taint the random jury selection process. Because Azure could not establish that the selection method constituted a substantial failure to comply with jury procurement statutes, the trial court's decision to deny Azure's challenge to the venire was correct, and the Supreme Court affirmed. St. v. Azure, 2005 MT 328, 329 M 536, 125 P3d 1116 (2005), following St. v. Taylor, 168 M 142, 542 P2d 100 (1975), and distinguishing St. v. Lamere, 2000 MT 45, 298 M 358, 2 P3d 204 (2000).

Use of Capsules: When a jury venire was drawn from a jury box in which there had been inserted approximately 30,000 numbers inclosed in separate black capsules and approximately 15,000 numbered slips of unfolded paper not enclosed in capsules, it was proper to issue a Writ of Prohibition restraining the Judge from calling civil and criminal cases to be tried before the jury venire. State ex rel. Henningsen v. District Court, 136 M 354, 348 P2d 143 (1959).

Waiver of Irregularities: Appellant's objection was waived by failure to challenge the panel with knowledge or means of knowledge at hand of the alleged illegal procedure in drawing the jury. Ledger v. McKenzie, 107 M 335, 85 P2d 352 (1938).

Judge's Functions: The judge ordered the drawing of the jury and directed the Clerk during its progress under 3-15-502 (now repealed), as it read prior to the 1981 amendment. State ex rel. Breen v. District Court, 34 M 107, 85 P 870 (1906).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Reapportionment — Holdover Senators: Article V, sec. 3, Mont. Const., provides that state Senators be elected to 4-year terms on a staggered basis. The constitution and statutes provide no authority for changing Senators' terms after reapportionment. The reapportionment plan is the responsibility of the Montana Districting and Apportionment Commission. The Commission has the inherent authority under Art. V, sec. 14, Mont. Const., to do what is necessary to implement a plan that complies with the state's laws. How to deal with holdover Senators is the responsibility of the Commission. The terms of office of members of the Montana State Senate who were elected in 1982 may not be shortened as a result of reapportionment and redistricting. 40 A.G. Op. 2 (1983).

Reapportionment Commission — Exclusive Power to Apportion Legislative and Congressional Districts: The Reapportionment Commission has the exclusive power to determine the size of the legislative houses and the geographical makeup of the legislative and congressional districts, subject only to the restrictions of Art. V, Mont. Const. 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

Constitutional Grant of Power to Apportion — Historical and Current: Prior to the adoption of the 1972 Montana Constitution, the apportionment power was granted to the Legislature. See Art. VI, 1889 Mont. Const. However, with the adoption of the new Constitution, the people of this state divested the Legislature of all power concerning apportionment of the Legislature, except for the power of recommendation in Art. V, sec. 14, 1972 Mont. Const. 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

Reapportionment Plan Becomes Law: Upon submission of the apportionment plan, proposed by the Reapportionment Commission, to the Secretary of State, the plan becomes law and all previous statutory provisions in conflict with that plan are, in effect, repealed. 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

Legislative Determination of Size of Legislative Assembly — Not Controlling: The Reapportionment Commission was not bound by a legislative determination of the size of the legislative assembly, and sections 43-106.6 and 43-106.7, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed by sec. 1, Ch. 14, L. 1975), enacted prior to the adoption of the 1972 Montana Constitution, are not controlling. (See 1987 amendment to 5-1-101.) 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

Contingent Effective Date: Section 7, Ch. 477, L. 1983, provided: "This act becomes effective October 1, 1985, if House Bill No. 151, which requires a constitutional amendment to accelerate Montana's congressional redistricting, is passed by the legislature and approved by the electorate. If the legislature does not pass House Bill No. 151 or the electorate does not approve the constitutional amendment, this act is void." House Bill No. 151 (Ch. 421, L. 1983) was approved by the electorate as Constitutional Amendment No. 14 at the election held Nov. 6, 1984, by a vote of 214,956 to 109,813.

Part Case Notes

No Authority of Legislature to Assign Holdover Senators Following Redistricting: The 2003 Districting and Apportionment Commission plan for redistricting House and Senate districts assigned holdover Senators who were elected under the old districting system to redrawn districts under the new system, and the Commission submitted the plan to the 2003 Legislature for recommendations. In response, the Legislature passed 5-1-116 (now repealed), granting to itself the power to assign holdover Senators to districts for the remainder of their terms and prohibiting the Commission from making those assignments. The Legislature then passed further legislation implementing its recommendations. Three of the holdover Senators challenged the legislative assignments. The District Court declared 5-1-116 (now repealed) and the implementing legislation unconstitutional, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Under Art. V, sec. 14, Mont. Const., the mandate that the Districting and Apportionment Commission effect redistricting is self-executing, and the power to assign districts for holdover Senators is historically an inherent part of the redistricting process. The constitutional grant of redistricting power to the Commission constitutes a denial of any latitude to the Legislature to invoke its plenary powers. Thus, the 2003 legislation designed to transfer the power to assign holdover Senators from the Commission to the Legislature was unconstitutional and of no force and effect. Wheat v. Brown, 2004 MT 33, 320 M 15, 85 P3d 765 (2004). See also Cargo v. Paulus, 635 P2d 367 (Oreg. 1981).

2002 Redistricting Plan — Legislative Attempts to Change Plan Unconstitutional: Following legislative action pertaining to legislative redistricting, the Commission tendered its plan to the Secretary of State for filing, but the Secretary of State refused to file it. The District Court found that the legislative enactments were unconstitutional and void. The Secretary of State is required to file the Commission's plan, and refusal to do so violates the Montana Constitution. The Secretary of State does not have standing to seek a declaratory judgment on the constitutionality of the Commission's plan. Brown v. Mont. Districting & Apportionment Comm'n, Cause No. ADV-2003-72, First Judicial District Decision and Order, July 2003.

1992 Redistricting Plan — Totality of Circumstances — Lower Court Decision Not Clearly Erroneous: The District Court did not clearly err in determining that the totality of circumstances did not establish vote dilution in the districts where plaintiffs resided. Old Person v. Brown, 312 F3d 1036 (9th Cir. 2002).

1992 Redistricting Plan — No Vote Dilution — Unavailability of Adequate Remedy: On remand to District Court, the court found that plaintiffs had limited standing and failed to show vote dilution in specific legislative districts where they resided. Even if vote dilution had been shown, the claim failed because of unavailability of an adequate remedy because of fast-approaching 2002 elections, the last elections to be conducted under the 1992 plan. Old Person v. Brown, 182 F. Supp. 2d 1002 (D.C. Mont. 2002), affirmed in 312 F3d 1036 (9th Cir. 2002).

1992 Redistricting Plan — District Court Error in Application of Third Prong of Gingles Test: American Indian plaintiffs filed an action in District Court alleging that the 1992 redistricting plan for Montana's state House of Representatives and Senate diluted the voting strength of American Indians in violation of sec. 2 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and that the Montana Districting and Apportionment Commission adopted the plan with a discriminatory purpose, also in violation of the Voting Rights Act. In Old Person v. Cooney, No. CV-96-00004-PGH (D.C. Mont. 1999), the District Court rejected all claims by the plaintiffs, ruling that the Commission did not discriminate against Montana Indians and that the 1992 redistricting plan did not have the effect of discriminating against the state's Indian voters because the plaintiffs had not proved that non-Indians voted as a bloc to defeat Indian-preferred candidates. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit Court affirmed the District Court's ruling that the plaintiffs had not demonstrated that Montana's 1992 redistricting plan was adopted with a discriminatory purpose in violation of the Voting Rights Act. However, the Ninth Circuit Court reversed and remanded the lower court's decision, ruling that the District Court erred in its application of the third prong of the Gingles test and that this error resulted in a clearly erroneous finding that white bloc voting was not legally significant. The Ninth Circuit Court also concluded that the District Court erred in finding proportionality between the number of legislative districts in which American Indians constituted an effective majority and the American Indian share of the voting age population in Montana. Because this error may have affected the District Court's ultimate finding that, in the totality of circumstances, no dilution of American Indian voting strength had occurred, the Ninth Circuit Court reversed the District Court's judgment and remanded the case for further proceedings. On remand, a trial date of November 2001 was set to consider evidence pertaining strictly to the Ninth Circuit Court's remand relating to the District Court's previous finding of proportionality and whether, considering the totality of the circumstances, Montana's 1992 redistricting plan diluted American Indian voting strength. Old Person v. Cooney, 230 F3d 1113, (9th Cir. 2000) (Old Person I).

Application of 1983 Reapportionment Commission Criteria — Balancing of Criteria: The 1983 Montana Districting and Apportionment Commission established five criteria to follow in redistricting that addressed governmental boundaries, geographic boundaries, communities of interest, consideration of existing district boundaries, and an attempt to stay within a 5% plus or minus deviation from the ideal district population. The court held that these criteria were considerations and that conflicts between them as they existed within a district or between districts must be balanced in arriving at a plan embracing the entire state. The Commission had to interpret its own criteria, such as what constituted a community of interest and the possible ripple effects of any particular change; thus, when the Commission made a good faith effort to balance the criteria, the reapportionment plan could not be struck down on the contention that the Commission failed to exactly follow its own criteria. McBride v. Mahoney, 573 F. Supp. 913, 40 St. Rep. 1907 (D.C. Mont. 1983).

1983 Reapportionment Plan — Total Population Deviation Over Ten Percent Upheld — Legitimate State Interests: In the 1983 reapportionment plan, the total population deviation between House districts was 10.94% and between Senate districts was 10.18%, which created a prima facie case of discrimination because the totals exceeded 10%. To be upheld, the deviations must be justified by legitimate state objectives. The court determined that legitimate state objectives were stated in criteria established by the Montana Districting and Apportionment Commission. The criteria addressed governmental boundaries, geographic boundaries, communities of interest, consideration of existing district boundaries, and an attempt to stay within a 5% plus or minus deviation from the ideal population. McBride v. Mahoney, 573 F. Supp. 913, 40 St. Rep. 1907 (D.C. Mont. 1983).

Projected Population as Basis for Reapportionment: A reapportionment plan will not be struck down for failure to consider projected population growth when the Montana Districting and Apportionment Commission did not consider population projections and it was not presented with data that would have enabled it to apply population projections in a systematic manner. McBride v. Mahoney, 573 F. Supp. 913, 40 St. Rep. 1907 (D.C. Mont. 1983).

When Plan to Be Submitted — Recess and Reconvening: The Districting and Apportionment Commission is required under 5-1-109 to submit its plan to the 47th Legislature if census data is available in December 1980. The Legislature may recess and reconvene at a later date and still be within its regular session to receive and make recommendations, according to 5-1-110, on the Commission's plan. 38 A.G. Op. 99 (1980).

Procedure for Submitting Reapportionment Plan: The reapportionment plan should be submitted, with a cover letter signed by each Commission member, to each house of the Legislature by the 10th day of the legislative session, and within 30 days of the return of the reapportionment plan from the Legislature, the final plan should be submitted, with a cover letter signed by each Commission member, to the Secretary of State for filing. 35 A.G. Op. 50 (1973).

Reapportionment Commission — Exclusive Power to Apportion Legislative and Congressional Districts: The Reapportionment Commission has the exclusive power to determine the size of the legislative houses and the geographical makeup of the legislative and congressional districts, subject only to the restrictions of Art. V, Mont. Const. 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

Constitutional Grant of Power to Apportion — Historical and Current: Prior to the adoption of the 1972 Montana Constitution, the apportionment power was granted to the Legislature. See Art. VI, 1889 Mont. Const. However, with the adoption of the new Constitution, the people of this state divested the Legislature of all power concerning apportionment of the Legislature, except for the power of recommendation in Art. V, sec. 14, 1972 Mont. Const. 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

Reapportionment Plan Becomes Law: Upon submission of the apportionment plan, proposed by the Reapportionment Commission, to the Secretary of State, the plan becomes law and all previous statutory provisions in conflict with that plan are, in effect, repealed. 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

Legislative Determination of Size of Legislative Assembly — Not Controlling: The Reapportionment Commission was not bound by a legislative determination of the size of the legislative assembly, and sections 43-106.6 and 43-106.7, R.C.M. 1947 (repealed by sec. 1, Ch. 14, L. 1975), enacted prior to the adoption of the 1972 Montana Constitution, are not controlling. (See 1987 amendment to 5-1-101.) 35 A.G. Op. 12 (1973).

5-1-115. Redistricting criteria.

Coordination — Applicability: Section 1, Ch. 3, L. 2003, and sec. 1, Ch. 546, L. 2003, both enacted redistricting criteria. The criteria contained in sec. 1, Ch. 3, L. 2003, are also contained in and expanded upon in sec. 1, Ch. 546, L. 2003. Therefore, the code commissioner has codified both sections as 5-1-115. Section 1, Ch. 3, L. 2003, was effective February 4, 2003, and applies retroactively to any legislative redistricting plan of the districting and apportionment commission that was not filed with the secretary of state on February 4, 2003. Section 11(3), Ch. 546, L. 2003, a coordination section, repealed Ch. 3, L. 2003, effective October 1, 2003. However, sec. 12, Ch. 546, L. 2003, provides that Ch. 546, L. 2003, applies to proceedings begun after October 1, 2003, for the redistricting based on the 2010 decennial census. Therefore, the apparent result of sec. 11(3), Ch. 546, L. 2003, is to apply the repeal of Ch. 3, L. 2003, only to proceedings for redistricting based on the 2010 decennial census.

Section 1, Ch. 3, L. 2003, provided: "Redistricting criteria. (1) In the drawing of legislative districts, the districting and apportionment commission shall comply with the following criteria:

(a) the districts must be compact and contiguous; and

(b) the districts must be as equal as practicable.

(2) For the purposes of this section, "as equal as practicable" means within a plus or minus 1% relative deviation from the ideal population of a district as calculated from information provided by the federal decennial census."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 278, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Constitution and the verbatim transcripts of the 1972 Constitutional Convention do not address the assignment of holdover senators to districts following the drawing of new legislative districts pursuant to Article V, section 14, of the Montana Constitution; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court has consistently held that the Constitution is a limit on rather than a grant of legislative authority, beginning with State ex rel. Evans v. Stewart, 53 Mont. 18, 161 P. 309 (1916); and

WHEREAS, in spite of the lack of a constitutional limit on legislative authority, the Legislature has acquiesced in the assignment of holdover senators by the Districting and Apportionment Commission because of the fair and nonpartisan assignments that have traditionally occurred; and

WHEREAS, the districting plan submitted to the 58th Legislature for review and comment proposed to assign holdover senators on partisan basis for future partisan gain; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature enacted Senate Bill No. 258 as Chapter 4, Laws of 2003, to authorize the Legislature to assign holdover senators and prohibit the Districting and Apportionment Commission from assigning holdover senators prior to the Districting and Apportionment Commission's adoption of its final plan."

Repealer: Section 1, Ch. 278, L. 2003, provided: "Section 3 of the districting and apportionment plan of 2003, the transition provision assigning holdover senators to new legislative districts, is repealed." Effective April 9, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 278, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to the districting and apportionment plan adopted by the districting and apportionment commission on February 5, 2003."

Attorney General's Opinions

Applicability of Term Limit Provisions to Appointed Senators — Definitions: Regarding the status of state Senators appointed upon the death or resignation of the incumbent to fill an unexpired term of office that began in 1991, the word "terms" refers to time served in terms beginning or ending before or after January 1993. The word does not refer to a particular date and does not simply exclude or include years prior to the date, but rather includes time by reference to the beginning or ending date of a term of office. Further, the word "year" does not refer strictly to a calendar year of 12 months when used in the context of legislative terms of office because a term does not necessarily begin on the first day of a calendar year. Applying the word "year" in such a strict manner would lead to an unintended, absurd result. A term of office for a state Senator is 4 years beginning on the first Monday in January in the year following the general election. If a Senator accedes to office by appointment or election, that Senator serves to complete the term of the person originally elected. Thus, for a Senator continually serving from the date of appointment or election to fill the unexpired portion of a term that began when the original incumbent took office in 1991, the first term of office counted toward the term limit is the term beginning in January 1995. 47 A.G. Op. 9 (1997).

Reapportionment — Holdover Senators: Article V, sec. 3, Mont. Const., provides that state Senators be elected to 4-year terms on a staggered basis. The constitution and statutes provide no authority for changing Senators' terms after reapportionment. The reapportionment plan is the responsibility of the Montana Districting and Apportionment Commission. The Commission has the inherent authority under Art. V, sec. 14, Mont. Const., to do what is necessary to implement a plan that complies with the state's laws. How to deal with holdover Senators is the responsibility of the Commission. The terms of office of members of the Montana State Senate who were elected in 1982 may not be shortened as a result of reapportionment and redistricting. 40 A.G. Op. 2 (1983).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Case Notes

Constitutional Convention Delegate: State and local officers who are prohibited from holding more than one office may not serve as delegates to a State Constitutional Convention. A delegate to a constitutional convention is a "state officer" holding a public office of a civil nature. 42nd Legislative Assembly v. Lennon, 156 M 416, 481 P2d 330 (1971).

Definition of "Civil Office": A position of employment is a civil office if: (1) it must be created by the Constitution or the Legislature or a municipality pursuant to authority delegated to it; (2) it must possess a delegation of a portion of the sovereign power of government to be exercised for benefit of the public; (3) the powers and duties must be defined, either directly or impliedly, by the Legislature or through legislative authority; (4) the duties must be performed independently and without control of a superior power, unless they are those of an inferior or subordinate office, created or authorized by the Legislature and by it placed under the control of a superior office or body; and (5) it must have permanency and continuity, and the incumbent must take and file an oath, hold a commission, and give an official bond, if required by proper authority. State ex rel. Barney v. Hawkins, 79 M 506, 257 P 411 (1927).

Attorney General's Opinions

Legislator Prohibited From Appointment to Board of Review: Membership on the Board of Review established in 30-16-302 is considered a public office of a civil nature pursuant to the five-part test in State ex rel. Barney v. Hawkins, 79 M 506, 257 P 411 (1927). Therefore, Art. V, sec. 9, Mont. Const., and this section prohibit the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives from appointing a legislator as a member of the Board of Review, including appointment as a nonvoting member. Because of the prohibition against the appointment of a legislator to a civil office during the legislator's term of office, the President and Speaker may appoint only a nonlegislator as a member of the Board of Review. 49 A.G. Op. 15 (2002).

Mayor Prohibited From Serving as Legislator: An elected Mayor holds a "public office of a civil nature" as defined in State ex rel. Barney v. Hawkins, 79 M 506, 257 P 411 (1927). The office of Mayor is vested with a portion of the sovereign power of government which is executive in character. A Mayor is therefore prohibited by Art. V, sec. 9, Mont. Const., from serving as a member of the Legislature while serving as Mayor. 41 A.G. Op. 79 (1986).

Municipal Officer Holding "Public Office of Civil Nature" Disqualified From Service in Legislature: A municipal officer who holds "public office of a civil nature", as that phrase is defined in State ex rel. Barney v. Hawkins, 79 M 506, 257 P 411 (1927), is prohibited by Art. V, sec. 9, Mont. Const., from serving as a member of the Legislature during his continuance in municipal office. 40 A.G. Op. 46 (1984).

Study Authorized: Chapter 573, L. 1987, established a commission to study the reorganization and improvement of the Legislative Branch. The commission terminates December 31, 1988.

Part Case Notes

Political Caucuses Considered Person Subject to Suit: A political party caucus is by definition considered an unincorporated association or body of two or more persons having a joint or common interest. Drawing no distinction between presession and session caucuses, the Supreme Court held, on the basis of the plain language in former Rule 4A, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), that a political party caucus is a person subject to court jurisdiction. Assoc. Press v. Mont. Senate Republican Caucus, 286 M 172, 951 P2d 65, 54 St. Rep. 1360 (1997).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 in (1) in first sentence substituted reference to employee earning $10.33 an hour for "of an entry grade 10 classified state employee in effect" and inserted second sentence regarding adjustment of hourly rate. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

Applicability: Section 25(2), Ch. 81, L. 2007, provided: "(2) [Sections 16 and 17] [5-2-301 and 5-2-302] apply to legislators for the legislative session convening in January 2009."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 553 in (4) in fourth sentence substituted "legislators are entitled to a new daily rate for those days" for "the average is the new daily rate for legislators for those days" and inserted fifth sentence stating that the new daily rate is the daily rate for the prior session increased by the percentage increase determined by the survey, a cost of living increase, or 5%. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 44 in (1) at beginning deleted "Except as provided in subsection (8)"; and deleted former (8) that read: "(8) In lieu of the salary provided for in subsection (1) and the expense allowance provided for in subsection (4), a legislator may receive remuneration for services performed during a legislative session. A legislator choosing to receive remuneration for services performed shall file a request to receive payment under this subsection with the legislative services division. A legislator exercising the option to receive remuneration for services performed may not receive more remuneration than legislators paid pursuant to subsections (1) and (4). Remuneration for services performed must be reduced by an amount a day equal to the daily expense allowance for a legislator established under this section when the legislature recesses for more than 3 days". Amendment effective March 8, 1999.

Chapter 558 in (1) increased legislators' pay from grade 8 to grade 10; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 417 in (3), near beginning, substituted "a daily allowance" for "$50 a day"; in (4), in first sentence after "November 15", deleted "1996, and prior to December 15, 1996" and inserted third sentence providing "The department shall include only states with specific daily allowances in the calculation of the average"; in (8), in fourth sentence, substituted "reduced by an amount a day equal to the daily expense allowance for a legislator established under this section" for "reduced $50 a day"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 455 in (3) inserted "Subject to subsection (4)"; inserted (4) requiring Department of Administration to conduct salary survey; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 545 in (6), near end of introductory clause, substituted "legislative services division" for "office of the legislative council"; in (8), at end of second sentence, substituted "legislative services division" for "accounting office of the legislative council"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1995 Transition: Section 81, Ch. 545, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The members of the legislative council, as provided in 5-11-101, the members of the legislative finance committee, as provided in 5-12-202, the members of the legislative audit committee, as provided in 5-13-202, and the members of the environmental quality council, as provided in 5-16-101, must be appointed as soon as possible following [the effective date of this section] [effective April 27, 1995.].

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

(3) Personnel and property of the environmental quality council are transferred to the legislative services division effective July 1, 1995."

1991 Amendment: In (1) substituted "entry grade 8" for "grade 8, step 2"; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

1989 Amendment: In (1), at beginning, inserted exception clause; and inserted (7) allowing legislator to receive remuneration in lieu of salary, requiring legislator to file request for such payment, limiting amount to total of salary and expenses, and allowing for reduction during recess. Amendment effective January 10, 1989.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 1, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to January 1, 1989."

1986 Amendment: In first sentence of (1) substituted "grade 8" for "grade 10" and inserted "in effect when the regular session of the legislature in which they serve is convened under 5-2-103" (effective January 2, 1987).

Title and Effective Date of 1986 Amendment: The title to Ch. 9, Sp. L. June 1986, read: "AN ACT RETURNING THE SALARY OF LEGISLATORS TO THE LEVEL IN EFFECT PRIOR TO THE JANUARY 1, 1987, EFFECTIVE DATE OF THE SALARY RAISE ENACTED BY SECTION 3, CHAPTER 693, LAWS OF 1985; AMENDING SECTION 5-2-301, MCA; AND PROVIDING AN EFFECTIVE DATE." Under sec. 2, Ch. 9, the act was effective January 2, 1987. Thus Ch. 693, L. 1985, went into effect on January 1, 1987, but was nullified by Ch. 9, Sp. L. June 1986, on the next day.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 8 deleted former (3)(b) that provided mileage allowance "for one additional round trip to their place of residence during each session" without submittal of a claim; in (5) near beginning, inserted clause requiring submittal of claim to legislative council and deleted identical clause from end of (5)(a), thus making claim submittal applicable to (5)(b); in (5)(a) increased additional round trips subject to claim submittal requirement from two to three; and inserted (5)(b) relating to additional round trips during special session.

Chapter 693 in (1) increased salary rate from that commensurate to grade 8, step 2, to that commensurate to grade 10, step 2 (effective January 1, 1987); inserted (2) allowing legislators to serve for no salary; and in (3) increased legislative expense allowance from $45 to $50 per day during legislative session.

1981 Amendments: Chapters 7 and 605 increased legislative expense allowance from $40 to $45 during a session.

Chapter 144 inserted subsection (4) allowing two additional trips.

1983 Amendment: Inserted introductory clause of (2); inserted (2)(b) relating to voting formula for assigning vacancy in seat of holdover Senators; and inserted (2)(c) relating to determination of election held under subsection (2)(b).

Attorney General's Opinions

Applicability of Term Limit Provisions to Appointed Senators — Definitions: Regarding the status of state Senators appointed upon the death or resignation of the incumbent to fill an unexpired term of office that began in 1991, the word "terms" refers to time served in terms beginning or ending before or after January 1993. The word does not refer to a particular date and does not simply exclude or include years prior to the date, but rather includes time by reference to the beginning or ending date of a term of office. Further, the word "year" does not refer strictly to a calendar year of 12 months when used in the context of legislative terms of office because a term does not necessarily begin on the first day of a calendar year. Applying the word "year" in such a strict manner would lead to an unintended, absurd result. A term of office for a state Senator is 4 years beginning on the first Monday in January in the year following the general election. If a Senator accedes to office by appointment or election, that Senator serves to complete the term of the person originally elected. Thus, for a Senator continually serving from the date of appointment or election to fill the unexpired portion of a term that began when the original incumbent took office in 1991, the first term of office counted toward the term limit is the term beginning in January 1995. 47 A.G. Op. 9 (1997).

2013 Amendment: Chapter 126 in (1) in first sentence after "an individual" substituted "must" for "may" and after "5-2-402" deleted "if the legislature is called into special session" and in second sentence after "appointment" substituted "continues" for "may run only"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 29, 2013.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 242 in (1)(a) after "vacancy occurs" substituted "85 days" for "75 days"; in (1)(b) near beginning after "vacancy occurs on or after the" substituted "85th day" for "75th day". Amendment effective January 1, 2012.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 336 in (1) at end of first sentence after "individual" inserted reference to appointment if legislature in special session and at beginning of second sentence inserted "However, the appointment may run only until a person" and at end inserted "and sworn into office"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2003.

1989 Amendment: Near beginning of (1) changed "75 days" to "85 days"; near end of (1)(b) changed "65th day" to "85th day"; and in (2) changed "75th day" to "85th day".

1985 Amendment: Throughout section substituted references to 75 days for references to 50 days; and near end of (1)(b) changed "40th day" to "65th day".

Attorney General's Opinions

Applicability of Term Limit Provisions to Appointed Senators — Definitions: Regarding the status of state Senators appointed upon the death or resignation of the incumbent to fill an unexpired term of office that began in 1991, the word "terms" refers to time served in terms beginning or ending before or after January 1993. The word does not refer to a particular date and does not simply exclude or include years prior to the date, but rather includes time by reference to the beginning or ending date of a term of office. Further, the word "year" does not refer strictly to a calendar year of 12 months when used in the context of legislative terms of office because a term does not necessarily begin on the first day of a calendar year. Applying the word "year" in such a strict manner would lead to an unintended, absurd result. A term of office for a state Senator is 4 years beginning on the first Monday in January in the year following the general election. If a Senator accedes to office by appointment or election, that Senator serves to complete the term of the person originally elected. Thus, for a Senator continually serving from the date of appointment or election to fill the unexpired portion of a term that began when the original incumbent took office in 1991, the first term of office counted toward the term limit is the term beginning in January 1995. 47 A.G. Op. 9 (1997).

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 336 in (2) after "appointee" deleted "and the 15-day period of 5-2-402(3)", substituted "term of office commences" for "vacancy occurs", before "day" deleted "first", and at end after "day" substituted reference to day appointee takes oath of office for "of the term to which his predecessor was elected"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2003.

Part 5
Legislative Branch Consolidation

1995 Transition: Section 81, Ch. 545, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The members of the legislative council, as provided in 5-11-101, the members of the legislative finance committee, as provided in 5-12-202, the members of the legislative audit committee, as provided in 5-13-202, and the members of the environmental quality council, as provided in 5-16-101, must be appointed as soon as possible following [the effective date of this section] [effective April 27, 1995].

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

(3) Personnel and property of the environmental quality council are transferred to the legislative services division effective July 1, 1995."

2007 Amendment: Chapter 5 in (1) at beginning of second sentence inserted "Subject to 5-5-227"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 13, 2007.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 35 inserted (2) allowing standing committees to meet prior to special session and requiring notice; inserted (3) allowing compensation for presession work prior to special session; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 13, 2001.

Attorney General's Opinions

Power of Legislative Standing Committee to Meet During Special Session to Investigate Matter Not Within Call: There is no express or implied constitutional or statutory limitation circumscribing the interim investigative activity of a legislative standing committee, including activity during a special session. Therefore, a standing committee of the Legislature not formally discharged prior to the final adjournment of the preceding session may meet during a special session for the purpose of gathering information and taking testimony on a matter not within the call of the special session. 43 A.G. Op. 60 (1990).

Majority of Members, Not Majority of Each House, Required to Call Special Session: Under Art. V, sec. 6, Mont. Const., a majority of all of the members of the Legislature is required to request that the Legislature be convened in a special session. A majority of each house is not required to request that a special session be convened. 41 A.G. Op. 27 (1985), overruling 35 A.G. Op. 6 (1973).

BILLS

Chapter Case Notes

Statutory Expansion of Jurisdiction: When statutes are enacted by the Legislature that expand previously enacted statutes by broadening the jurisdiction of an administrative agency, the statutes are to be construed in relation to one another, and for construction purposes, considered as forming one consistent body of law. Gwynn v. Eureka, 178 M 191, 582 P2d 1262 (1978).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Statement of Intent Not to Be Used in Interpretation of Clearly Written Statute: Chapter 452, L. 1981, made several substantive changes in the laws relating to health service corporations. The bill's statement of intent, adopted under 5-4-404 (now repealed), stated that certain provisions of the bill were to be implemented only if additional funds were appropriated for their implementation. The Attorney General applied the rule of statutory interpretation that when legislative intent can be determined from a reading of a statute, it is improper to go further in construing the meaning of that statute, and held that the clear meaning of the law must be carried out, regardless of the contents of the statement of intent. 39 A.G. Op. 68 (1982).

Case Notes

Supreme Court Without Authority to Modify Text of Initiative Measure — Authority of Court to Modify Ballot Statements — Attorney General's Fiscal Statement Held Sufficient — No Prejudice Shown: Harrington brought an original proceeding in the Montana Supreme Court challenging the Attorney General's statements of purpose and implication because those statements did not contain references to "consumer loan licensees", as did the text of the initiated measure. The Supreme Court held that under 13-27-316 the court had no authority to modify the text of the initiative but that under 13-27-316(3)(c)(ii) the court could reform the ballot statements to include the phrase "consumer loan licensees" and certify those statements to the Secretary of State. Harrington also objected to the content of the fiscal statement prepared by the Attorney General and objected to the fact that the Attorney General had apparently not consulted with the Department of Revenue in preparing the statement. The Supreme Court found the fiscal note sufficient because the statute did not specify the content of the note and because the Attorney General had consulted with the Division of Banking and Finance of the Department of Administration in preparing the note. The court also pointed out that Harrington failed to point out any language in the statement of implication or the fiscal statement that prejudiced him. Mont. Consumer Fin. Ass'n v. St., 2010 MT 185, 357 Mont. 237, 238 P.3d 765.

District Court's Rewriting of Attorney General's Statements Explaining Initiative Proposal Reversed When Statements Accurate: Plaintiff group sought an initiative petition to include an additional constitutional limit on legislative appropriations to an amount to be determined by applying a formula based on population growth and inflation unless an increase was approved by the electorate. As required, the Attorney General prepared statements explaining the purpose of the measure, the implications of a vote for and against the measure, and a fiscal statement. Plaintiffs were dissatisfied with the statements and filed a complaint. The District Court determined that all the statements were inaccurate, rewrote the statements, and ordered that the court's statements rather than the Attorney General's be placed on the ballot should the measure qualify. The Attorney General appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Employing the rules of construction developed under State ex rel. Wenzel v. Murray, 178 M 441, 585 P2d 633 (1978), the Supreme Court held that the District Court was incorrect in determining that the statement of purpose was inaccurate and omitted salient provisions of the measure. It is not the job of a court to add to the requirements of 13-27-312 that to be accurate, a statement of the purpose of an initiative must include a description of how it can be enforced or a statement of when it will become effective. Without engaging in a comparison of the statements, the Supreme Court held that the Attorney General's statement of purpose was adequate to meet the statutory requirements to provide a true and impartial explanation of the proposed ballot issue in plain, easily understood language. Likewise, the statement of implication and the fiscal statement were adequate, if not perfect, satisfied statutory requirements, and were not confusing or misleading, and the Supreme Court ordered that the issue be placed on the ballot containing the statements prepared by the Attorney General. Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 513 inserted (3) concerning appointment to joint subcommittees being made within 30 days of notification of creation of a subcommittee; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 25, 1995.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 513, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislative Council is assigned the responsibility of effectively and efficiently utilizing the staff and financial resources within its purview; and

WHEREAS, the Legislative Council is also assigned the responsibility of determining priorities for interim studies to be conducted by interim joint subcommittees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislative Council has diligently considered ways of improving certain procedures, including the appointment of members to interim joint subcommittees."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 301, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, the Joint Interim Subcommittee on Children and Families, established by House Joint Resolution No. 54 of the 1991 Regular Session, studied the following issues: the existing and the ideal continuum of services for children and families, especially programs for those families that are at risk of out-of-home placement of their children; the feasibility of instituting early identification and intervention programs for at-risk families; interagency coordination of programs and services for at-risk children and families in Montana; and the feasibility of establishing a statutory legislative oversight committee to review and monitor public and private programs and services for children and families;

WHEREAS, the Joint Interim Subcommittee on Children and Families concluded its study assignments by recommending numerous policy and programmatic changes related to the above issues, including the establishment of an oversight committee that could monitor the implementation of legislative recommendations or coordinate further study of emerging issues related to programs for children and families in Montana.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it is appropriate to establish a joint oversight committee on children and families."

Establishment of Joint Oversight Subcommittee on Children and Families: Section 1, Ch. 301, L. 1993, provided: "(1) There is a joint oversight committee on children and families [now children, families, health, and human services committee] composed of eight members appointed as follows:

(a) four members of the house of representatives, not more than two of whom may be from one political party, appointed by the speaker; and

(b) four members of the senate, not more than two of whom may be from one political party, appointed by the committee on committees.

(2) In case of a vacancy, a replacement must be selected in the manner of the original appointment.

(3) Members are entitled to salary and expenses as provided in 5-2-302.

(4) The oversight committee may request staff assistance from the legislative council, which may be provided within limits established by the council, given other priorities and responsibilities.

(5) Any agency providing services or funding for a program or activity for children and families shall provide assistance and information upon request of the oversight committee."

Duties of Joint Oversight Subcommittee on Children and Families: Section 2, Ch. 301, L. 1993, provided: "The oversight committee shall:

(1) examine public and private programs, services, and planning for children and families for the purpose of identifying duplications, inefficiencies, and any unmet needs within those programs, services, and plans;

(2) review federal, state, local, and private funds available to state and local jurisdictions for programs and services for children and families and consider feasible methods of refinancing of those resources to maximize overall funding for existing and new programs;

(3) monitor implementation of any legislation that mandates interagency coordination of programs and services for children and families and study ways to improve coordination and collaboration among public and private human service providers at all levels of government in Montana;

(4) monitor implementation of any pilot programs designed to provide early identification of and family-based support for families that may be at risk of child abuse and neglect and at risk of out-of-home placement of their children; and

(5) report the results of its study in a written report to the 54th legislature no later than November 30, 1994. The oversight committee shall also provide copies of its report to the governor and appropriate state agencies."

Appropriation: Section 3, Ch. 301, L. 1993, provided an appropriation to support the activities of the Joint Oversight Committee on Children and Families (now Children, Families, Health, and Human Services Committee).

1981 Amendment: Substituted "Senate joint subcommittee members shall be appointed by the committee on committees. House joint subcommittee members shall be appointed by the speaker" for "Joint subcommittee members shall be appointed by the legislative council. The chairmen of the appropriate standing committees in each body shall recommend suggested members to serve on each subcommittee. The legislative council shall consider the recommendations, but is not bound thereby" at the beginning of the section; changed "shall" to "may" in the third sentence.

K-12 Public School Funding Study: Section 1, Ch. 580, L. 2001, provided: "Section 1. K-12 public school funding study — duties — hearings. (1) The governor and the superintendent of public instruction shall, within the provisions of the Montana constitution, conduct a study of funding for K-12 public schools, including but not limited to:

(a) analyzing the factors currently in law that are used to compute budget authority for schools to determine if additional factors or changes in those factors are necessary to equitably provide budget authority to public schools;

(b) determining the appropriate allocation of funding to adequately fund elementary, middle school, seventh and eighth grade, and high school programs;

(c) determining if a statewide salary schedule for school staff is possible under the constitutional provision for trustee management of school districts;

(d) determining if the current budget computations are prohibiting or discouraging local decisions to consolidate school districts;

(e) determining the adequacy and equity of the current statutory authority for public schools to access the funds necessary to provide facilities for school districts and state support for school facility costs;

(f) determining the adequacy and equity of current funding for pupil transportation;

(g) determining if appropriate disparity exists in the current local tax effort necessary to fund school districts;

(h) analyzing the current allocation of state funds to public schools to determine its equity;

(i) analyzing the relationship between increasing staffing levels in the classroom in the face of declining enrollment and the resulting financial impacts to school districts and the state;

(j) analyzing appropriate means for school districts to calculate ANB regarding nontraditional, part-time, or distance-learning students;

(k) determining if issues not listed in this section are affecting the equity of school funding in Montana and analyzing those issues;

(l) analyzing the school district structure that currently exists and determining if reducing the number of districts could provide efficiency in the operations of the districts and make existing resources available for classroom activities; and

(m) determining if the existence of 25 budgeted and nonbudgeted funds unreasonably restricts local decisionmakers.

(2) The governor, after consultation with the superintendent of public instruction, shall prepare and submit a preliminary report by December 31, 2001, on the findings and recommendations of the study to the education interim committee.

(3) (a) The education interim committee shall hold hearings and take public comment on the preliminary report prepared and submitted by the governor. The hearings may be held at various locations around the state to facilitate public comment on the governor's report.

(b) by August 1, 2002, the education interim committee shall provide to the governor for the governor's consideration a summary of the hearings and recommendations for changes to the report.

(c) The education interim committee may make any other recommendations on school funding that the committee considers appropriate. The education interim committee shall submit its recommendations and, if appropriate, prepare legislation for consideration by the 2003 legislature.

(4) Upon receipt of the summary and recommendations from the education interim committee, the governor shall issue a final report and, if appropriate, prepare legislation for consideration by the 2003 legislature.

(5) The governor may:

(a) appoint one or more advisory councils pursuant to 2-15-122 to assist in conducting the study;

(b) coordinate with any other legislative interim committee, as appropriate;

(c) request assistance from other legislative and executive branch agencies; and

(d) in addition to any legislative appropriation, accept donations for purposes of the study required in this section."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 419, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, oil and natural gas production machinery and equipment, gathering lines, other related property, and transmission lines make up a significant portion of the property tax base of many taxing units in the state; and

WHEREAS, continuous oil and natural gas property that is operated in more than one county or more than one state has been centrally assessed, classified as class nine property under section 15-6-141, MCA, and taxed at 12% of its market value; and

WHEREAS, Omimex Canada Ltd. has been centrally assessed by the Montana Department of Revenue and classified as class nine property; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court held in Omimex Canada, Ltd. v. State, Department of Revenue that the description of class nine property does not include the physical attributes of Omimex's property and that Omimex's property must be classified as class eight property and taxed at 3% of market value; and

WHEREAS, the overall effect of the Montana Supreme Court decision significantly reduces property tax collections by millions of dollars in counties and school districts across the state; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court decision did not deal with constitutional issues raised by Omimex, including due process and equal protection; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court decision is symptomatic of the uncertainty regarding the classification, valuation, and taxation of oil and natural gas property; and

WHEREAS, competing legislation has been introduced in the 61st Legislature to deal with the Supreme Court decision and other matters related to the classification, valuation, and taxation of oil and natural gas property; and

WHEREAS, any legislation, if enacted, may not resolve the ambiguity regarding the classification, valuation, and taxation of oil and natural gas property and may contain unintended consequences."

Interim Study of Taxation of Oil and Natural Gas Property: Section 1, Ch. 419, L. 2009, provided: "(1) The revenue and transportation interim committee provided for in 5-5-227 shall conduct an interim study on the classification, valuation, and taxation of oil and natural gas property. The study must include:

(a) an overview of how oil and natural gas markets function, including the effects of state and federal regulatory policy on the operation of these markets;

(b) an inventory of the ownership of oil and natural gas property subject to central assessment or local assessment;

(c) a review of the department of revenue's policies, procedures, and practices for the valuation of locally assessed and centrally assessed oil and natural gas property;

(d) an analysis of the importance of oil and natural gas property to the property tax base of taxing jurisdictions, including the state;

(e) an analysis of state tax appeal board and court decisions affecting the classification, valuation, and taxation of oil and natural gas property;

(f) the development of an appropriate policy of taxing oil and natural gas property that takes into account the balance of the financial needs of taxing jurisdictions within the state and the equitable taxation of oil and natural gas property.

(2) (a) The revenue and transportation interim committee shall establish a subcommittee to conduct the study and report to the full committee. The subcommittee members must be appointed by the presiding officer of the committee in concurrence with the vice presiding officer. The subcommittee must include six members, three from each political party and three from each house, who are legislators appointed to the revenue and transportation interim committee.

(b) The subcommittee shall request the advice and assistance of private and public oil and natural gas associations, local governments and school districts, taxpayer groups, the department of revenue, and other entities the subcommittee considers appropriate.

(c) Any final recommendations and other work products that will be represented as being produced or endorsed by the revenue and transportation interim committee must be finally approved by the revenue and transportation interim committee.

(3) The revenue and transportation interim committee shall complete the study by September 15, 2010, and report its findings and recommendations to the 62nd legislature."

2007 Amendment: Chapter 5 inserted (2)(b) allowing the committee to prepare a revenue estimate for a special session that considers a revenue bill or appropriation bill and providing that the revenue estimate is considered a subject specified in the call of the special session; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 13, 2007.

2003 Amendment — Code Commissioner Clarification: Chapter 114 inserted (2) through (4) requiring the committee to prepare for each regular session an estimate of available projected revenue, providing that the estimate is the legislature's current estimate until amended or until final adoption of the estimate by both houses and that it is intended that the legislature's estimates and their underlying assumptions be used by all agencies with revenue or cost estimating duties, and requiring the legislative services division to staff the committee and allowing the committee to request assistance from the staffs of other legislative and executive branch agencies that have information regarding tax and revenue bases of the state. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Subsections (2) through (4) were formerly codified as 5-18-107 (now repealed) and inserted in this section in order to consolidate statutes dealing with the revenue and transportation interim committee.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 210 at beginning substituted "revenue and transportation interim committee" for "revenue and taxation interim committee" and after "rule review" inserted "draft legislation review"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

Chapter 20 deleted former (2)(d) through (2)(f) that read: "(d) solicit and review proposed statutory changes to any of the state's public employee retirement systems;

(e) report to the legislature on each legislative proposal reviewed by the committee. The report must include but is not limited to:

(i) a summary of the fiscal implications of the proposal;

(ii) an analysis of the effect that the proposal may have on other public employee retirement systems;

(iii) an analysis of the soundness of the proposal as a matter of public policy;

(iv) any amendments proposed by the committee; and

(v) the committee's recommendation on whether the proposal should be enacted by the legislature.

(f) attach the committee's report to any proposal that the committee considered and that is or has been introduced as a bill during a legislative session"; in (2)(d) at end after "systems" inserted requirement that committee include information it considers valuable when considering legislation; in (3)(a) near beginning inserted "retirement board" and at end substituted "pursuant to subsection (1)" for "contemplated under subsection (2)(d)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 18, 2013.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 91 in (1) near end inserted "unless otherwise assigned by law"; in (1)(a) inserted "except"; inserted (1)(a)(i) and (1)(a)(ii) excepting state fund and office of state public defender; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 30, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 420, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, Article VIII, section 15, of the Montana Constitution requires all public retirement systems to be funded on an actuarially sound basis; and

WHEREAS, the recent economic collapse of the financial markets in the United States has severely affected the market value of investments and adversely affected the funding of Montana's statewide retirement systems; and

WHEREAS, the July 1, 2008, actuarial valuation for the Teachers' Retirement System (TRS) showed that current contribution rates will not amortize the system's unfunded liability within the 30-year amortization period considered to be the benchmark for actuarial soundness; and

WHEREAS, if investment earnings for TRS continue to dramatically decline, even with contribution increases, the system's liabilities may not amortize in any length of time unless significant funding is provided and TRS is redesigned to reduce the accrual of benefit liabilities; and

WHEREAS, based on actuarial projections that take into consideration continued market declines since the actuarial valuation of July 1, 2008, for the retirement systems administered by the public employees' retirement board, the unfunded liabilities in the public employees', game wardens' and peace officers', and sheriffs' retirement systems may also not amortize in any length of time without increased contributions and benefit or plan design changes; and

WHEREAS, an appropriate interim committee of the Legislature should examine the funding and benefits in all of the statewide retirement systems, which include the public employees', teachers', judges', game wardens' and peace officers', sheriffs', firefighters' unified, municipal police officers', and volunteer firefighters' retirement systems, review options for changing benefits and plan design, consider the purpose of retirement plans as a part of an overall compensation package for public employees, and develop legislation for consideration by the next Legislature; and

WHEREAS, such an examination and the development of legislation to implement plan redesign and funding changes will require that the committee be authorized to hire actuarial and other expert consulting services."

Interim Committee to Examine and Recommend Changes to Statewide Retirement Systems: Section 1, Ch. 420, L. 2009, provided: "(1) In addition to fulfilling its duties under 5-5-228(2)(a), the state administration and veterans' affairs interim committee established in 5-5-228 shall:

(a) review current trends and best practices in public retirement plan design and funding;

(b) examine various options for changes to each of the statewide retirement plans administered by the public employees' retirement board, such as but not limited to changes in:

(i) the benefit formula multiplier for each year of service;

(ii) the minimum age at which a retirement plan member is eligible for full benefits or for reduced, early retirement benefits; and

(iii) the minimum years of service required for a retirement plan member to be eligible for full retirement benefits or for reduced, early retirement benefits.

(2) With respect to the teachers' retirement system, the committee shall compare and contrast various options for redesigning the system, including money purchase plan design options and other alternative and hybrid defined benefit plan options, and shall develop legislation to implement a redesign of the teachers' retirement system that:

(a) ensures members will have a guaranteed benefit in retirement;

(b) provides that the employer and employee shall share in some manner the risk of actuarial gains and losses and allows for the adjustment of employer and employee contributions accordingly;

(c) is sustainable and funded on an actuarially sound basis;

(d) provides benefits designed to attract and retain qualified and competent employees in a competitive labor market and to facilitate effective workforce management;

(e) complies with the federal Internal Revenue Code governing tax-qualified public pension plans;

(f) provides that the system is administered by the teachers' retirement board and provides that system assets are invested by the board of investments, as required by the Montana constitution; and

(g) provides a foundation for financial security in retirement, taking into consideration that:

(i) a retirement plan is only one part of an employee's compensation package that also includes salary, health insurance benefits, and other benefits;

(ii) an employer-sponsored public retirement plan is not intended to be the sole provider of income to an employee in retirement; and

(iii) deferred compensation, personal savings and investments, and social security should be part of an employee's financial planning for retirement.

(3) (a) The committee may hire consulting services as needed.

(b) The public employees' retirement and teachers' retirement boards and their respective staffs shall provide requested information and actuarial analysis to the extent feasible within the framework of the retirement boards' fiduciary and constitutional responsibilities.

(c) The board of investments and its staff shall also provide requested information and analysis to the extent feasible and consistent with its fiduciary and constitutional responsibilities.

(4) The committee shall involve public employers, public employees, members of the current public employees' retirement systems, public employee and retiree representative organizations, public retirement plan administrators, and other interested parties in the process of developing options and recommendations.

(5) Subject to 5-5-211, the speaker of the house and the senate committee on committees are encouraged to:

(a) consult with the legislative council to determine the most appropriate number of members and support staff for the state administration and veterans' affairs interim committee; and

(b) appoint members from the 61st legislature's standing house and senate state administration committees, house appropriations committee, and senate finance and claims committee to the extent feasible."

2005 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 2 inserted (2) concerning consideration of actuarial and fiscal soundness of public employee retirement systems and review and comment on proposed changes to public employee retirement systems; inserted (3) concerning procedures for review of proposals affecting a retirement system; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective December 19, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 210 at beginning substituted "state administration and veterans' affairs interim committee" for "state administration, public retirement systems, and veterans' affairs interim committee", after "rule review" inserted "draft legislation review", and after "functions" inserted "for the public employee retirement plans and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

CHAPTER 7
LOBBYING

Chapter Compiler's Comments

1980 Initiative Title: The title to Initiative No. 85, 1980, read: "An act to require public disclosure of money spent to influence action of a public official. All individuals or businesses who employ lobbyists and spend more than $1000 a year to promote or oppose official action of a public official must give a complete accounting of all money spent. The proposal does not apply to individual citizens lobbying on their own behalf. Elected officials are required to publicly disclose their business interests. Criminal and civil penalties are provided for violations of the provisions of this initiative."

Severability: Section 21, Initiative No. 85, 1980, was a severability section.

Effective Date: Section 22, Initiative No. 85, 1980, provided: "This act shall be effective upon passage and approval by the voters of the state of Montana." Approved November 4, 1980.

Chapter Case Notes

Lobbying — Initiative 85 — Attorneys — Constitutionality: Initiative 85, as emended in Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981), is not so vague as to be unconstitutionally uncertain, nor does it intrude on the power of the Supreme Court to regulate the conduct of attorneys. The act applies equally to attorneys and nonattorneys acting in the nonlegislative lobbying field. The right of the court to supervise the conduct of the members of the bar is undiminished by any provision of the Initiative. St. Bar of Mont. v. Krivec, 193 M 477, 632 P2d 707, 38 St. Rep. 1322 (1981).

Ministerial Acts Not Covered: An attorney procuring the performance of a purely ministerial act by a public official, an act that could otherwise be required by mandamus, is not procuring an official to exercise a legislative function and is not acting within the intent and purpose of Initiative 85. St. Bar of Mont. v. Krivec, 193 M 477, 632 P2d 707, 38 St. Rep. 1322 (1981).

Public Service Commission — Quasi-Judicial: Attorneys acting on behalf of clients or for themselves in quasi-judicial proceedings before the Public Service Commission are not covered by Initiative 85. St. Bar of Mont. v. Krivec, 193 M 477, 632 P2d 707, 38 St. Rep. 1322 (1981).

1980 Initiative Amendment: Added ", to require elected officials to make public their business interests, and to require disclosure of the amounts of money spent for lobbying" at the end of subsection (1); and added subsection (2) exempting Montana residents from reporting requirements when lobbying on their own behalf.

Administrative Rules

ARM 44.12.101A Preamble and statement of applicability.

Case Notes

Exemptions for Montana Citizens Unconstitutional: Prior to 1983 amendment, the exemption provided in 5-7-101(2) and 5-7-102(5)(b)(i) from Initiative 85 for Montana citizens was constitutionally impermissible under the Privileges and Immunities Clause of the United States Constitution. There is no basis for creating an exception solely for individual Montana citizens. Citizens of other states may have an interest in some official action in Montana that warrants their efforts to influence the outcome of that action in Montana. The word "Montana" was void and without effect in both sections. Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 402 in definition of elected state official in (a) in first sentence at end after "judges" deleted "but not including legislators for the purposes of this chapter" and inserted (b) providing that elected state official does not include a legislator; in definition of lobbying in (a)(ii) after "official" inserted "or the legislature" and in (b) after "by" deleted "a legislator"; in definition of lobbyist in (b)(ii) after "official" inserted "or the legislature" and in (c) after "officials" inserted "or the legislature"; in definition of payment at end of (a)(i) after "official" inserted "or the legislature"; in definition of public official in (a) after "government" inserted "or a legislator"; in definition of unprofessional conduct in (b), (c), and two places in (d) after "official" inserted "or the legislature"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section — Coordination: Chapter 52 inserted definitions of appointed state official, elected federal official, elected tribal official, and legislator; substituted elected local official for elected official as defined term and after "means" substituted "an elected officer of a county, a consolidated government, an incorporated city or town, a school district, or a special district. The term includes an individual appointed to fill the unexpired term of an elected local official and an individual who has been elected to a local office but who has not yet been sworn in" for "a public official"; in definition of elected state official near middle of first sentence after "limited to" deleted "legislators" and at end inserted "but not including legislators for the purposes of this chapter", inserted second sentence including in the definition an individual appointed to fill the unexpired term of an elected state official and an individual who has been elected to a statewide office but who has not yet been sworn in, and deleted former second sentence that read: "The term "official-elect" also applies to the offices"; in definition of lobbying at end of (a)(i) deleted "by a person other than a member of the legislature or a public official" and inserted (b) providing that the term does not include actions described in subsections (11)(a)(i) and (11)(a)(ii) when performed by a legislator, a public official, an elected local official, an elected federal official, or an elected tribal official while acting in an official governmental capacity; in definition of lobbying for hire at end after "principal" substituted "to lobby" for "and whose duties include lobbying. If an individual is reimbursed only for his personal living and travel expenses, which together are less than $1,000 per calendar year, that individual is not considered to be lobbying for hire"; in definition of payment to influence official action at end of (a) after "expenses" deleted "excluding personal living expenses"; in definition of public official after "means an" substituted "elected state official or an appointed state official" for "individual, elected or appointed"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 26, 2003.

Chapter 572 deleted definition of lobbying for hire that read: ""Lobbying for hire" includes activities of the officers, agents, attorneys, or employees of a principal who are paid, reimbursed, or retained by the principal and whose duties include lobbying. If an individual is reimbursed only for his personal living and travel expenses, which together are less than $1,000 per calendar year, that individual is not considered to be lobbying for hire"; in definition of lobbyist in (a) after "lobbying" deleted "for hire", inserted (b)(iii) excluding an individual who receives payments in a calendar year that total less than the amount specified in 5-7-112, and in (c) near beginning after "this" substituted "chapter" for "section" and after "individual" substituted "who is not a lobbyist" for "not lobbying for hire"; in definition of payment inserted (a)(i) concerning rendering to a lobbyist to influence legislation or official action, in (a)(ii) at beginning substituted "directly or indirectly" for ""Payment to influence official action" means any of the following types of payment:

(a) direct or indirect payment" and near end after "reimbursement for" substituted "lobbying expenses" for "expenses, excluding personal living expenses", and inserted (b) excluding personal and necessary living expenses and travel expenses from the definition; in definition of principal after "lobbyist" inserted "or a person required to report pursuant to 5-7-208"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2003.

Pursuant to sec. 7(1), Ch. 572, L. 2003, a coordination section, the code commissioner in (12)(c) substituted "this chapter deprives an individual who is not a lobbyist" for "this subsection (13) deprives an individual not lobbying for hire".

Retroactive Applicability: Section 11, Ch. 572, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all occurrences concerning filing or reporting on or after September 1, 2002. This section may not be construed to require a refund of any fee paid on or after September 1, 2002."

1991 Amendment: In definition of lobbying, near end of (a) after "official", deleted "acting in his official capacity" and in (b), after "public official", deleted "in the event the person engaged in such practice expends $1,000 per calendar year or more exclusive of personal travel and living expenses"; in definition of lobbyist, in (b)(i) after "individual", deleted "citizen" and in (c), after "deprives", substituted "an individual" for "any citizen"; in definition of lobbying for hire, in second sentence before $1,000, substituted "are less than" for "do not exceed"; in definition of unprofessional conduct, in (b) after "employment", deleted "in opposition thereto"; in definition of principal, after "who", substituted "employs" for "makes payments in excess of $1,000 per calendar year to engage"; in definition of docket, after "register", deleted "and reports"; in definition of business, in (a) after "self-employed", substituted "person" for "individual"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: In (3), after "state" deleted "or local"; after "government" deleted "or any political subdivision thereof"; at end of (3) added "or performing ministerial acts"; in (5)(b)(i) after "individual" deleted "Montana"; in (5)(b)(ii) after "personal contact" inserted "involving lobbying"; deleted (7)(c)(i), which read: "(i) the promise of support or opposition at any future election;"; deleted (7)(c)(iv), (7)(c)(v), and (7)(d), which read: "(iv) any improper economic reprisal or other unlawful retaliation against any public official; or

(v) any means other than argument on the merits thereof;

(d) attempting to influence a decision or vote by a hearing examiner or quasi-judicial officer in any contested case proceeding under Title 2, chapter 4, part 6, except as provided therein;"; deleted (7)(f), which read: "(f) engaging in practices which reflect discredit on the practice of lobbying"; deleted (8)(b), which read: "(b) in the case of a person other than an individual, to solicit, directly, indirectly, or by an advertising campaign, the lobbying efforts of another person"; in (11)(a) after "compensation" inserted "or reimbursement"; after "expenses" substituted "excluding personal living expenses" for "or for any other purpose"; inserted (12)(b) which includes within definition of business any present or past employment from which benefits are received; and made minor changes in punctuation and phraseology.

1980 Initiative Amendment: Substituted "The following definitions apply in this chapter" for "The following words and phrases shall have the meanings respectively ascribed to them" at the beginning of the section; inserted definitions of individual, person, and public official; changed "means" to "includes" at the beginning of subsection (4) and added subsection (4)(b) which includes within the definition of lobbying the practice of promoting or opposing official action by any public official in the event the person engaged in such practice expends $1,000 per calendar year or more exclusive of personal travel and living expenses; deleted "except in the manner authorized by 5-7-304" at the end of subsection (5)(a); inserted subsection (5)(b) relating to what the definition of lobbyist does not include; substituted "deprives" for "shall be construed to deprive", changed "his" to "the" before "constitutional right" and changed "members of the legislature" to "public officials" in subsection (5)(c); changed "shall include" to "includes", substituted "paid, reimbursed, or retained" for "paid a regular salary", changed "a person" to "an individual", inserted "which together do not exceed $1,000 per calendar year," after "expenses," and changed "be" to "that individual" in subsection (6); deleted former subsection (7)(b), which read: "(b) soliciting employment from any principal"; changed "the introduction of legislation" to "action by any public official" in subsection (7)(b); changed "vote of legislators" to "action of any public official" in subsection (7)(c); deleted "by any means other than argument on the merits thereof, or" at the end of subsection (7)(c)(i); inserted "any principal" in (7)(c)(iii); inserted subsections (7)(c)(ii) relating to promise of financial support; inserted (7)(c)(iv) relating to improper economic reprisal; inserted (7)(c)(v) relating to any means other than argument on the merits; inserted (7)(d) relating to influencing a decision by a hearing examiner or quasi-judicial officer in a contested case proceeding; inserted (7)(e) relating to deception or misrepresentation of pertinent facts of an official matter to any public official; deleted "or the legislature" after "lobbying" in subsection (7)(f); in (8) substituted ""Principal" means any person who makes payments in excess of $1,000 per calendar year for any of the following:

(a) to engage a lobbyist; or

(b) in the case of a person other than an individual, to solicit, directly, indirectly, or by an advertising campaign, the lobbying efforts of another person" for ""Principal" means: (a) any person, corporation, or association which engages a lobbyist or other person in connection with any legislation pending before the legislature or to be proposed affecting the pecuniary interest of such person, corporation, or association; or (b) any board, department, commission, or other agency of the state, any county, or municipal corporation which engages a lobbyist or other person in connection with any legislation pending or to be proposed affecting the statutory powers, duties, or appropriation of such agency, county, or municipal corporation"; substituted "register and reports of lobbyists and principals" for "register of licensed lobbyists" and changed "secretary of state" to "commissioner" in subsection (9); deleted former subsection (6), which defined "pecuniary interest"; added definitions of payment, payment to influence official action, business, commissioner, and elected official; and made minor changes in grammar, punctuation, and phraseology.

Case Notes

Quasi-Judicial Capacity — Public Service Commission: In general, when the law commits to any officer the duty of looking into facts and acting upon them, not in a way that is specifically directed but with discretion, the function is termed quasi-judicial; thus, attorneys acting on behalf of clients or for themselves in quasi-judicial proceedings before the Public Service Commission are not covered by Initiative 85. St. Bar of Mont. v. Krivec, 193 M 477, 632 P2d 707, 38 St. Rep. 1322 (1981).

Definition Subsections Impermissibly Vague: Subsections (7)(c)(iv), (7)(c)(v), and (7)(f) of 5-7-102, enacted by Initiative 85 (deleted in 1983 amendment), are impermissibly vague, unconstitutional, and therefore void. (Following U.S. v. Dupree, 544 F2d 1050 (9th Cir. 1976).) The court asks rhetorically: Is there a form of "proper" economic reprisal? How does a lobbyist determine when he may retaliate lawfully against a public official? Can conduct which is potentially criminal be defined as "any means other than" the permitted means of argument on the merits? To "reflect discredit" is not sufficiently definite to give a person of ordinary intelligence fair notice that his conduct is forbidden. Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

Prohibition Against Influencing Quasi-Judicial Public Officials — Void: Subsection (7)(d) of 5-7-102, contained in Initiative 85 (deleted in 1983 amendment), is void. It is inconsistent with the intention of a law enacted to regulate lobbying for it to also regulate conduct that is, by the terms of the statute, not lobbying. (See subsection 5-7-102(4)(b), enacted by Initiative 85.) Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

Prohibition Against Soliciting Lobbying Efforts as Unconstitutional: Subsection (8)(b) of 5-7-102 from Initiative 85 (deleted in 1983 amendment) is unconstitutional and void for vagueness. Facially, subsection (8)(b) constitutes a more drastic infringement on freedom of the press and freedom of speech than was present in Mills v. Alabama, 384 US 214 (1966). Further, the court is unable to find any compelling state interest which requires the inclusion of subsection (8)(b) in Initiative 85. Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

Prohibition Against Voters' Promise of Support as Unconstitutional: Section 5-7-102(7)(c)(i), contained in Initiative 85 (deleted in 1983 amendment), is an unconstitutional infringement of the right of free speech and is therefore void. The prohibited conduct is nothing more than a standard and accepted means of involvement in the political process. It is a free expression of the only real power an elector possesses. Criticism of government is at the very center of the constitutional protection of free speech. No law could stand that would prevent an elector from voting for or against an incumbent. Likewise, no law can stand that would prevent a voter from expressing to an elected official an intention to vote for or against that official if certain action is or is not taken. Further, the first amendment applies to associations as well as individuals and protects the right of associations to engage in advocacy on behalf of their members. Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

Unprofessional Conduct of Lobbyists and Principals Limited in Construction: The Supreme Court of Montana construes subsection (7)(a) of 5-7-102, enacted by Initiative 85, to limit "unprofessional conduct" to violations of any of the provisions of this chapter by a lobbyist or principal, not by an elected official. Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

5-7-103. Licenses — fees — eligibility — waiver.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 572 in (1) at end of fifth sentence after "lobbyist" inserted "except as provided in subsection (5) or unless the fee is waived for hardship reasons under this subsection"; in (2)(a) near middle of second sentence after "10" inserted "business" and at end after "application" inserted "excluding the date on which the application is filed"; inserted (5) providing that a lobbyist who receives payments in a calendar year that total less than the amount specified in 5-7-112 is not required to pay a license fee or file an application form; in (6) at end inserted reference to subsection (5); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2003.

The amendments to this section in Ch. 52, L. 2003, were rendered void by sec. 7(2), Ch. 572, L. 2003, a coordination section.

Saving Clause: Section 9, Ch. 572, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 11, Ch. 572, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all occurrences concerning filing or reporting on or after September 1, 2002. This section may not be construed to require a refund of any fee paid on or after September 1, 2002."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 557 in (1) in fifth sentence increased license fee from $50 to $150 and in last sentence after "waive" inserted "all or a portion of"; in (3) after "fines" deleted "and license fees"; inserted (4) relating to the distribution and deposit of the license fee; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 18 in (1), in fourth sentence after "fee", deleted "of $10", inserted fifth sentence establishing $50 lobbyist license fee, and inserted last two sentences providing for license fee waiver; inserted (4) authorizing adoption of rules to implement fee waiver; and made minor changes in style. Subsections (1) through (3) effective January 1, 1994. Subsection (4) effective December 23, 1993.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 18, Sp. L. November 1993, provided: "A statement of legislative intent is necessary for this bill because 5-7-103 authorizes the commissioner of political practices to adopt rules implementing the waiver provisions of subsection (1) of that section.

The legislature intends that rules adopted by the commissioner specify the procedures to be used by a lobbyist when applying for a hardship waiver and the standards to be used by the commissioner in determining whether a hardship exists. The commissioner may specify categories of licenses or lobbyists for which hardship waivers will be granted."

1991 Amendments: Chapter 91 in beginning of (2)(a) inserted exception clause; inserted (2)(b) concerning disapproval of application if applicant failed to file reports required under 5-7-208; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 498 in (1), near beginning after "character", deleted "who is a citizen of the United States and".

1980 Initiative Amendment: In (1), changed the "secretary of state" to "commissioner" three times, substituted "application and receipt" for "application by the secretary of state and payment", and inserted "enumerated" before "principals" in the third sentence, and substituted the last sentence that read: "Each license shall expire on December 31 of each even-numbered year or may be terminated at the request of the lobbyist" for "Each license shall expire on December 31 of each odd-numbered year"; inserted "fines and" before "license fees", deleted "by the secretary of state" after "collected", and deleted "by him" after "deposited" in subsection (3).

Case Notes

Statute Requiring "Necessary" Rules Requires Rulemaking Hearing — Mandamus Proper Remedy: Pursuant to 2-4-315 and this section, Common Cause submitted a petition to the Commissioner of Political Practices requesting the adoption of a definition of "lobbying". When the Commissioner denied the petition, Common Cause brought a petition for mandamus. The District Court dismissed pursuant to former Rule 12(b)(6), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). The Supreme Court reversed, citing Commonwealth of Pa. v. Nat'l Ass'n of Flood Insurers, 520 F2d 11 (3d Cir. 1975), and holding that the language in this section requiring rules "necessary" to implement the statute mandated the Commissioner to hold a hearing to determine whether rules were necessary. The Supreme Court held that the discretionary authority contained in 2-4-315 to adopt or not adopt a particular rule does not give the Commissioner the authority to avoid altogether the rulemaking required by this section. For this reason, the Supreme Court also held that mandamus was a proper remedy because the Commissioner had a clear legal duty to conduct rulemaking procedures to determine what rules were necessary. Common Cause of Mont. v. Argenbright, 276 M 382, 917 P2d 425, 53 St. Rep. 386 (1996).

Case Notes

Accounting Requirements Void for Vagueness: Subsections (5)(a)(i) and (5)(a)(iv) of 5-7-208 (amended to cure unconstitutionality in 1983), enacted by Initiative 85, are void for vagueness. It is impossible to tell when "original and derivative" research is being performed; likewise, the court is unable to determine what additional information ought to be disclosed under the subheading of "news media". Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

Language Requiring Nonlobbying Expenses to Be Disclosed — Unconstitutional: The words "regardless of whether it was paid solely" as used in subsection (5)(c) of 5-7-208 (phrase deleted in 1983 amendment) from Initiative 85 are void as a violation of the first amendment right of association which exists as a necessary corollary to the freedoms of speech and assembly. The forced disclosure of contributions and membership fees "regardless of whether . . . paid solely for the purpose of lobbying" compels revelation of information that has no relationship to the ends that the "Lobbying Act" and the Initiative seek to achieve. That some money is in fact spent for lobbying does not lessen the repugnance of 5-7-208(5)(c). Further, the forced disclosure of the name of an individual who contributed $250 reaches too broadly and too blindly into an area that is essential to the exercise of our most basic freedoms. Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

Title Not Embracing a Bill Section as Rendering Section Void: Subsection (5)(d) of 5-7-208 from Initiative 85 (deleted in 1983 amendment) is not embraced in the title of Initiative 85 and is therefore void. There is insufficient substantive relationship between the title and this subsection. The "Lobbying Act" was not being transformed into a general campaign finances act. Mont. Auto. Ass'n v. Greely, 193 M 378, 632 P2d 300, 38 St. Rep. 1174 (1981).

Case Notes

Prohibited Compensation Provision Held Unconstitutional: Section 5-7-302 as amended by Initiative 85 is void because it violates the right to petition the government included in the first amendment to the United States Constitution and Art. II, sec. 6, Mont. Const. Section 5-7-302 unduly infringes the rights of those who, while contemplating neither illegal nor unethical conduct, need or desire to employ a lobbyist on a contingent fee basis in order to advance their interests before a public official. LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL AND PUBLICATION OF LAWS

Chapter Compiler's Comments

1995 Transition: Section 81, Ch. 545, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The members of the legislative council, as provided in 5-11-101, the members of the legislative finance committee, as provided in 5-12-202, the members of the legislative audit committee, as provided in 5-13-202, and the members of the environmental quality council, as provided in 5-16-101, must be appointed as soon as possible following [the effective date of this section] [effective April 27, 1995].

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

(3) Personnel and property of the environmental quality council are transferred to the legislative services division effective July 1, 1995."

5-11-101. Appointment and composition of council.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 4 in (1)(a) and (1)(b) near middle before "four" inserted "subject to 5-5-234" and at end substituted "two from the majority party and two from the minority party" for "no more than two of whom may be of the same political party"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) No more than three members of each house may be of the same political party"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 25, 2007.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 22, Ch. 4, Sp. L. May 2007, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to appointments made for members of the 60th legislature."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 19 in (1) at beginning of second sentence inserted "Subject to subsection (3), the legislative council"; inserted (3) allowing a legislator who would be on the legislative council due to a leadership position and who will not serve the next legislative session due to term limits to designate another legislator to serve on the legislative council; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 in (1), after "consists of", substituted remainder of section regarding Legislative Council membership for former (1) and (2) that read: "(1) four members of the house of representatives appointed by the speaker of the house with the advice of the majority and minority leaders of the house, no more than two of whom may be of the same political party; and

(2) four members of the senate appointed by the committee on committees of the senate, no more than two of whom may be of the same political party"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 27, 1995.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: The appointment of legislators to the council does not constitute an appointment to another civil office in violation of Art. V, sec. 9, Mont. Const. State ex rel. James v. Aronson, 132 M 120, 314 P2d 849 (1957), overruling State ex rel. Mitchell v. Holmes, 128 M 275, 274 P2d 611 (1954).

Method of Appointment: An appointment under this section by the Senate Committee on Committees was effective even though phrased in terms of recommending the appointment to the full Senate. State ex rel. James v. Aronson, 132 M 120, 314 P2d 849 (1957).

Appointments Do Not Need Senate Approval: Appointments under this section made by the Senate Committee on Committees need not be approved by the Senate even though a senate rule provides that committee appointments are subject to ratification by the Senate. State ex rel. James v. Aronson, 132 M 120, 314 P2d 849 (1957).

5-11-102. Term.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 near beginning, after "2 years", substituted remainder of section concerning qualification and appointment for former language that read: "and terminates with the appointment of a new council or on the 50th legislative day of the next regular session following the one in which the appointment was made, whichever event occurs first. A new council shall be appointed no later than the 50th day of each regular session." Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: This section does not violate the limit on the length of a legislative session prescribed by Art. V, sec. 6, Mont. Const. State ex rel. James v. Aronson, 132 M 120, 314 P2d 849 (1957), overruling State ex rel. Mitchell v. Holmes, 128 M 275, 274 P2d 611 (1954).

Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

Interim Study of Government Competition With Private Sector: Section 1, Ch. 478, L. 1999, provided: "The legislative council shall designate an appropriate legislative interim committee to study the issue of government competition by political subdivisions of this state with the private sector. The study may include an examination of the impact on the private sector of the provision of goods, services, manufacturing, construction, and maintenance and repair by governmental entities in this state and an examination of the feasibility and desirability of privatizing the sale of goods, specific services, manufacturing, construction, and maintenance and repair activities conducted by political subdivisions. The appropriate committee shall prepare for submission to the 57th legislature a report of its findings and any recommendations or proposed legislation." Effective April 27, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 inserted (1) regarding Legislative Council duties; in (2), near middle, substituted "legislative committee has not been assigned" for "subcommittee has not been appointed"; and deleted (2) through (4) that read: "(2) The legislative council shall supervise the activities of the council staff.

(3) The legislative council shall assist in the preparation and submission of all standing and select committee and subcommittee reports and recommendations to the legislature.

(4) This section shall not be construed to permit the council to approve or disapprove of any substantive portions or recommendations of a standing or select committee or subcommittee report." Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1987 Amendment: At end of (1) inserted final clause containing citation for subcommittees and authority for statutorily created committees.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: Prior to the 1973 amendment, this section (former section 43-710, R.C.M. 1947) did not violate Art. III, sec. 1, Mont. Const., providing for separation of powers. State ex rel. James v. Aronson, 132 M 120, 314 P2d 849 (1957), overruling State ex rel. Mitchell v. Holmes, 128 M 275, 274 P2d 611 (1954).

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 608, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is not required for this bill but is included to clarify the staffing arrangements anticipated under this bill.

As a matter of practice, the legislative council has provided staff to support the work of the tax committees of the legislature in session and in the interim. As such, council staff have supported the revenue oversight committee [now revenue and transportation interim committee] since its creation. It is the intent of the legislature that, in carrying out its revenue estimating duties under this bill, the revenue oversight committee [now revenue and transportation interim committee] will rely upon the staffs of the legislative council, the office of the legislative fiscal analyst, the legislative auditor, the department of revenue, and any other agency that has information regarding any of the tax or revenue bases of the state. Legislative agencies shall cooperate in providing support to the committee."

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 at end of second sentence substituted "services division" for "council". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 22 inserted second and third sentences requiring filing of each authenticated journal with the Secretary of State and filing of a copy of each authenticated journal with the Legislative Council. Amendment effective December 23, 1993.

Case Notes

Judicial Recourse to Journal:

Except to determine whether on its final passage the names of those voting were entered on the legislative journals, courts may not go behind the duly authenticated enrolled bill. Therefore, recourse may not be had to such journals to ascertain whether a substantial provision and an arrangement of section numbers were embodied in a particular bill, different from the bill as it passed one of the houses. Barth v. Pock, 51 M 419, 155 P 282 (1915).

In determining whether an act has been passed, the enrolled bill, signed and approved by the proper officers, is conclusive upon the courts and recourse cannot be had to any other evidence except where the alleged infirmity of the act is based upon a failure to enter the names of those voting upon its final passage, in which case the journals may be consulted. State ex rel. Gregg v. Erickson, 39 M 280, 102 P 336 (1909).

Case Notes

Legislative Employee's Fiscal Assumptions Cannot Trigger Tax Credits — Unlawful Delegation of Power — Invasion of Executive Branch Power Impermissible: Legislative Referendum 123 (LR-123) provided a potential tax credit, tax refund, or payment to individuals when a certain level of surplus revenue was in the state treasury at the close of the fiscal year. As part of the process of determining whether there was surplus revenue, the Legislative Fiscal Analyst (LFA) was required to perform two dozen steps or calculations, including discretionary projections of balances, revenues, transfers, appropriations, and reversions. The Supreme Court held that the delegation of authority to the LFA violated Article V, section 1, of the Montana Constitution as an unlawful delegation of legislative power, similar to the unlawful delegation of authority to a legislative interim committee in State ex rel. Judge v. Legislative Fin. Comm., 168 Mont. 470, 543 P.2d 1317 (1975). 1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 in (5), in introductory clause near middle after "analyst", deleted "on a confidential basis and"; and in (5)(b), at end, inserted "and a summary of the preliminary budget designed for distribution to members and members-elect of the legislature". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 12 in (4), in first sentence, required the budget requests to be "in a format agreed upon by both the office of budget and program planning and the legislative fiscal analyst" and inserted last sentence requiring the budget director to use the base budget, present law base, and new proposals as defined in 17-7-102 in preparing the executive budget for the next biennium; in (5), at end of introductory paragraph, inserted "and in a format agreed upon by both the office of budget and program planning and the legislative fiscal analyst"; in (5)(a), at beginning, substituted "October 10, a preliminary budget reflecting the base budget and, by November 1, a present law base for each agency and" for "December 1" and near end substituted "base budget and present law base" for "budget"; in (5)(b) substituted "November 15" for "December 1"; in (5)(c) substituted "November 12" for "December 3"; in (6) inserted last sentence requiring the fiscal analyst to use the base budget, present law base, and new proposals as defined in 17-7-102 in preparing the budget analysis for the next biennium for submission to the Legislature; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective December 23, 1993.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 20 in (3), at end of second sentence, substituted "removing names, addresses, occupations, social security numbers, and taxpayer identification numbers" for "a masking method that conceals the identity of the taxpayer" and substituted third and fourth sentences prohibiting altering data and restricting disclosure for former language that read: "The masking method may not destroy the statistical integrity of the individual income tax records. The masking method, including how data is masked, must be disclosed to the legislative fiscal analyst"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (4) substituted "The budget director" for "Every state agency"; inserted (5)(c) relating to documents reflecting second level expenditures; inserted (6) requiring exchange of expenditure and disbursement recommendations; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1986 Amendment: In (1) substituted "costs and revenues" for "costs" and inserted "and obtain copies of" before "the records"; and inserted (2) relating to unauthorized disclosure of confidential information by the Legislative Fiscal Analyst; inserted (3) relating to income tax data which the Legislative Fiscal Analyst may obtain; and inserted (6) providing that the section does not authorize otherwise unauthorized publication or disclosure of information.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: This section does not impose an unconstitutional burden upon state government, since power to approve appropriation bills and the budget is in the legislative branch, and the committee may require such information from other branches as is reasonably necessary to form a rational basis for budget determinations. State ex rel. Judge v. Legislative Fin. Comm., 168 M 470, 543 P2d 1317 (1975).

5-12-304. Employees and consultants.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 substituted present language concerning personnel and consultants for former section that read: "The legislative fiscal analyst may employ, fix the salaries, and define the duties of such staff and consultants as may be necessary, within the limits of his appropriation." Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Part 4
Budget Amendments

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Applicability of Budget Amendment Process to Statutory Appropriations: Legislative history and case law support the conclusion that the scope of the budget amendment process is restricted to the expenditure of funds by state agencies in excess of their appropriations. The budget amendment process does not apply to "statutory appropriations", which are those appropriations accomplished by legislative enactment, either with or without specific appropriation laws. (Decided prior to enactment of Title 17, ch. 7, part 5.) 40 A.G. Op. 25 (1983).

5-12-401. Submission of budget amendments to committee.

Compiler's Comments

1983 Amendment: In first sentence, inserted "as soon as received by the budget director"; in second sentence substituted "which includes a lawfully approved and valid budget amendment" for "except under authority of a budget amendment"; and changed phraseology.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: Empowering the Finance Committee to approve budget amendments is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, because this power is properly exercisable only by either the entire Legislature or an executive officer or agency, and not by an interim committee. State ex rel. Judge v. Legislative Fin. Comm., 168 M 470, 543 P2d 1317 (1975).

1981 Amendment: Inserted "both the attorney general and" after "shall immediately notify" in (3).

Case Notes

Malicious Prosecution of State Employee — Elements Not Shown: Employer brought suit for malicious prosecution against university employee who initiated an investigation against him, the university counsel who conducted the investigation, and the president of the university. Summary judgment for defendants and dismissal of the suit were proper because two of the prima facie elements of malicious prosecution were not established. The County Attorney, not defendants, initiated and continued the prosecution, and plaintiff's bald assertion that defendants caused the prosecution did not raise a genuine issue as to who initiated it. In addition, the defendants were fulfilling a statutory duty. A second unestablished prima facie element was that the prosecution must have terminated favorably for plaintiff. Here, three charges were brought; plaintiff was acquitted of one, and two were dismissed pursuant to a bargained plea of guilty to a substituted charge arising from the investigation. Vehrs v. Piquette, 210 M 386, 684 P2d 476, 41 St. Rep. 1110 (1984).

5-13-310. Prosecution — discipline of professionals.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 14 in (1) substituted "offenses involving a state agency that are reported to the attorney general by the legislative auditor" for "offenses disclosed by an audit of a state agency performed by the legislative auditor"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Payment of Defense Counsel: The Department of Justice rather than counties is responsible for the payment of counsel for indigent defendants in prosecutions under this section. In re Barron, 170 M 218, 552 P2d 70 (1976).

Scope of Power of Prosecution — Retroactive Effect: The grant of authority in this section covers "public offenses disclosed by an audit of a state agency by the legislative auditor" and does not require individual identification of a particular offense or a particular offender by the Legislative Auditor as a precondition to the Attorney General's authority in such a manner as to defeat the obvious purpose of the legislation. The section may be given retroactive effect. St. v. Cline, 170 M 520, 555 P2d 724 (1976).

Limitation on Scope of Grand Jury Inquiry: When a grand jury was empaneled pursuant to this section, the court had authority to limit the area of the grand jury investigation by its charge given at empanelment and could inquire into the proceedings to ascertain if any instructions were not being followed. In re Grand Jury, 170 M 354, 553 P2d 987 (1976).

Investigative Subpoenas: In conducting investigations under this section, the Attorney General does not have general subpoena power and cannot, without an order of a court in a filed case or order of a grand jury, issue investigative subpoenas. State ex rel. Woodahl v. District Court, 166 M 31, 530 P2d 780 (1975).

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

Part Case Notes

Butte-Silver Bow Self-Government Charter Held Not Superior to Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act: When Babb was appointed the chief executive officer of the Butte-Silver Bow consolidated city-county government, he immediately fired both Johnston and Shea, who had been department heads of the consolidated government for many years. Johnston and Shea then sued Babb for violation of the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act (WDEA). Babb argued that because the self-government charter of the consolidated government provided that department heads serve "at the pleasure of" the chief executive officer (CEO) of the local government and because self-government charters are superior to statute, Johnston and Shea were "at will" employees to whom the WDEA did not apply. The U.S. Magistrate Judge decided, citing MacMillan v. St. Comp. Ins. Fund, 285 M 202, 947 P2d 75 (1997), that the Montana Supreme Court has held that municipalities operating under self-government charters have limitations as provided in this part, which the self-government charter itself cited, and 7-1-111(2), which applies Title 39 to local governments operating with self-government powers. Further, the Magistrate Judge decided that under Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., and Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222 (1999), the language of the self-government charter requiring department heads to serve "at the pleasure of" the CEO is not such a part of the structure and organization of local government that it is superior to statute. For these reasons, the Magistrate Judge decided that the WDEA did apply to the firing of Johnston and Shea and that they therefore could not be fired without good cause and granted Johnston and Shea's motion for summary judgment. Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005).

Regulation of Nude Dancing by Municipality: Under the broad regulatory powers of the twenty-first amendment, a municipality with self-government powers may enact an ordinance that regulates nude and seminude dancing. Billings v. Laedeke, 247 M 151, 805 P2d 1348, 48 St. Rep. 133 (1991).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of City-County Government to Acquire and Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utilities: A consolidated government with self-government powers, such as the city and county of Butte-Silver Bow, has the authority to acquire and operate electric and natural gas utilities both within and outside the boundaries of the local government unit. The Attorney General determined that Butte-Silver Bow was specifically authorized to do so after considering the local government's charter, constitutional ramifications, and whether the exercise of that authority was prohibited by local government law or other statutes applicable to self-government units and was consistent with state provisions in areas affirmatively subjected to state control, as described in 7-1-113. 48 A.G. Op. 14 (2000). See also State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100 (1981), D&F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977 (1986), and Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191 (1990).

Local Government Authority to Provide Alcohol and Drug Abuse Treatment Services: The city of Billings and Yellowstone County proposed to purchase and renovate a building for use by a nonprofit corporation providing treatment for alcohol and drug-related problems. The city proposed to issue industrial revenue bonds (IRBs) to fund a portion of the project, and the county sought a grant from the Montana Coal Board. Under the proposal, title to the building would vest in the nonprofit corporation once the IRBs have been retired. The questions presented were whether: (1) the building in question is a "governmental facility"; (2) a city or county has the power to expend funds for a building the title to which will eventually vest in a private corporation; and

(3) contracting with a private corporation is a legitimate means of providing a governmental service. In the opinion of the Attorney General, a local government unit with self-government powers and counties with general government powers are authorized to provide alcohol and drug abuse treatment services under Title 53, ch. 24. Local governments may contract with nonprofit corporations for the provision of such services. A program of alcohol and drug abuse treatment services provided by contract with a private nonprofit corporation is a "governmental service or facility" under 90-6-205 for the purpose of determining eligibility for coal impact assistance. 39 A.G. Op. 31 (1981).

Case Notes

Power of Local Governments to Require All Residents to Connect to City Water Supply: The defendants argued that a city ordinance requiring them to hook up to the city water system violated their right to privacy by denying them the freedom to choose the type of water they wanted to use. The Supreme Court held that the interest asserted did not involve matters so fundamentally affecting the defendants' rights as to invoke constitutional protection. The court also held that a local government's concern with preventing health problems is a legitimate reason for controlling the water supply and a proper exercise of governmental power. Ennis v. Stewart, 247 M 355, 807 P2d 179, 48 St. Rep. 228 (1991).

System Development Fees Allowable Form of Financing Future Expansion of City Water and Sewer System: When liberally construed, it is within the power of a self-governing municipality, as well as a reasonable extension of a city's express statutory authority, to implement the collection and accumulation of system development fees to fund a portion of the cost of future expansion of municipal water and sewer systems. The fees are proper as long as they are based on reasonably anticipated future costs of the city and the revenue generated from the fees is used solely to fund facility expansion or to pay for bonds sold for that purpose. Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191, 47 St. Rep. 1512 (1990).

Tax on Sale of Attorney's Services — Invalid: A city ordinance imposing an annual tax on every lawyer or law firm carrying on the practice of law, calculated on the basis of gross revenue generated from attorney-client relationships, was held to be an unconstitutional sales tax. The tax was beyond the scope of self-government powers and in violation of 7-1-112, since it was not related to any regulatory control measure for the health or welfare of the city but was a tax on the sale of attorneys' services. Brueggemann v. Billings, 221 M 375, 719 P2d 768, 43 St. Rep. 905 (1986).

Establishment of Refuse Disposal District by County With Self-Governing Power: Title 7, ch. 13, part 2 (now repealed), is not mandatory upon a county charter form of government when it establishes a refuse disposal district and system. That part applies to the establishment of a refuse disposal district by governments that are of general power status, not those with self-government status. Title 7, ch. 13, part 2 (now repealed), does not direct or require a local government to provide a service within the meaning of 7-1-114. Clopton v. Madison County Comm'n, 216 M 335, 701 P2d 347, 42 St. Rep. 851 (1985).

Regulatory Municipal Business License Applicable to Attorneys — Unconstitutional: A business license ordinance enacted by a self-governing municipality requiring municipal licensure of attorneys and that provided for regulation was an unconstitutional encroachment on the Supreme Court's authority to regulate the bar as provided in Art. III, sec. 2, Mont. Const., because the ordinance conditions attorneys' access to the practice of law. The ordinance included police provisions that could conceivably cover standards of practice, prohibited attorneys from carrying on their occupation without procuring a municipal license, required municipal licensure of nonresident attorneys practicing in the municipality, and provided for fines and incarceration for failing to comply with the ordinance. Harlen v. Helena, 208 M 45, 676 P2d 191, 41 St. Rep. 162 (1984).

Unconstitutional Regulation of Attorneys — Regulatory Business License Required — Self-Government Powers Municipality: A business license ordinance enacted by a self-governing municipality requiring licensure of attorneys was declared invalid in respect to the attorneys because provisions of the ordinance provided for regulation of the practice of law contrary to the Supreme Court's authority to regulate the bar as provided in Art. III, sec. 2, Mont. Const. The Supreme Court recognized the universe of powers available to self-governing local governments that are not available to general power local governments, but said that such powers are restricted by the Montana Constitution. Harlen v. Helena, 208 M 45, 676 P2d 191, 41 St. Rep. 162 (1984).

Power to Prohibit Door-to-Door Solicitation: The city of Billings enacted an ordinance declaring uninvited door-to-door solicitation a nuisance punishable as a misdemeanor. It was argued that a state statute regulating itinerant vendors did not empower a city to prohibit their activities, therefore precluding the ordinance. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under the expanded powers of local self-government provided by Montana's 1972 Constitution, a city possessing those powers may exercise any power not prohibited by the Constitution or state statute. A city possessing self-government powers may prohibit uninvited door-to-door solicitation by itinerant vendors, and a licensing statute does not legalize an activity otherwise prohibited. Any statements to the contrary contained in DeLong v. Downes, 175 M 152, 573 P2d 160 (1977), are expressly overruled. Tipco Corp. v. Billings, 197 M 339, 642 P2d 1074, 39 St. Rep. 600 (1982). See also Stevens v. Missoula, 205 M 274, 667 P2d 440, 40 St. Rep. 1267 (1983).

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Grant of Public Funds to Authority Created by Interlocal Agreement Between Self-Governing Municipalities Lawful — Debt Obligations: A self-governing municipality may grant funds for the public purpose of operating the electric and natural gas utility. Debt incurred through corporate bonds issued by a public benefit nonprofit corporation incorporated by an authority created by interlocal agreement between self-governing municipalities is not subject to laws governing municipal debts or obligations if the municipalities are not legally obligated to appropriate money to pay the debt and the debt is without recourse to the spending power of the municipalities. 51 A.G. Op. 5 (2005). See also 48 A.G. Op. 12 (2000), and 49 A.G. Op. 3 (2001).

Mandatory Seatbelt Ordinance: Under Montana law and the Montana Constitution, a municipality with self-governing powers may enact a mandatory seatbelt ordinance that provides for a fine or jail sentence for violation of the ordinance as long as the fine or penalty does not exceed $500 and the imprisonment does not exceed 6 months for any one offense, and as long as such an ordinance is not prohibited by the city charter. 41 A.G. Op. 47 (1986).

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982), overruled in Harlen v. Helena, 208 M 45, 676 P2d 191, 41 St. Rep. 162 (1984).

Competitive Bidding Requirements Mandatory: A local government unit with self-government powers cannot supersede by the passage of a resolution or ordinance the competitive bidding requirements set forth in 7-5-4302. 37 A.G. Op. 175 (1978).

County Employment of Independent Contractor to Provide Legal Services: There is no express prohibition under Montana law precluding or preventing a county from entering into an independent contractor relationship for the provision of legal services. Hamner v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 233 M 271, 760 P2d 76, 45 St. Rep. 1481 (1988).

Services Under Self-Government Powers — No Doctrine of Implied Preemption: Appellant garbage haulers contended that the Legislature preempted the field of garbage regulation by enacting 7-2-4736. Prior to the 1972 Constitution, cities had only those powers expressly given to them by the Legislature, and if the Legislature considered a subject to be a matter of statewide concern, it could enact laws on the subject and preempt local governments from the field. However, Art. XI, sec. 6, Mont. Const., states that a local government which adopts a self-government charter may exercise any power not prohibited by the Constitution, law, or the charter. The city of Billings adopted a self-government charter in 1976, and this section allows the city to provide services or perform any functions not expressly prohibited. The Supreme Court held in Tipco Corp., Inc. v. Billings, 197 M 339, 642 P2d 1074 (1982), that "the only way the doctrine of pre-emption by the state can co-exist with self-government powers of a municipality is if there is an express prohibition by statute which forbids local governments . . . from acting in a certain area. The doctrine of implied pre-emption, by definition, cannot apply to local governments with self-government powers". Powers specifically denied to local governments are enumerated in 7-1-111 and include the exercise of any power that prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public convenience and necessity. Under 69-12-314, garbage haulers are required to get a certificate of public convenience and necessity prior to doing business. The decision by Billings voters that the city should provide garbage services in no way prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public necessity. The Supreme Court held that the city was simply exercising its self-government powers to provide a service for its residents and was taxing them for that service. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986), overruling Billings v. Weatherwax, 193 M 163, 630 P2d 1216, 38 St. Rep. 1034 (1981).

Case Notes

Recorded Waiver of Annexation Protest by Prior Property Owner — Present Owner Precluded From Protesting Annexation: In 1966, the city of Whitefish adopted a policy that a landowner outside the city boundary had to agree to waive the right to protest future annexation in order to continue to receive city water and sewer services. The waivers were properly recorded and later used by the city to invalidate annexation protests by current landowners in 1998. The District Court concluded that the waivers constituted a covenant running with the land and that the current owners were precluded from protesting the proposed annexation. On appeal, the current owners argued that the right to protest in 7-2-4710 resided with the current property owner and that the statutory consent to annexation authorized by 7-13-4314 applied only to the initiation of services and could not transfer to subsequent purchasers. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under 7-1-113, a self-governing entity may act even when there are controlling state laws as long as the local government's actions are not inconsistent with or lower or less stringent than state requirements. The purpose of 7-13-4314 is to ensure that property owners outside a municipality can request utility services and to ensure that the local government can later require annexation in exchange for utilities. Creating a covenant that runs with the land furthers this purpose. In addition, 70-17-203 also provides that every covenant made for the direct benefit of the property runs with the land. The waivers directly benefited the property and were allowable, so the District Court was affirmed. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004). See also State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100 (1981), and St. John v. Lewistown, 2017 MT 126, 387 Mont. 444, 395 P.3d 486.

No Presumption That Hookup Fees Reasonable: Seypar, Inc., argued that the sewer district's $500 hookup fee assessed against each of Seypar, Inc.'s, 70 lots was unreasonable. The Supreme Court held that the District Court was wrong in finding that the district was a local self-governing unit and that therefore there was no presumption that the district's fees were reasonable. However, the Supreme Court found that the district had introduced evidence that the fees were reasonable and Seypar, Inc., had presented no contrary evidence. Therefore, Seypar, Inc., had not met its burden of proof to show that the fees were unreasonable. Seypar, Inc. v. Water & Sewer District No. 363, 1998 MT 149, 289 M 263, 960 P2d 311, 55 St. Rep. 578 (1998).

Sewer District Not Local Self-Governing Unit: The lower court granted a multicounty sewer district's motion for summary judgment, ruling that the district had the right to impose hookup inspection fees on the appellant, Seypar, Inc. Seypar, Inc., argued that the district did not have the authority to impose the fee against individual property owners and that the cost should have been assessed against the whole district. The Supreme Court ruled that although state law gave the district the same administrative powers as County Commissioners have over a single county sewer district, those powers are not the same as a local self-governing unit and therefore the district did not have the authority to exercise any power not prohibited by Montana law. The Supreme Court stated that since the district was not self-governing, it could not argue that the statutes relating to municipal districts applied to it by analogy. The Supreme Court held that the district did have the power to impose hookup fees under 7-12-2151. Seypar, Inc. v. Water & Sewer District No. 363, 1998 MT 149, 289 M 263, 960 P2d 311, 55 St. Rep. 578 (1998).

City Ordinance Requiring Developer Surcharge — Valid Exercise of Self-Governing Power: A city ordinance imposing a 5% surcharge on developers of raw land prior to creation of a special improvement district was a valid exercise of the city's self-governing powers. Diefenderfer v. Billings, 223 M 487, 726 P2d 1362, 43 St. Rep. 1934 (1986), distinguished in Seypar, Inc. v. Water & Sewer District No. 363, 1998 MT 149, 289 M 263, 960 P2d 311, 55 St. Rep. 578 (1998).

Limitation on Self-Governing Powers: The city of Billings, a self-governing city, adopted an ordinance purporting to supersede all but two sections in Title 7, ch. 33, part 41, relating to municipal fire departments. The firefighters challenged the ordinance. The District Court held that the ordinance was a permissible exercise of a self-government power. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that under the shared sovereignty concept contained in the Montana Constitution, local governments with self-governing powers are limited only by express prohibitions in the constitution, state statute, or the local government charter itself. By statute, a local government may not establish standards or requirements lower or less stringent than those imposed by state law. The court held that because the ordinance did not contain standards governing several areas it purported to supersede, the ordinance provisions were lower or less stringent than the statutory provisions and therefore invalid. A local government must provide any service required by state law. State law requires every city to have a fire department. Pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., the only statutory provisions a self-governing charter may control over are those establishing executive, legislative, and administrative structure and organization. The ordinance was invalid. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 214 M 481, 694 P2d 1335, 42 St. Rep. 112 (1985), followed in Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005), granting partial summary judgment.

Exercise of Power Under Self-Government Charter Not Limited: A county government operating under a self-government charter which elects to provide a service or perform a function that may also be provided or performed by a general power government unit is not subject to any limitation in the provision of such service or performance of that function except to the extent of such limitations as are found in its charter or in state law specifically applicable to self-government units. Thus, where a county government is not limited by its charter concerning whether it can charge a fee for review by the county-appointed land surveyor and where there is no state statute specifically forbidding self-government units from assessing a fee for the review of certificates of survey, the county's prescribed fee is valid. The county in prescribing such a fee is merely exercising a legislative power that as a self-governing unit it shares with the state. State ex rel.

Recorded Waiver of Annexation Protest by Prior Property Owner — Present Owner Precluded From Protesting Annexation: In 1966, the city of Whitefish adopted a policy that a landowner outside the city boundary had to agree to waive the right to protest future annexation in order to continue to receive city water and sewer services. Under 7-1-113, a self-governing entity may act even when there are controlling state laws as long as the local government's actions are not inconsistent with or lower or less stringent than state requirements. Creating a covenant that runs with the land furthers this purpose. In addition, 70-17-203 also provides that every covenant made for the direct benefit of the property runs with the land. The waivers directly benefited the property and were allowable, so the District Court was affirmed. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004). See also State ex rel. City Gross Revenue Franchise Fee on Facilities Using Public Right-of-Way Illegal Tax on Goods and Services: The city of Billings by ordinance established a franchise fee on several public utilities and telecommunications corporations with facilities located in the public right-of-way, and the utilities challenged the fee. The District Court held that the fee constituted an unlawful tax, and the city appealed. Despite the fact that the ordinance was subsequently rejected by voters, rendering the issue moot, the Supreme Court noted that the issue was capable of repetition and therefore accepted jurisdiction of the issue as appropriate in order to finally settle the legality of such fees in case similar ordinances were brought forth in the future. The fee in question was characterized as a franchise fee based on 4% of gross annual revenue generated by each utility that occupied the public right-of-way within the city. However, money collected was not earmarked for right-of-way maintenance or regulation, but was to be used to reduce general property taxes and to fund transportation improvement projects, public safety operations, and park maintenance, and the fee was separate from the city's police power over streets and alleys. The Supreme Court agreed that the unilaterally imposed, revenue-generating gross revenue fee, which was unrelated to the use or occupancy of the right-of-way, was in fact a tax based exclusively on the sale of a product or service within the city and was thus prohibited pursuant to 7-1-112. Mont.-Dak. Util. Co. v. Billings, 2003 MT 332, 318 M 407, 80 P3d 1247 (2003), distinguishing State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930). See also St. Louis v. W. Union Tel. Co., 148 US 92 (1893), W. Union Tel. Co. v. New Hope, 187 US 419 (1903), and Postal Tel.-Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 US 64 (1904).

Local Development Code Regulating Sale of Alcoholic Beverages Not Preempted by State: Montana's statutory framework for the regulation of alcohol clearly contemplates that cities will impose local zoning that regulates the sale of alcohol. The development code of the city of Red Lodge, a self-governing city, being consistent with and stricter than the state's regulations, was not preempted by state law. Town Pump, Inc. v. Bd. of Adjustment of Red Lodge, 1998 MT 294, 292 M 6, 971 P2d 349, 55 St. Rep. 1205 (1998), overruling State ex rel. Libby v. Haswell, 147 M 492, 414 P2d 652 (1966).

System Development Fees Allowable Form of Financing Future Expansion of City Water and Sewer System: When liberally construed, it is within the power of a self-governing municipality, as well as a reasonable extension of a city's express statutory authority, to implement the collection and accumulation of system development fees to fund a portion of the cost of future expansion of municipal water and sewer systems. The fees are proper as long as they are based on reasonably anticipated future costs of the city and the revenue generated from the fees is used solely to fund facility expansion or to pay for bonds sold for that purpose. Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191, 47 St. Rep. 1512 (1990).

Independent Exercise of Eminent Domain Power by Joint Airport Board Member: Plaintiffs argued that 67-10-205(2)(c) mandates that a proceeding for eminent domain may not be brought by a single municipal member of a joint airport board but rather only as a joint action with the other signatories. The Supreme Court found this to be an overly narrow interpretation in light of other statutory authority in Title 67, ch. 10, parts 1 and 2, which empowers municipalities to act either jointly or independently, and under the broad grant of power to cities under Art. XI, sec. 4, Mont. Const. By its terms, 67-10-205(2)(c) requires joint action when an eminent domain proceeding is brought pursuant to the authority of the joint airport board; however, it does not preclude action separate and apart from the board. Lake v. Lake County, 233 M 126, 759 P2d 161, 45 St. Rep. 1354 (1988).

City Ordinance Requiring Developer Surcharge — Valid Exercise of Self-Governing Power: A city ordinance imposing a 5% surcharge on developers of raw land prior to creation of a special improvement district was a valid exercise of the city's self-governing powers. Diefenderfer v. Billings, 223 M 487, 726 P2d 1362, 43 St. Rep. 1934 (1986).

Limitation on Self-Governing Powers: The city of Billings, a self-governing city, adopted an ordinance purporting to supersede all but two sections in Title 7, ch. 33, part 41, relating to municipal fire departments. The firefighters challenged the ordinance. The District Court held that the ordinance was a permissible exercise of a self-government power. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that under the shared sovereignty concept contained in the Montana Constitution, local governments with self-governing powers are limited only by express prohibitions in the constitution, state statute, or the local government charter itself. By statute, a local government may not establish standards or requirements lower or less stringent than those imposed by state law. The court held that because the ordinance did not contain standards governing several areas it purported to supersede, the ordinance provisions were lower or less stringent than the statutory provisions and therefore invalid. A local government must provide any service required by state law. State law requires every city to have a fire department. Pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., the only statutory provisions a self-governing charter may control over are those establishing executive, legislative, and administrative structure and organization. The ordinance was invalid. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 214 M 481, 694 P2d 1335, 42 St. Rep. 112 (1985), followed in Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005), granting partial summary judgment.

Exercise of Power Under Self-Government Charter Not Limited: A county government operating under a self-government charter which elects to provide a service or perform a function that may also be provided or performed by a general power government unit is not subject to any limitation in the provision of such service or performance of that function except to the extent of such limitations as are found in its charter or in state law specifically applicable to self-government units. Thus, where a county government is not limited by its charter concerning whether it can charge a fee for review by the county-appointed land surveyor and where there is no state statute specifically forbidding self-government units from assessing a fee for the review of certificates of survey, the county's prescribed fee is valid. The county in prescribing such a fee is merely exercising a legislative power that as a self-governing unit it shares with the state. State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100, 38 St. Rep. 71 (1981).

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Tiered Resort Tax Allowed: Resort tax statutes neither prohibit nor explicitly permit a differential tax schedule. However, a differential tax structure is not inconsistent with concerns revealed in the legislative history and may arguably further the express statutory purposes by taxing at a higher rate those businesses drawing more of their customers from tourists than those businesses serving a greater proportion of local residents. Therefore, a municipality with self-governing powers may establish a tiered resort tax schedule providing different tax rates for similar goods or services according to the character of the business in which the goods or services are offered, as long as none of the tax rates exceed 3%. 48 A.G. Op. 25 (2000).

Enactment of Local Government Ordinance Providing That Delinquent Solid Waste Service Charges Become Lien on Property Served: A city-county charter that provided that levies for special services were the obligation of the property owners was not in conflict with state constitutional powers delegated to local governments or with state law governing local governments, nor was it inconsistent with state provisions in an area affirmatively subjected to state control. Therefore, a local government with self-governing powers may enact an ordinance that provides that delinquent solid waste management service charges become a lien on the property served, consistent with the remedy available to a solid waste management district for collecting its delinquent service charges under 7-13-233 (now repealed). 44 A.G. Op. 34 (1992).

Mandatory Seatbelt Ordinance: Under Montana law and the Montana Constitution, a municipality with self-governing powers may enact a mandatory seatbelt ordinance that provides for a fine or jail sentence for violation of the ordinance as long as the fine or penalty does not exceed $500 and the imprisonment does not exceed 6 months for any one offense, and as long as such an ordinance is not prohibited by the city charter. 41 A.G. Op. 47 (1986).

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982), overruled in Harlen v. Helena, 208 M 45, 676 P2d 191, 41 St. Rep. 162 (1984).

Competitive Bidding Requirements Mandatory: A local government unit with self-government powers cannot supersede by the passage of a resolution or ordinance the competitive bidding requirements set forth in 7-5-4302. 37 A.G. Op. 175 (1978).

Case Notes

Butte-Silver Bow Self-Government Charter Held Not Superior to Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act: When Babb was appointed the chief executive officer of the Butte-Silver Bow consolidated city-county government, he immediately fired both Johnston and Shea, who had been department heads of the consolidated government for many years. Johnston and Shea then sued Babb for violation of the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act (WDEA). Babb argued that because the self-government charter of the consolidated government provided that department heads serve "at the pleasure of" the chief executive officer (CEO) of the local government and because self-government charters are superior to statute, Johnston and Shea were "at will" employees to whom the WDEA did not apply. The U.S. Magistrate Judge decided, citing MacMillan v. St. Comp. Ins. Fund, 285 M 202, 947 P2d 75 (1997), that the Montana Supreme Court has held that municipalities operating under self-government charters have limitations as provided in this part, which the self-government charter itself cited, and subsection (2) of this section, which applies Title 39 to local governments operating with self-government powers. Further, the Magistrate Judge decided that under Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., and Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222 (1999), the language of the self-government charter requiring department heads to serve "at the pleasure of" the CEO is not such a part of the structure and organization of local government that it is superior to statute. For these reasons, the Magistrate Judge decided that the WDEA did apply to the firing of Johnston and Shea and that they therefore could not be fired without good cause and granted Johnston and Shea's motion for summary judgment. Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005).

No Prohibition Against Utility Regulation by Municipality: Appellants argued that the restriction in subsection (5) of this section, which prohibits a local government unit from establishing a rate or price otherwise determined by a state agency, preempted the city of Billings from assessing new utility fees in the form of system development fees for funding the expansion of water and sewer facilities. However, under Title 69, ch. 7, municipal utility rates are not determined by a state agency; rather, unless the rates result in an increase in total revenue of 12% in any 1 year, the exclusive authority to regulate, establish, and change municipal utility rates rests with the city. Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191, 47 St. Rep. 1512 (1990).

City Ordinance Requiring Developer Surcharge — Valid Exercise of Self-Governing Power: A city ordinance imposing a 5% surcharge on developers of raw land prior to creation of a special improvement district was a valid exercise of the city's self-governing powers. Diefenderfer v. Billings, 223 M 487, 726 P2d 1362, 43 St. Rep. 1934 (1986).

Garbage Service Under Self-Government — No Doctrine of Implied Preemption: Appellant garbage haulers contended that the Legislature preempted the field of garbage regulation by enacting 7-2-4736. Prior to the 1972 Constitution, cities had only those powers expressly given to them by the Legislature, and if the Legislature considered a subject to be a matter of statewide concern, it could enact laws on the subject and preempt local governments from the field. However, Art. XI, sec. 6, Mont. Const., states that a local government which adopts a self-government charter may exercise any power not prohibited by the Constitution, law, or the charter. The city of Billings adopted a self-government charter in 1976, and 7-1-102 allows the city to provide services or perform any functions not expressly prohibited. Powers specifically denied to local governments are enumerated in this section and include the exercise of any power that prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public convenience and necessity. Under 69-12-314, garbage haulers are required to get a certificate of public convenience and necessity prior to doing business. The decision by Billings voters that the city should provide garbage services in no way prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public necessity. The Supreme Court held that the city was simply exercising its self-government powers to provide a service for its residents and was taxing them for that service. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986), overruling Billings v. Weatherwax, 193 M 163, 630 P2d 1216, 38 St. Rep. 1034 (1981).

Limitation on Self-Governing Powers: The city of Billings, a self-governing city, adopted an ordinance purporting to supersede all but two sections in Title 7, ch. 33, part 41, relating to municipal fire departments. The firefighters challenged the ordinance. The District Court held that the ordinance was a permissible exercise of a self-government power. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that under the shared sovereignty concept contained in the Montana Constitution, local governments with self-governing powers are limited only by express prohibitions in the constitution, state statute, or the local government charter itself. By statute, a local government may not establish standards or requirements lower or less stringent than those imposed by state law. The court held that because the ordinance did not contain standards governing several areas it purported to supersede, the ordinance provisions were lower or less stringent than the statutory provisions and therefore invalid. A local government must provide any service required by state law. State law requires every city to have a fire department. Pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., the only statutory provisions a self-governing charter may control over are those establishing executive, legislative, and administrative structure and organization. The ordinance was invalid. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 214 M 481, 694 P2d 1335, 42 St. Rep. 112 (1985), followed in Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005), granting partial summary judgment.

Self-Governing Unit Ordinance — State Statute Silent on Subject of Ordinance: A county's ordinance enacted pursuant to a self-government charter that requires payment of a fee for review by the appointed land surveyor of certificates of survey does not prescribe a lower standard than 76-3-611 (requiring review but no fee), is "not less stringent", and therefore, under 7-1-113, is not the exercise of a power inconsistent with state law. State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100, 38 St. Rep. 71 (1981).

Attorney General's Opinions

Ordinance Requiring Background Checks for Firearms Transfers Within City — Prohibited: The city of Missoula adopted an ordinance requiring that a transferee to any firearm transfer conducted within the city limits submit to a background check. The Attorney General concluded that the ordinance violated Montana law and that a city with self-governing powers, such as the city of Missoula, is prohibited under 7-1-111 from enforcing a local regulation or ordinance that requires background checks on firearms sales or transfers within its borders. 57 A.G. Op. 1 (2017).

Authority of City-County Government to Acquire and Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utilities: A consolidated government with self-government powers, such as the city and county of Butte-Silver Bow, has the authority to acquire and operate electric and natural gas utilities both within and outside the boundaries of the local government unit. The Attorney General determined that Butte-Silver Bow was specifically authorized to do so after considering the local government's charter, constitutional ramifications, and whether the exercise of that authority was prohibited by local government law or other statutes applicable to self-government units and was consistent with state provisions in areas affirmatively subjected to state control, as described in 7-1-113. 48 A.G. Op. 14 (2000). See also State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100 (1981), D&F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977 (1986), and Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191 (1990).

City Authority to Enact Photo-Radar Ordinance: No state agency is given exclusive power to establish administrative rules governing speed of traffic in cities and towns, nor is the enforcement of speed regulations exclusively vested in a state agency. Therefore, the city of Billings, under its self-government charter, is not precluded by statute from enacting a photo-radar ordinance providing either for accountability on the part of the registered owner for illegal speeding by any person operating the vehicle with the owner's permission or for a permissive inference that the registered owner was the speeding violator. 45 A.G. Op. 7 (1993).

Enactment of Local Government Ordinance Providing That Delinquent Solid Waste Service Charges Become Lien on Property Served: A city-county charter that provided that levies for special services were the obligation of the property owners was not in conflict with state constitutional powers delegated to local governments or with state law governing local governments, nor was it inconsistent with state provisions in an area affirmatively subjected to state control. Therefore, a local government with self-governing powers may enact an ordinance that provides that delinquent solid waste management service charges become a lien on the property served, consistent with the remedy available to a solid waste management district for collecting its delinquent service charges under 7-13-233 (now repealed). 44 A.G. Op. 34 (1992).

Public Utility Contractor Not to Install Certain Service Lines in Billings Unless Licensed by State as Plumber — City Required to Check License Qualifications: The city of Billings may not allow public utility contractors to install water and wastewater service lines that extend from the public water or sewer main to a point within the walls of the private property or within 20 feet from any foundation wall of the private residence unless the contractor also has a plumber's license issued by the state. The city is required to determine whether a person applying for a plumbing permit pursuant to the Uniform Plumbing Code is licensed by the state as a plumber if the type of work described in the permit requires licensure as a requisite to performance. 44 A.G. Op. 12 (1991). In clarifying this opinion, the Attorney General noted that work done on a public water supply or public sewer system that does not include work falling within the statutory distances for plumbing or drainage systems does not require a state-issued plumber's license. Therefore, the city of Billings may not allow public utility contractors to install water service lines that extend from the public water main to a point within the walls of the private property or within 20 feet from any foundation wall of the premises, whichever distance is shorter as measured from the foundation wall, or wastewater service lines that extend from the public sewer main to a point within 2 feet from any foundation wall of the premises, unless the contractor also has a plumber's license issued by the state. 44 A.G. Op. 39 (1992).

Extraterritorial Extension of City Zoning Regulations: In the absence of applicable county zoning regulations, 76-2-310 authorizes a city of the first class that has adopted a master plan (now growth policy) to extend its zoning regulations extraterritorially within a 3-mile radius of its corporate limits without reference to county boundary lines. 43 A.G. Op. 22 (1989).

Case Notes

Self-Government Local Governments Not Prohibited From Adopting No-Smoking Ordinances Affecting Gambling Establishments: Former section 7-1-120 (now repealed) provided: "An establishment that has been granted a permit under Title 23, chapter 5, part 6, for the placement of video gambling machines on the premises is exempt from any local government ordinance that is more restrictive than the provisions of Title 50, chapter 40, part 1", which is the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979. Under Art. XI, sec. 6, Mont. Const., "A local government unit adopting a self-government charter may exercise any power not prohibited by this constitution, law, or charter." To exempt is not to prohibit. A prohibition cuts off the power to act in the first instance. An exemption assumes that there is authority or power to act and grants freedom or immunity from that power. Section 7-1-120 did not effect an express prohibition of self-governing powers. Therefore, it did not preempt any no-smoking ordinances adopted by a self-governing entity. The state argued that it had preempted the area of state-licensed video gambling machines and that city ordinances limiting or prohibiting smoking in buildings open to the public, one ordinance of which expressly applied to premises with state licenses for video gambling machines, were inconsistent with that preemption. Subsection (5) of this section prohibits a local government with self-government powers from exercising the power to regulate any form of gambling. The cities' clean air ordinances are not an attempt to regulate gambling in contravention of the subsection (5) prohibition; the ordinances regulate clean indoor air, and if that regulation incidentally impacts video gambling machine establishments, that fact does not invalidate the ordinances. The ordinances have incidental impacts on all buildings open to the public. Am. Cancer Soc'y v. St., 2004 MT 376, 325 M 70, 103 P3d 1085 (2004).

City Gross Revenue Franchise Fee on Facilities Using Public Right-of-Way Illegal Tax on Goods and Services: The city of Billings by ordinance established a franchise fee on several public utilities and telecommunications corporations with facilities located in the public right-of-way, and the utilities challenged the fee. The District Court held that the fee constituted an unlawful tax, and the city appealed. Despite the fact that the ordinance was subsequently rejected by voters, rendering the issue moot, the Supreme Court noted that the issue was capable of repetition and therefore accepted jurisdiction of the issue as appropriate in order to finally settle the legality of such fees in case similar ordinances were brought forth in the future. The fee in question was characterized as a franchise fee based on 4% of gross annual revenue generated by each utility that occupied the public right-of-way within the city. However, money collected was not earmarked for right-of-way maintenance or regulation, but was to be used to reduce general property taxes and to fund transportation improvement projects, public safety operations, and park maintenance, and the fee was separate from the city's police power over streets and alleys. The Supreme Court agreed that the unilaterally imposed, revenue-generating gross revenue fee, which was unrelated to the use or occupancy of the right-of-way, was in fact a tax based exclusively on the sale of a product or service within the city and was thus prohibited pursuant to this section. Mont.-Dak. Util. Co. v. Billings, 2003 MT 332, 318 M 407, 80 P3d 1247 (2003), distinguishing State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930). See also St. Louis v. W. Union Tel. Co., 148 US 92 (1893), W. Union Tel. Co. v. New Hope, 187 US 419 (1903), and Postal Tel.-Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 US 64 (1904).

System Development Fee as Service Charge, Not Tax: System development fees that are placed in a special fund earmarked for expanding a city's water and sewer facilities or for retiring bonds issued for that purpose, rather than being held in a general revenue fund to be used on projects unrelated to water and sewer systems, are not taxes but service charges, which the city is not prohibited from adopting by this section. Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191, 47 St. Rep. 1512 (1990).

Tax on Sale of Attorney's Services — Invalid: A city ordinance imposing an annual tax on every lawyer or law firm carrying on the practice of law, calculated on the basis of gross revenue generated from attorney-client relationships, was held to be an unconstitutional sales tax. The tax was beyond the scope of self-government powers and in violation of 7-1-112, since it was not related to any regulatory control measure for the health or welfare of the city but was a tax on the sale of attorneys' services. Brueggemann v. Billings, 221 M 375, 719 P2d 768, 43 St. Rep. 905 (1986).

Fee for Occupancy of Motel Room Held a Sales Tax: Where the city of Billings imposed a fee of $1 on each adult transient for each day he occupied a hotel or motel room, the District Court erred in holding that the fee was not a sales tax, prohibited by law, on a service. The fact that the tax is imposed on the occupant rather than upon the passage of possession of the room is not persuasive on the issue of whether the fee is a tax upon a service. The fee is directly connected to the renting of the room, as such a fee is not imposed upon any other type of business. The ordinance imposing the fee is illegal and void. Mont. Innkeepers Ass'n v. Billings, 206 M 425, 671 P2d 21, 40 St. Rep. 1753 (1983).

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Tiered Resort Tax Allowed: Resort tax statutes neither prohibit nor explicitly permit a differential tax schedule. However, a differential tax structure is not inconsistent with concerns revealed in the legislative history and may arguably further the express statutory purposes by taxing at a higher rate those businesses drawing more of their customers from tourists than those businesses serving a greater proportion of local residents. Therefore, a municipality with self-governing powers may establish a tiered resort tax schedule providing different tax rates for similar goods or services according to the character of the business in which the goods or services are offered, as long as none of the tax rates exceed 3%. 48 A.G. Op. 25 (2000).

City Authority to Enact Photo-Radar Ordinance: No state agency is given exclusive power to establish administrative rules governing speed of traffic in cities and towns, nor is the enforcement of speed regulations exclusively vested in a state agency. Therefore, the city of Billings, under its self-government charter, is not precluded by statute from enacting a photo-radar ordinance providing either for accountability on the part of the registered owner for illegal speeding by any person operating the vehicle with the owner's permission or for a permissive inference that the registered owner was the speeding violator. 45 A.G. Op. 7 (1993).

7-1-113. Consistency with state regulation required.

City Ordinances Criminalizing Refusal to Take Requested Breath Test and Assessing Penalty Consistent With and Not Less Stringent Than State Law — Ordinances Enforceable: The city of Missoula enacted an ordinance providing for a misdemeanor for refusing to take a requested breath test and a second ordinance authorizing a $500 penalty for the misdemeanor. After being pulled over, the defendant refused to take a breath test. She was charged with violating the ordinance and was assessed the penalty. She challenged the charges, arguing that the city did not have the authority to enact the ordinances. After being convicted, she appealed to the Supreme Court, which held that Missoula had the authority to enact the ordinances given that the ordinances did not conflict with the state's DUI laws and were not less stringent than state law. Missoula v. Armitage, 2014 MT 274, 376 Mont. 448, 335 P.3d 736.

Local Development Code Regulating Sale of Alcoholic Beverages Not Preempted by State: Montana's statutory framework for the regulation of alcohol clearly contemplates that cities will impose local zoning that regulates the sale of alcohol. The development code of the city of Red Lodge, a self-governing city, being consistent with and stricter than the state's regulations, was not preempted by state law. Town Pump, Inc. v. Bd. of Adjustment of Red Lodge, 1998 MT 294, 292 M 6, 971 P2d 349, 55 St. Rep. 1205 (1998), overruling State ex rel. Libby v. Haswell, 147 M 492, 414 P2d 652 (1966).

No Mandatory Application of Wastewater Treatment Regulation by Local Board of Health: Under 76-3-501, review and approval or disapproval of a subdivision under the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act may occur only under regulations in effect at the time that an application is submitted to the governing body. The Lewis and Clark County Commission approved the Green Acres subdivision in July 1990, at which time the Lewis and Clark County Board of Health's onsite wastewater treatment regulations mandated shallow standard treatment systems, rather than the present regulation requiring intermittent sand filters. Skinner Enterprises, Inc., argued that the 1990 regulation should be applied pursuant to 76-3-501. However, local boards of health derive authority to regulate subdivisions from 50-2-116, not from the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act. Therefore, the local board's own onsite wastewater treatment regulations did not obligate the local board to apply the 1990 regulation. Further, 50-2-130 allows local boards of health to promulgate regulations that are more stringent than comparable state regulations, notwithstanding the provisions of this section prohibiting a local government from exercising any power inconsistent with state law or administrative regulations. The facts regarding whether shallow-capped drainfields or intermittent sand filters are considered more stringent were not the subject of the present appeal. The discretionary authority of the local board of health to regulate subdivision sanitation by requiring intermittent sand filters was affirmed. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark County Bd. of Health, 286 M 256, 950 P2d 733, 54 St. Rep. 1398 (1997). In early 1998, prior to trial, the Board again amended the onsite wastewater treatment regulations, superseding the 1995 regulations to which Skinner objected. As a result, the legality of the 1995 amendments were no longer of any practical consequence to the parties and Skinner's objections to the process by which the 1995 amendments were adopted were moot and properly dismissed. Skinner Enterprises, Inc. v. Lewis & Clark City-County Health Dept., 1999 MT 106, 294 M 310, 980 P2d 1049, 56 St. Rep. 438 (1999).

Setting of Municipal Utility Rates Not Subjected to State Control: The setting of rates and charges for municipal utilities has not been affirmatively subjected to state control within the meaning of this section. The enforcement of standards or requirements and the power to establish administrative rules in the area of municipal ratemaking are not vested in any state agency or officer. Rather, 69-7-201 requires the municipal utility, with the concurrence of the municipal governing body, to adopt rules for operating the utility. Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191, 47 St. Rep. 1512 (1990).

City Ordinance Requiring Developer Surcharge — Valid Exercise of Self-Governing Power: A city ordinance imposing a 5% surcharge on developers of raw land prior to creation of a special improvement district was a valid exercise of the city's self-governing powers. Diefenderfer v. Billings, 223 M 487, 726 P2d 1362, 43 St. Rep. 1934 (1986).

Limitation on Self-Governing Powers: The city of Billings, a self-governing city, adopted an ordinance purporting to supersede all but two sections in Title 7, ch. 33, part 41, relating to municipal fire departments. The firefighters challenged the ordinance. The District Court held that the ordinance was a permissible exercise of a self-government power. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that under the shared sovereignty concept contained in the Montana Constitution, local governments with self-governing powers are limited only by express prohibitions in the constitution, state statute, or the local government charter itself. By statute, a local government may not establish standards or requirements lower or less stringent than those imposed by state law. The court held that because the ordinance did not contain standards governing several areas it purported to supersede, the ordinance provisions were lower or less stringent than the statutory provisions and therefore invalid. A local government must provide any service required by state law. State law requires every city to have a fire department. Pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., the only statutory provisions a self-governing charter may control over are those establishing executive, legislative, and administrative structure and organization. The ordinance was invalid. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 214 M 481, 694 P2d 1335, 42 St. Rep. 112 (1985), followed in Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005), granting partial summary judgment.

Self-Governing Unit Ordinance — State Statute Silent on Subject of Ordinance: A county's ordinance enacted pursuant to a self-government charter that requires payment of a fee for review by the appointed land surveyor of certificates of survey does not prescribe a lower standard than 76-3-611 (requiring review but no fee), is "not less stringent", and therefore, under 7-1-113, is not the exercise of a power inconsistent with state law. State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100, 38 St. Rep. 71 (1981).

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Authority to Set Water and Sewer Service Rates — Applicability of Human Rights Act to Setting of Water and Sewer Rates: A provision in 7-13-4304 provides that the rates for municipal water and sewer charges may be fixed in advance and must be uniform for like services in all parts of the municipality. The city of Bozeman sought to provide discounts or preferential rates to senior citizens on water and wastewater charges. The question was whether the senior rates violated the statutory requirement for uniform or equitable rates. The Attorney General held that because water and sewer ratemaking is not an area affirmatively subject to state control, a local government with self-government powers may set rates for those services without regard to the requirements of 7-13-4304. However, the Attorney General noted that age discrimination does violate Title 49, ch. 2, commonly known as the Montana Human Rights Act, that Bozeman is subject to the Act despite its status as a self-governing municipality, and that discrimination in government services is affirmatively subject to state control. Without deciding whether Bozeman's proposed ordinance would meet the standard of strict construction of reasonable grounds based on age, the Attorney General nevertheless concluded that 49-2-308 of the Act did apply to the Bozeman ordinance setting senior rates for municipal water and sewer services. 50 A.G. Op. 10 (2004).

Authority of City-County Government to Acquire and Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utilities: A consolidated government with self-government powers, such as the city and county of Butte-Silver Bow, has the authority to acquire and operate electric and natural gas utilities both within and outside the boundaries of the local government unit. The Attorney General determined that Butte-Silver Bow was specifically authorized to do so after considering the local government's charter, constitutional ramifications, and whether the exercise of that authority was prohibited by local government law or other statutes applicable to self-government units and was consistent with state provisions in areas affirmatively subjected to state control, as described in this section. 48 A.G. Op. 14 (2000). See also State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100 (1981), D&F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977 (1986), and Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191 (1990).

No Authority for Self-Governing City to Assess Fire Service Fees to State Property Within Fire Service Area: The city of Helena, a self-governing city, is precluded from assessing fire service fees to state property located in the city fire service area because the fees are a tax for services provided for the general public good, and thus prohibited by 15-6-201(1)(a)(ii), rather than an assessment commensurate with a specific benefit conferred on the assessed property. 46 A.G. Op. 7 (1995).

City Authority to Enact Photo-Radar Ordinance: No state agency is given exclusive power to establish administrative rules governing speed of traffic in cities and towns, nor is the enforcement of speed regulations exclusively vested in a state agency. Therefore, the city of Billings, under its self-government charter, is not precluded by statute from enacting a photo-radar ordinance providing either for accountability on the part of the registered owner for illegal speeding by any person operating the vehicle with the owner's permission or for a permissive inference that the registered owner was the speeding violator. 45 A.G. Op. 7 (1993).

Enactment of Local Government Ordinance Providing That Delinquent Solid Waste Service Charges Become Lien on Property Served: A city-county charter that provided that levies for special services were the obligation of the property owners was not in conflict with state constitutional powers delegated to local governments or with state law governing local governments, nor was it inconsistent with state provisions in an area affirmatively subjected to state control. Therefore, a local government with self-governing powers may enact an ordinance that provides that delinquent solid waste management service charges become a lien on the property served, consistent with the remedy available to a solid waste management district for collecting its delinquent service charges under 7-13-233 (now repealed). 44 A.G. Op. 34 (1992).

Funeral Procession Vehicles Not to Be Exempted From Traffic Laws by City Ordinance: A city with self-government powers may not enact an ordinance exempting vehicles in a funeral procession from obeying traffic control devices by designating the vehicles as authorized emergency vehicles. 43 A.G. Op. 53 (1990).

Sale of City Land by City With Self-Government Powers — Vote Required: Although subsection (2)(a) of 7-8-4201 requires a two-thirds vote of the city commission to sell city land, a city with self-governing powers may enact a superseding ordinance allowing the sale of city land by a simple majority vote. 43 A.G. Op. 41 (1989). After analyzing 7-8-4201(2)(b), the Attorney General applied the same analysis and conclusion to allow the governing body of a local government unit with self-governing powers to enact an ordinance providing for the disposition by majority vote of the council of property held in trust for a specific purpose. 43 A.G. Op. 55 (1990).

Local Governments Preempted by State Law From Controlling Beer Sales: By enacting 16-1-102, the Legislature reserved to the state the entire control of the manufacture, sale, and distribution of beer. Thus, neither cities nor counties have authority to enact ordinances requiring distributors of keg beer to keep and maintain records of the sales or distribution of all beer kegs within the city or county. 40 A.G. Op. 48 (1984).

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982), overruled in Harlen v. Helena, 208 M 45, 676 P2d 191, 41 St. Rep. 162 (1984).

County Powers — Revenue Funds: Unless a specific mode or manner of action is mandated by statute, counties may contract with individuals or private organizations, including nonprofit service organizations, for the purchase of services or materials the counties are authorized by statute to provide their constituents if the contracts are reasonable and appropriate methods of furnishing services or materials. Counties may use federal revenue sharing funds to purchase any services or materials they could use county tax revenues to purchase. 37 A.G. Op. 105 (1978).

Increase in County Attorney's Salary: A county having self-government powers may grant an increase in salary to its County Attorney in excess of the amount provided in 7-4-2503, but the increase must be borne by the general fund of the county. 37 A.G. Op. 70 (1977).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 278 in (1)(g) at beginning inserted exception clause and at end after "local governments" deleted "except that the mill levy limits established by 15-10-420 apply"; inserted (3) regarding mill levy limits and application of 15-10-420; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Applicability: Section 64, Ch. 278, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to special purpose districts beginning July 1, 2002."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 584 at end of (1)(g) substituted "established by 15-10-420 apply" for "established by state law do not apply". Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

Severability: Section 172, Ch. 584, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 175, Ch. 584, L. 1999, provided that this section applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (1)(b) substituted "Title 7, chapter 3, part 1" for references to 7-3-104 through 7-3-106, 7-3-111 through 7-3-114, and 7-3-1101 through 7-3-1105; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Case Notes

Recorded Waiver of Annexation Protest by Prior Property Owner — Present Owner Precluded From Protesting Annexation: In 1966, the city of Whitefish adopted a policy that a landowner outside the city boundary had to agree to waive the right to protest future annexation in order to continue to receive city water and sewer services. The waivers were properly recorded and later used by the city to invalidate annexation protests by current landowners in 1998. The District Court concluded that the waivers constituted a covenant running with the land and that the current owners were precluded from protesting the proposed annexation. On appeal, the current owners argued that the right to protest in 7-2-4710 resided with the current property owner and that the statutory consent to annexation authorized by 7-13-4314 applied only to the initiation of services and could not transfer to subsequent purchasers. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under 7-1-113, a self-governing entity may act even when there are controlling state laws as long as the local government's actions are not inconsistent with or lower or less stringent than state requirements. The purpose of 7-13-4314 is to ensure that property owners outside a municipality can request utility services and to ensure that the local government can later require annexation in exchange for utilities. Creating a covenant that runs with the land furthers this purpose. In addition, 70-17-203 also provides that every covenant made for the direct benefit of the property runs with the land. The waivers directly benefited the property and were allowable, so the District Court was affirmed. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004). See also State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100 (1981), and St. John v. Lewistown, 2017 MT 126, 387 Mont. 444, 395 P.3d 486.

Suspension of Firefighters — All Cities Required to Present Charges to City Council for Hearing — Suspension Procedure Not Part of "Structure" of City Government Under Applicable Definitions — Statute Not Superseded by Charter: Elsenpeter, a Billings firefighter, was suspended from duty by the Billings fire chief. The firefighters' union filed a lawsuit in which the union contended that the suspension procedure used by the city was unlawful because the charges against Elsenpeter were not presented to the Billings City Council for hearing pursuant to 7-33-4124. The city contended that the suspension procedure that it used is part of the structure and organization of the city under its charter and that, pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5, Mont. Const., and 7-3-701(2), which allow the structure of a chartered city government to supersede statutory requirements, the city may override the statutory requirements for hearing contained in 7-33-4124 because the definition of "structure" contained in 7-1-4121(24) is the definition that should apply. The Supreme Court held that in as much as the definitions in 7-1-4121 are, by the terms of that section, limited in their application to 7-1-4121 through 7-1-4149, the dictionary definition of "structure" is the definition that applies. Because the dictionary definition of structure was narrower, the Supreme Court held that the disciplinary suspension procedure used by the city was not part of the "structure" of city government. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that the statutory procedure contained in 7-33-4124, requiring presentment of the charges to the City Council, was not superseded by the city charter and had to be followed for the purposes of the suspension of Elsenpeter. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973

P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005), granting partial summary judgment.

Statutory Duty of City Council to Hold Termination Hearing Not Superseded by City Policy or Collective Bargaining Agreement: Phillips was terminated from his employment as a full-time firefighter for the city of Livingston. Before his termination, the city manager held a termination hearing. Phillips argued that the hearing was held in violation of 7-33-4124, requiring the hearing to be held before the City Council. The city responded that the termination procedures followed were provided in the city policy and procedures manual that was included in the firefighters' collective bargaining agreement and that the provisions of that agreement controlled pursuant to 39-31-306(3). The Supreme Court noted that the agreement adopted the city's procedures manual that allowed the manager to hold the hearing but that the agreement also referenced termination action "by the appropriate authority". Because the appropriate authority under 7-33-4124 was the City Council, the Supreme Court held that the agreement and the city's policies did not supersede state statute. Phillips v. Livingston, 268 M 156, 885 P2d 528, 51 St. Rep. 1227 (1994), followed, as to the inability of a city charter to supersede the statutory duty of a City Council to hold a disciplinary hearing, in Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999).

City Ordinance Requiring Developer Surcharge — Valid Exercise of Self-Governing Power: A city ordinance imposing a 5% surcharge on developers of raw land prior to creation of a special improvement district was a valid exercise of the city's self-governing powers. (See 1999 amendment.) Diefenderfer v. Billings, 223 M 487, 726 P2d 1362, 43 St. Rep. 1934 (1986).

Establishment of Refuse Disposal District by County With Self-Governing Power: Title 7, ch. 13, part 2 (now repealed), is not mandatory upon a county charter form of government when it establishes a refuse disposal district and system. That part applies to the establishment of a refuse disposal district by governments that are of general power status, not those with self-government status. Title 7, ch. 13, part 2 (now repealed), does not direct or require a local government to provide a service within the meaning of this section. Clopton v. Madison County Comm'n, 216 M 335, 701 P2d 347, 42 St. Rep. 851 (1985).

Limitation on Self-Governing Powers: The city of Billings, a self-governing city, adopted an ordinance purporting to supersede all but two sections in Title 7, ch. 33, part 41, relating to municipal fire departments. The firefighters challenged the ordinance. The District Court held that the ordinance was a permissible exercise of a self-government power. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that under the shared sovereignty concept contained in the Montana Constitution, local governments with self-governing powers are limited only by express prohibitions in the constitution, state statute, or the local government charter itself. By statute, a local government may not establish standards or requirements lower or less stringent than those imposed by state law. The court held that because the ordinance did not contain standards governing several areas it purported to supersede, the ordinance provisions were lower or less stringent than the statutory provisions and therefore invalid. A local government must provide any service required by state law. State law requires every city to have a fire department. Pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., the only statutory provisions a self-governing charter may control over are those establishing executive, legislative, and administrative structure and organization. The ordinance was invalid. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 214 M 481, 694 P2d 1335, 42 St. Rep. 112 (1985), followed in Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005), granting partial summary judgment.

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Planning Board Not to Be Vested With Municipal Zoning Commission Powers: Authorization does not exist for designation of a city planning board as a zoning commission, and this section prohibits establishment of an alternative zoning system by local ordinance. Therefore, a city exercising self-government powers may not vest its municipal planning board with powers vested in municipal zoning commissions by 76-2-307. 47 A.G. Op. 4 (1997).

No Authority for Self-Governing City to Assess Fire Service Fees to State Property Within Fire Service Area: The city of Helena, a self-governing city, is precluded from assessing fire service fees to state property located in the city fire service area because the fees are a tax for services provided for the general public good, and thus prohibited by 15-6-201(1)(a)(ii), rather than an assessment commensurate with a specific benefit conferred on the assessed property. 46 A.G. Op. 7 (1995).

City Authority to Enact Photo-Radar Ordinance: No state agency is given exclusive power to establish administrative rules governing speed of traffic in cities and towns, nor is the enforcement of speed regulations exclusively vested in a state agency. Therefore, the city of Billings, under its self-government charter, is not precluded by statute from enacting a photo-radar ordinance providing either for accountability on the part of the registered owner for illegal speeding by any person operating the vehicle with the owner's permission or for a permissive inference that the registered owner was the speeding violator. 45 A.G. Op. 7 (1993).

Enactment of Local Government Ordinance Providing That Delinquent Solid Waste Service Charges Become Lien on Property Served: A city-county charter that provided that levies for special services were the obligation of the property owners was not in conflict with state constitutional powers delegated to local governments or with state law governing local governments, nor was it inconsistent with state provisions in an area affirmatively subjected to state control. Therefore, a local government with self-governing powers may enact an ordinance that provides that delinquent solid waste management service charges become a lien on the property served, consistent with the remedy available to a solid waste management district for collecting its delinquent service charges under 7-13-233 (now repealed). 44 A.G. Op. 34 (1992).

City Not Authorized to Reduce Office Hours: The phrase "unless otherwise provided by law", as used in 7-4-102, does not authorize a city to enact a municipal ordinance reducing the number of hours during which city offices must be open. Subsection (1)(f) of this section prohibits a city from reducing its office hours beyond those required by 7-4-102. 43 A.G. Op. 16 (1989).

Local Government Subject to State Zoning Laws — Ordinance Creating Appeal Prohibited: Section 7-1-114 prohibits a local legislative body from providing for an optional appeal of decisions from the local zoning Board of Adjustment to the legislative body since 76-2-327 provides that appeal may only be to a court of record. Section 76-2-321 authorizes the local legislative body to act instead of the Board of Adjustment in certain cases, not in addition to the Board. 38 A.G. Op. 98 (1980).

Mandatory Provisions — Procedural Laws: Section 7-1-114 applies to procedural as well as substantive laws. 38 A.G. Op. 98 (1980).

Local Governments — Authority to Borrow From Financial Institutions: A county, city, or town with general government or self-government powers can incur indebtedness by borrowing money directly from a financial institution. This authority to borrow does not change the debt limitations on the local government. 38 A.G. Op. 14 (1979).

Competitive Bidding Requirements Mandatory: A local government unit with self-government powers cannot supersede by the passage of a resolution or ordinance the competitive bidding requirements set forth in 7-5-4302. 37 A.G. Op. 175 (1978).

Self-Government Powers: Section 7-4-2503 does not apply to self-government units since it may be superseded by ordinance or resolution of the Commission and is not prohibited by 7-1-114(1)(g). 37 A.G. Op. 68 (1977).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 286 in (1) in first sentence inserted reference to Title 7, chapter 11, part 10; inserted (17) requiring a municipality to comply with this section if a special district is governed by a separate board; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

Saving Clause: Section 42, Ch. 286, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

Transition: Section 43, Ch. 286, L. 2009, provided: "(1) Subject to subsection (2), a special district in existence on [the effective date of this act] [effective July 1, 2009] must comply with the provisions of [sections 1 through 20] [Title 7, ch. 11, part 10] upon alteration of its boundaries or a change in its amount or method of assessment. If dissolution is proposed for a special district in existence on [the effective date of this act] [effective July 1, 2009], the proposal is subject to the provisions of [section 20] [7-11-1029].

(2) A special district in existence on [the effective date of this act] [effective July 1, 2009] is required to comply with the provisions of [section 10] [7-11-1014] only upon alteration of its boundaries."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 254 inserted language in (3)(b) authorizing cancellation of administrative board election when number of candidates is equal to or less than number of positions, appointment of persons when no nominees for position, and election of person by acclamation when only one nominee; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Case Notes

Standing of Board of Adjustment to Appeal District Court Review of Board Decision: After plaintiffs built an addition on their house, they applied for a zoning variance because the addition violated the subdivision setback requirement. The variance was denied by the defendant board of adjustment, and plaintiffs appealed to District Court for a writ of certiorari. The court granted the variance, and the board appealed. Plaintiffs contended that the board lacked standing because the board was a quasi-judicial body, not an aggrieved party, and because under this section, an administrative board may not sue or be sued independently of the local government unless authorized by state law. The Supreme Court disagreed. The writ of certiorari was directed to the board, and plaintiffs' petition named the board as the opposing party, so the board was a party to the litigation and had standing to appeal. Arkell v. Middle Cottonwood Bd. of Zoning Adjustment, 2007 MT 160, 338 M 77, 162 P3d 856 (2007).

County Powers Not Inclusive of Legislative Powers — Closing of County Incinerator Considered Administrative Act Not Subject to Initiative and Referendum: Absent a charter granting self-government powers, a county that exercises only general powers is limited to whatever powers that the Legislature expressly or impliedly grants. Even though the Montana Constitution extends initiative and referendum authority to voters of local government entities, that power is limited to the local government's legislative authorization. Beyond basic corporate powers exercised by a Board of County Commissioners, a general government county functions through administrative boards, districts, and commissions created under specific statutory authority. In this case, Park County created an administrative refuse district and subsequently closed the county-owned incinerator. The closing of the incinerator was subject to the powers of initiative and referendum only if it was within the county's legislative jurisdiction. However, the incinerator closing was an administrative rather than legislative act and thus was not subject to initiative and referendum. 50 A.G. Op. 8 (2004).

Operates Automatically: Section 7-1-2111 (now repealed) operates automatically to place a county in a certain class on the ascertainment of such valuation as shown from the records of the assessor's office in even-numbered years. State ex rel. Jaumotte v. Zimmerman, 105 M 464, 73 P2d 548 (1937).

Salary Reduction From Reclassification — Constitutionality: Since county officers elected in 1936 were charged with the knowledge that their salaries might be changed by a reclassification of their county as provided by 7-1-2111 (now repealed), an act in force since 1905, they took office with the knowledge that their salaries might be reduced depending upon assessed valuation of property in the county. Thus the provision of Art. V, sec. 31, 1889 Mont. Const. [no similar provision in 1972 Mont. Const.], prohibiting the passing of a law increasing or diminishing an official's salary after his election was not violated. (See 2001 amendments to county salary laws, particularly 7-4-2503.) State ex rel. Jaumotte v. Zimmerman, 105 M 464, 73 P2d 548 (1937).

Change in Boundaries of County: When a portion of one county is attached to another county, the last assessment on the territory so attached may be ascertained by reference to the assessment books of the former county in determining the classification of the latter county as established by the assessed valuation of property within its boundaries. State ex rel. Herford v. Cook, 14 M 201, 36 P 44 (1894).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Local Government Authority to Provide Alcohol and Drug Abuse Treatment Services: The city of Billings and Yellowstone County proposed to purchase and renovate a building for use by a nonprofit corporation providing treatment for alcohol and drug-related problems. The city proposed to issue industrial revenue bonds (IRBs) to fund a portion of the project, and the county sought a grant from the Montana Coal Board. Under the proposal, title to the building would vest in the nonprofit corporation once the IRBs have been retired. The questions presented were whether: (1) the building in question is a "governmental facility"; (2) a city or county has the power to expend funds for a building the title to which will eventually vest in a private corporation; and (3) contracting with a private corporation is a legitimate means of providing a governmental service. In the opinion of the Attorney General, a local government unit with self-government powers and counties with general government powers are authorized to provide alcohol and drug abuse treatment services under Title 53, ch. 24. Local governments may contract with nonprofit corporations for the provision of such services. A program of alcohol and drug abuse treatment services provided by contract with a private nonprofit corporation is a "governmental service or facility" under 90-6-205 for the purpose of determining eligibility for coal impact assistance. 39 A.G. Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER 1972 CONSTITUTION

Powers of Self-Government Charter Counties: Under the 1889 Montana Constitution, legislative control over counties was supreme; counties could exercise only such powers as were expressly granted to them by the state, together with such implied powers as were necessary for the execution of the powers expressly granted. The 1972 Montana Constitution opened to local government units new vistas of shared sovereignty with the state through the adoption of self-government charters. Article XI, sec. 4, Mont. Const., continues to provide that general local government forms have such powers as are expressly provided or implied by law (to be liberally construed), but Art. XI, sec. 6, Mont. Const., provides that a local government unit may act under a self-government charter with its powers uninhibited except by express prohibitions of the constitution, law, or charter. The broad expanse of shared sovereignty given to self-governing local units is illustrated by 7-1-103 and 7-1-106. Madison County, having a self-governing charter form of local government, may exercise legislative powers it shares with the state. State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100, 38 St. Rep. 71 (1981).

DECISIONS UNDER 1889 CONSTITUTION

Political Subdivision of State: A county is one of the civil divisions of the state for political and judicial purposes, created by the sovereign power of the state of its own will, without the consent of the people who inhabit it. It is quasi-corporate in character but has only such powers as are expressly provided by law or are necessarily implied by those expressed. Lewis v. Petroleum County, 92 M 563, 17 P2d 60 (1932); Franzke v. Fergus County, 76 M 150, 245 P 962 (1926); Edwards v. Lewis & Clark County, 53 M 359, 165 P 297 (1917); Hersey v. Neilson, 47 M 132, 131 P 30 (1913); Yellowstone County v. First Trust & Savings Bank, 46 M 439, 128 P 596 (1912); Independent Publishing Co. v. Lewis & Clark County, 30 M 83, 75 P 860 (1904); State ex rel. Lambert v. Coad, 23 M 131, 57 P 1092 (1899).

Ultra Vires Contracts:

Where a party assumes to deal with a county on the supposition that it possesses powers which it does not in fact possess, he may not recover even though he has performed his part of the contract. Lewis v. Petroleum County, 92 M 563, 17 P2d 60 (1932).

A party assuming to deal with a county on the supposition that it possesses powers which it does not cannot maintain an action against it upon its unauthorized action. Sullivan v. Big Horn County, 66 M 45, 212 P 1105 (1923).

Limit of Powers:

Counties are subdivisions of the state of purely statutory creation, and when they assume to exercise a power, authority therefor must be found in the statute conferring it upon them or necessarily implied from the power expressly conferred. Wherever a power is conferred upon the Board of County Commissioners but the mode in which the authority is to be exercised is not indicated, it may in its discretion select any appropriate mode or course of procedure. State ex rel. Blair v. Kuhr, 86 M 377, 283 P 758 (1930).

Counties and school districts are subdivisions of the state government with fixed powers and duties, and any act taken by the Commissioners of the former or the trustees of the latter must be justified by the provisions of the statutes defining and limiting their powers. State ex rel. School District v. McGraw, 74 M 152, 240 P 812 (1925).

"Prerogative" or its synonym "sovereignty" means the inherent power of the people; it must involve the general interest of the state at large, and though the prerogative of the state may be invoked for the protection of the rights of a county, the county, in the absence of express authority granting it, does not itself possess the power of the sovereign. Bignell v. Cummins, 69 M 294, 222 P 797 (1923).

Construction of Existence of Powers — Prior to 1972 Montana Constitution: Aside from the powers granted to counties by statute and those necessarily implied from the powers expressed, they have none, and where there is a fair and reasonable doubt as to the existence of a particular power, it must be resolved against them and the power denied. Sullivan v. Big Horn County, 66 M 45, 212 P 1105 (1923).

Unlawful Detainer — Penal Liability — Ejectment: A municipal corporation, such as a county, being no more than a political subdivision of the state for governmental purposes, cannot be subject to a penal liability, and therefore an action for treble (or penal) damages for unlawful detainer does not lie. While an action for unlawful detainer in which treble damages are sought does not lie against a county, one in ejectment may be maintained against it. Sullivan v. Big Horn County, 66 M 45, 212 P 1105 (1923).

Distinguished From Municipal Corporation:

A county is a body corporate but does not possess the powers of local legislation and control that are the distinguishing characteristics of a municipal corporation. Hersey v. Neilson, 47 M 132, 131 P 30 (1913).

While in a strict sense a county is not a municipal corporation, yet in the sense that it is a body corporate with such powers only as are expressly conferred by the code and special statutes and such as are necessarily implied from those expressed, it comes within the rules and principles applicable to such corporations. Morse v. Granite County, 44 M 78, 119 P 286 (1911); State ex rel. Lambert v. Coad, 23 M 131, 57 P 1092 (1899).

Case Notes

Action in Name of County: A county by its corporate name is the proper party to bring "all actions and proceedings touching its corporate rights, property and duties"; hence, a mandamus proceeding to compel a Board of County Commissioners to reapportion an indebtedness between an old county and a new one should be brought in the name of the county; the Board itself is not authorized to bring such a proceeding in its own name. Case Notes

One Governmental Subdivision Not Subject to Suit by Another: School districts sued the county for recovery of lost revenue and investment income on decreased reserve funds. The Supreme Court found that dismissal of the suit was proper because absent specific statutory or constitutional authority, one governmental subdivision may not sue another for damages. School District No. 55 v. Musselshell County, 245 M 525, 802 P2d 1252, 47 St. Rep. 2249 (1990).

County May Bring Action for Acquisition by Prescription: The defendant argued that the county did not have legal standing to bring an action on behalf of the public to acquire a road by prescription. The Supreme Court held that the general powers granted to counties must be liberally construed, and in so doing, it was clear that the county could maintain the action. Granite County v. Komberec, 245 M 252, 800 P2d 166, 47 St. Rep. 2061 (1990).

Tax Sales:

In the sale of land acquired by tax deed, county had the power to reserve the right to take road building material from the land for authorized public purpose. Helena Gun Club v. Lewis & Clark County, 141 M 490, 379 P2d 436 (1963).

Board of County Commissioners has the power and the authority to dispose of and convey real estate acquired through tax deeds. Flom v. Unknown Heirs of Conrad, 132 M 574, 319 P2d 499 (1957).

Tort Liability of County — Prior to 1972 Montana Constitution: The court is not precluded from holding a county liable for the torts of its employees on the theory that a "sovereign" cannot be sued without its consent, since this section provides that counties may "sue and be sued". Johnson v. Billings, 101 M 462, 54 P2d 579 (1936), distinguished in Goldwater v. St. Highway Comm'n, 118 M 65, 162 P2d 772 (1945), explained in Rhoades v. School District, 115 M 352, 142 P2d 890 (1943).

Sale of County Property: A county is merely a subdivision of the state for governmental purposes and as such is subject to legislative regulation and control. The Legislature may, within the limitations prescribed by the constitution, circumscribe or extend the powers to be exercised by a county, legislative authority to regulate or control the disposition of county property not having been limited by the 1889 Montana Constitution. The Legislature could properly declare, as it did by this section and section 4465, Revised Codes of 1921, that such property may be sold only under the restrictions and in the manner therein indicated. Franzke v. Fergus County, 76 M 150, 245 P 962 (1926).

Action Against County for Penal Liability Prohibited: A municipal corporation, such as a county, being no more than a political subdivision of the state for governmental purposes, cannot be subjected to a penal liability, and therefore an action for treble (or penal) damages for unlawful detainer does not lie. Sullivan v. Big Horn County, 66 M 45, 212 P 1105 (1923).

Ejectment Against County: While an action for unlawful detainer in which treble damages are sought does not lie against a county, one in ejectment may be maintained against it. Sullivan v. Big Horn County, 66 M 45, 212 P 1105 (1923).

Unauthorized Action: A party assuming to deal with a county on the supposition that it possesses powers which it does not cannot maintain an action against it upon its unauthorized action. Sullivan v. Big Horn County, 66 M 45, 212 P 1105 (1923).

Attorney General's Opinions

Cross-County Annexation Lawful — County Approval Not Required: Montana law does not expressly or impliedly limit annexation by county boundaries. In liberally construing the powers of incorporated cities and towns and counties, the Attorney General held that cross-county annexation is permitted by Montana law and is not dependent upon county approval. (See 7-2-4208.) 51 A.G. Op. 18 (2006).

County Powers Not Inclusive of Legislative Powers — Closing of County Incinerator Considered Administrative Act Not Subject to Initiative and Referendum: Absent a charter granting self-government powers, a county that exercises only general powers is limited to whatever powers that the Legislature expressly or impliedly grants. However, the incinerator closing was an administrative rather than legislative act and thus was not subject to initiative and referendum. 50 A.G. Op. 8 (2004).

Authority of County to Issue General Obligation Bonds for Demolition of Abandoned County Building: Under its general duty to care for and maintain its property, a county, through its Board of County Commissioners, may issue general obligation bonds to fund demolition of a county-owned building that has been abandoned and poses a threat to the public safety and welfare. 44 A.G. Op. 31 (1992).

Exception to County Travel Policy — Certain County Officers Entitled to Actual Travel Expenses: In attending the annual state convention for the office held, a County Attorney, Sheriff, Assessor, or Justice of the Peace is entitled to reimbursement for actual travel expenses. These expenses may exceed the levels established in a county travel policy. 42 A.G. Op. 124 (1988).

County Power to Grant Franchises — Interlocal Agreements Not Precluded: Article XI, sec. 4, Mont. Const.; 7-3-144; 7-4-2611; and 7-5-2129, as well as applicable case law, imply that a county vested with general government powers may exercise the power to grant franchises. Under 7-11-104, a city-county interlocal franchise agreement is possible. 42 A.G. Op. 87 (1988).

Parameters of County Commission Authority to Permit County Road Use for Pipelines: A Board of County Commissioners is charged with a significant amount of discretion under this section, 7-14-2102, and 7-14-2107 in determining whether to permit the use of a county road right-of-way for the laying of permanent or temporary pipelines. This discretion is potentially limited by state regulations under Title 69, ch. 13, concerning pipeline carriers, depending on specific factual situations. To be consistent with the holding in Bolinger v. Bozeman, 158 M 507, 493 P2d 1062 (1972), the Board must find that the action: (1) is necessary for the best interest of the county roads and the road districts; (2) does not unreasonably impair the special easements of abutting owners in the street for purposes of access, light, and air; and (3) is conducive to the public welfare and serves one of the purposes for which highways and streets are dedicated. 42 A.G. Op. 40 (1987).

Authority of County Commissioners to Adopt Meal and Lodging Expense Regulations: Section 2-18-501 does not, by its own terms, govern meal and lodging expense payments to county officers or employees. Except as may otherwise be specified statutorily, a Board of County Commissioners with general governmental powers may adopt rules and regulations providing for payment or reimbursement of reasonable meal and lodging expenses incurred by county officers or employees in the performance of official duties. 40 A.G. Op. 77 (1984).

County Buildings — Use of Rent for Costs: If no sale of the building is being attempted, a Board of County Commissioners may use money obtained from tenants of a county building to defray the operational and maintenance costs of the building. 40 A.G. Op. 33 (1984).

7-1-2104. Exercise of county power.

Actions by County: The powers of a county are exercised by the Commissioners, but they are not therefore authorized to bring actions in their official capacity on behalf of the county in the absence of a provision conferring upon them the right to do so. Part Case Notes

Equitable Estoppel as Applied to Municipal Corporations: Bullock received a building permit issued by the town of Boulder. A year later the building inspector discovered that the building being constructed encroached upon a city street. At a City Council meeting Bullock was told that he would never be required to tear down his house but that he should cease construction until he submitted a survey to the Council. Construction ceased and a survey was completed. When Bullock submitted the survey to the Council, they indicated that arrangements would be made to allow Bullock to occupy that portion of the street on which the encroachment existed. Relying on this representation, Bullock resumed construction. At a later Council meeting, the Council decided to require Bullock to remove his building from the street. Bullock received no notice of this meeting. A suit was brought, and the court found that the town of Boulder is equitably estopped from requiring the removal of the encroachment. Equitable estoppel is applied to municipal corporations with great caution and only in exceptional cases. The court set out six elements that are necessary to make out a case for the application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel. All six elements were present in this case. Boulder v. Bullock, 193 M 463, 632 P2d 716, 38 St. Rep. 1344 (1981), distinguished in Baertsch v. Lewis & Clark County, 256 M 114, 845 P2d 106, 49 St. Rep. 1162 (1992).

7-1-4101. Nature of municipalities.

Case Notes

Power Conferred by Grant or Implication: A city has no powers except such as are conferred upon it by legislative grant either directly or by necessary implication. Stephens v. Great Falls, 119 M 368, 175 P2d 408 (1946); Sharkey v. Butte, 52 M 16, 155 P 266 (1916); Palmer v. Helena, 40 M 498, 107 P 512 (1910); Helena v. Kent, 32 M 279, 80 P 259 (1905); Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 M 502, 13 P 249 (1887).

Doubt as to Power — Prior to 1972 Montana Constitution: A city has only such authority as is conferred upon it by express legislative declaration or necessary implication, and where there is a fair and reasonable doubt as to the existence of a particular power, it must be resolved against the municipality and the power denied. State ex rel. Billings v. Billings Gas Co., 55 M 102, 173 P 799 (1918); Sharkey v. Butte, 52 M 16, 155 P 266 (1916); Shapard v. Missoula, 49 M 269, 141 P 544 (1914); Helena Light & Ry. v. Helena, 47 M 18, 130 P 446 (1913); State ex rel. Quintin v. Edwards, 40 M 287, 106 P 695 (1910); Helena v. Kent, 32 M 279, 80 P 258 (1905); Davenport v. Kleinschmidt, 6 M 502, 13 P 249 (1887).

Mode of Exercising Power: When the mode of exercising any power is pointed out in the statute granting it to a municipal corporation, the mode thus prescribed must be pursued in all substantial particulars. Shapard v. Missoula, 49 M 269, 141 P 544 (1914); Carlson v. Helena, 39 M 82, 102 P 39 (1909); McGillie v. Corby, 37 M 249, 95 P 1063 (1908).

Street Improvements — Negligence: It is the duty of a city organized under the laws of this state to establish and improve streets, and damages can be recovered by one who is injured by its negligence in permitting its streets to become and remain in a dangerous condition. Ford v. Great Falls, 46 M 292, 127 P 1004 (1912); May v. Anaconda, 26 M 140, 66 P 759 (1901); Snook v. Anaconda, 26 M 128, 66 P 756 (1901); Sullivan v. Helena, 10 M 134, 25 P 94 (1890).

Construction of Section:

The entire municipal code is to be treated as one statute whose provisions are interdependent. Brown v. Foster, 48 M 114, 135 P 993 (1913).

No consistency whatever has been observed in the legislative use of the term "town". State ex rel. Powers v. Dale, 47 M 227, 131 P 670 (1913).

This section, taken in connection with 7-1-4103 (since repealed) and 7-5-4101, constitutes a general grant of power, as well as a limitation of power, for authority is given to the city to pass all ordinances necessary for its government and management, and such ordinances shall not contravene constitutional or statutory provisions. Helena v. Kent, 32 M 279, 80 P 259 (1905).

Judicial Notice: In an action against a city to recover damage for injuries to real property, an averment in the complaint that the city "is a municipal corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the state" was sufficient as against the objection that the pleading did not state a cause of action. Judicial notice will be taken of the fact that during a certain year a city was a municipal corporation existing under the laws of this state. Drew v. Butte, 44 M 124, 119 P 279 (1911).

1981 Amendment: In definition of population substituted "department of administration" for "department of community affairs".

Transfer of Function: Section 7, Ch. 274, L. 1981, provided in part: "(1) The functions of the department of community affairs of auditing the accounts and financial transactions of political subdivisions and generally assisting political subdivisions in . . . 7-1-4121 . . . are transferred to the department of administration." Since transferred to the Department of Commerce by sec. 1, Ch. 114, L. 1983.

Case Notes

Suspension of Firefighters — All Cities Required to Present Charges to City Council for Hearing — Suspension Procedure Not Part of "Structure" of City Government Under Applicable Definitions — Statute Not Superseded by Charter: Elsenpeter, a Billings firefighter, was suspended from duty

by the Billings fire chief. The firefighters' union filed a lawsuit in which the union contended that the suspension procedure used by the city was unlawful because the charges against Elsenpeter were not presented to the Billings City Council for hearing pursuant to 7-33-4124. The city contended that the suspension procedure that it used is part of the structure and organization of the city under its charter and that, pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5, Mont. Const., and 7-3-701(2), which allow the structure of a chartered city government to supersede statutory requirements, the city may override the statutory requirements for hearing contained in 7-33-4124 because the definition of "structure" contained in subsection (24) of this section is the definition that should apply. The Supreme Court held that in as much as the definitions in this section are, by the terms of this section, limited in their application to 7-1-4122 through 7-1-4149 and this section, the dictionary definition of "structure" is the definition that applies. Because the dictionary definition of structure was narrower, the Supreme Court held that the disciplinary suspension procedure used by the city was not part of the "structure" of city government. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that the statutory procedure contained in 7-33-4124, requiring presentment of the charges to the City Council, was not superseded by the city charter and had to be followed for the purposes of the suspension of Elsenpeter. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005), granting partial summary judgment.

Case Notes

Applicability to Attorney of Ordinance Requiring Safety Inspection Certificate: A city ordinance requiring a business to obtain an annual safety inspection certificate to ensure that the place of business is safe for the public did not carry a penalty that would prohibit an attorney from practicing law. The penalty for a violation is a fine or jail time. In addition, the Supreme Court's exclusive authority to regulate the practice of law does not prohibit certain limited legislative actions in the area. The amount of the certificate fee, which is determined by the square footage of the business, is reasonable in relation to the safety inspection services. The certificate requirement is a minimal and inoffensive intrusion on the Supreme Court's constitutional authority to regulate attorneys, and the defendant attorney could be convicted for nonpayment. St. v. Radford, 2001 MT 36, 304 M 198, 19 P3d 809 (2001).

Arbitrary Denial of Building Permit by City Council — City, City Council, and Individual Council Members Liable: In an action under 43 U.S.C. 1983, the court of appeals upheld the District Court's holding that the Billings City Council's refusal to issue a building permit after the applicant had satisfied all the requirements for issuing the permit was an arbitrary and capricious action that deprived the applicant of his substantive due process rights. The city, City Council, and individual members of the City Council have no immunity from such action and are all liable for damages. Bateson v. Geisse, 857 F2d 1300 (9th Cir. 1988).

Licensing Fee for Adult Movie Video Booths as Regulatory Measure — Free Speech Not Violated: The Supreme Court affirmed a city ordinance imposing a $300 annual fee for adult movie video booths, finding the city met its burden of proving the fee was both reasonable and designed as a regulatory measure to provide funds for administrative costs, policing of the booths, and health enforcement costs and expenses. The court held that estimates of future expenses may be included for purposes of setting a fee and that, being regulatory in nature, the fee did not violate the right to free speech guaranteed by the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Art. II, sec. 7, Mont. Const. Great Falls v. M.K. Enterprises, Inc., 225 M 292, 732 P2d 413, 44 St. Rep. 242 (1987).

Attorney General's Opinions

Regulation of Live Dance Performance in Licensed Liquor Establishment — Abridgment of Free Expression: The validity of a city ordinance regulating live dance performances in establishments licensed to serve liquor must be measured against free expression standards imposed by Art. II, sec. 7, Mont. Const., and the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Therefore, a proposed city ordinance prohibiting any live performance involving dance or the removal of clothing in licensed liquor establishments is an unconstitutional abridgment of the constitutional standards because: (1) it fails to distinguish carefully between protected and unprotected conduct; and (2) the requisite governmental interest in regulating such conduct has not been sufficiently established. 41 A.G. Op. 75 (1986).

State Authority to Regulate Liquor — No Delegation to Municipalities: The authority granted to the state by the 21st amendment to the U.S. Constitution to regulate the sale of liquor has not been delegated to municipalities with general powers. Therefore, a municipality with general powers may not punish a violation of its obscenity ordinance by suspending or revoking the liquor license of the offender. 41 A.G. Op. 75 (1986).

Case Notes

Power of General Powers Town to Arbitrate Contract Held Included in Power to Contract: Holm-Sutherland contracted with the town of Shelby to construct sewer and water improvements within the town. The contract included a provision requiring that all disputes involving the interpretation of the contract documents or breach of the contract were to be settled by arbitration. When a dispute arose, Holm-Sutherland sought arbitration. Litigation ensued, and the town argued that as a noncharter government, it had only those powers granted by the Legislature and that a municipality's council had a duty pursuant to 7-6-4301 and 7-6-4302 to determine the validity of claims and that duty could not be delegated to an arbitrator. The Supreme Court agreed with the District Court that a general powers municipality has broad powers to enter into contracts pursuant to subsections (4) and (23) of this section, that Title 27, ch. 5, evidences a general state policy favoring arbitration, and that the powers granted a municipality establish its ability to be bound to the terms of a contract that contains a binding arbitration clause. Holm-Sutherland Co., Inc. v. Shelby, 1999 MT 150, 295 M 65, 982 P2d 1053, 56 St. Rep. 595 (1999).

Tax Sales: County acquiring tax deeds to lots advertised them for sale but received no offer. Purchase of lots by city being authorized by City Council because of housing and sanitary conditions, it had the right to sell them at varying prices, much higher than purchase price paid to county. Flom v. Unknown Heirs of Conrad, 132 M 574, 319 P2d 499 (1957).

Creditor's Residence as Place of Trial — Not Applicable to Municipal Corporations: The rule that where a contract for payment of money is entered into between persons residing at different places and place of payment is not agreed upon, creditor's residence becomes place of performance and therefore place of trial does not apply to municipal corporations. Lillis v. Big Timber, 103 M 206, 62 P2d 219 (1936).

Mandamus to Compel Payment of Bill: Mandamus will lie to compel a city to audit and pay a bill which it owes to a water company for the rent of hydrants, although 7-1-4103 (the predecessor to this section, since repealed) provides that cities may sue or be sued. State ex rel. Kaiser Water Co. v. Philipsburg, 23 M 16, 57 P 405 (1899); State ex rel. Great Falls Water Works v. Great Falls, 19 M 518, 49 P 15 (1897).

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Grant of Public Funds to Authority Created by Interlocal Agreement Between Self-Governing Municipalities Lawful — Debt Obligations: A self-governing municipality may grant funds for the public purpose of operating the electric and natural gas utility. Debt incurred through corporate bonds issued by a public benefit nonprofit corporation incorporated by an authority created by interlocal agreement between self-governing municipalities is not subject to laws governing municipal debts or obligations if the municipalities are not legally obligated to appropriate money to pay the debt and the debt is without recourse to the spending power of the municipalities. 51 A.G. Op. 5 (2005). See also 48 A.G. Op. 12 (2000), and 49 A.G. Op. 3 (2001).

Long-Term Lease With Contractual Nonappropriation Clause Not Considered Accumulation of Municipal Debt — Vote Not Required: A question arose regarding the applicability of laws regulating municipal government debt based on a proposal by the city of Great Falls to enter a contract for the development and operation of a water park. Under the arrangement, the city would enter a long-term lease to a private party of real property adjacent to the municipal swimming pool and concurrently lease from that party certain personal property to be used for the water park. The personalty lease would include an option for the city to purchase the personal property at the close of the lease terms and a nonappropriation clause under which the personalty lease would terminate without penalty to the city if the city chose not to appropriate funds for the lease payment in any fiscal year, in which case possession of the personal property would revert to the lessor, who would retain possession under a separate realty lease until that lease expired. The Attorney General concluded that such an arrangement did not create a debt and thus would not violate provisions of state law limiting the accumulation of debt by municipal governments. Further, the city's proposal would not pledge the taxing power of the city to make the full term of lease payments and therefore would not qualify as an obligation for which the general credit of the city is pledged that would require a vote of the people under 7-7-4221. 49 A.G. Op. 3 (2001), distinguishing 38 A.G. Op. 56 (1979). 38 A.G. Op. 56 was overruled in 52 A.G. Op. 3 (2007).

County Authorized to Appropriate Money for Museum — City Authorized to Appropriate Money for Public Purpose — Constitutionality Analyzed: Pursuant to 7-16-2202 (now repealed), a county, but not a city, is authorized to create a program to provide grants to private, nonprofit museums. However, pursuant to this section, a city is allowed to grant money to public or private entities as long as the grant is for a public purpose, such as a museum that would enhance the education and enjoyment of the general public, but that would not be merely for the gain of a private entity. The Attorney General declined to opine regarding the constitutionality of 7-16-2202 (now repealed) or this section, in light of the prohibition in Art. V, sec. 11(5), Mont. Const., against the appropriation of public funds for any private individual, private association, or private corporation not under control of the state, but did analyze that constitutional provision as it related to the question of county or city expenditures for grants to private museum programs, concluding that the constitutional prohibition applies only to the appropriation of public funds by the Legislature, not by local governmental entities. 48 A.G. Op. 12 (2000), overruling prior opinions to the contrary in 37 A.G. Op. 25 (1977), 37 A.G. Op. 105 (1978), and 39 A.G. Op. 25 (1981).

Motor Vehicle Parking Offenses — Civil Penalty: A city with general government powers may not establish a civil penalty and collection system for motor vehicle parking offenses. (See 1999 amendment.) 40 A.G. Op. 31 (1984).

Sections Not Codified: Section 16-519, R.C.M. 1947, providing that failure to properly follow Ch. 226, L. 1911, was a misdemeanor, was not codified in the MCA because it was redundant with 45-7-401. That section has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 15, Ch. 226, L. 1919. See 1-2-208, stating that amendment to a codified provision is given effect over an uncodified provision.

Political Subdivisions of State: Since enactment of statutes providing for the creation of new counties, the involuntary character of counties in this state is somewhat modified, but the change does not affect their status as political subdivisions of the state for governmental purposes; only incorporated cities and towns are municipal corporations in this state. The Code Commissioner redesignated (2)(d) (formerly (2)(c)) as 7-2-2206(4) for more logical placement.

Section 6(1), Ch. 742, L. 1985, concerning means of determining number of signatures needed on petition, was enacted as part of a separate section but is codified as (3) of this section for logic and convenience.

Withdrawal From Petition:

The right of one who had signed a petition for the creation of a new county and then signed a withdrawal of his name therefrom to thereafter and before the hearing, withdraw from the withdrawal is not absolute, and therefore, no clear legal duty being imposed upon the Board of County Commissioners to give effect to the withdrawal from the withdrawal, mandamus does not lie to compel it to do so. State ex rel. Faragher v. Moulton, 68 M 219, 216 P 804 (1923), explained in Ford v. Mitchell, 103 M 99, 61 P2d 815 (1936).

The matter of the creation of a new county must be determined on the case as made upon the date fixed for the hearing, save as it may be affected by subsequent withdrawals before final action taken; therefore, protests against its creation or petitions for the exclusion of territory from within its proposed boundaries filed after the date fixed for the hearings may not be entertained by the Board of County Commissioners. State ex rel. Lang v. Furnish, 48 M 28, 134 P 297 (1913).

In the absence of legislative expression to the contrary, signers of a petition may withdraw their names at any time before final action thereon. The Board of County Commissioners was in error in refusing to consider withdrawals from petitions theretofore filed asking the exclusion of certain territory from a proposed new county upon the ground that the withdrawals of signatures, though filed before final action, had not been presented until after the date fixed for the hearing. State ex rel. Lang v. Furnish, 48 M 28, 134 P 297 (1913), explained in Ford v. Mitchell, 103 M 99, 61 P2d 815 (1936).

(a) they have read said petition and examined the signatures affixed thereto and they believe that the statements therein are true"; in (1)(c) substituted "the proposed new county or of the portion thereof taken from an existing county" for "such county therein sought to be divided"; and deleted former (2) that read: "Such petition or petitions, so verified, and the verification thereof shall be accepted in all proceedings permitted or provided for in this part as prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters and facts therein set forth."

Section 8, Ch. 742, L. 1985, requiring the Clerk of the County to verify that all petition signers are registered electors of the proposed territory to be taken from the county and to randomly compare signatures, was enacted as a separate section but is codified as (2) of this section for logic and convenience.

Case Notes

Verified Petition Prima Facie Evidence: Applying the provisions of this section by analogy to proceedings for the consolidation of school districts, the court held that a verified petition for such consolidation was prima facie evidence that it contained a majority of the resident freeholders of a district affected at the time it was filed. Swaim v. Redeen, 101 M 521, 55 P2d 1 (1936).

The notice must be published in substantially the following form" for "The county clerk shall also, at the same time, designate a newspaper of general circulation published in the old counties but not within the proposed new county and also a newspaper of general circulation published within the boundaries of the proposed new county, if there be such, in which the county clerk shall order and cause to be published, at least once a week for 2 weeks preceding the date fixed for such hearing, a notice in substantially the following form"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1985 Amendment: In "Dated" line of notice form, deleted "at" after "Dated".

Notice as Jurisdictional Requirement:

The Board of County Commissioners is without jurisdiction to proceed with a hearing of a petition for the creation of a new county unless publication of the notice as required by this section has been made; if not so made and the Board proceeds with the hearing, its action is void. Garry v. Martin, 70 M 587, 227 P 573 (1924), distinguished in Scilley v. Red Lodge-Rosebud Irrigation District, 83 M 282, 272 P 543 (1928).

Publication of notice of hearing on petitions for the creation of a new county required by this act, in certain newspapers for at least once a week for 2 weeks next preceding the date fixed for it, is jurisdictional, and failure of publication in one of the papers designated in the week immediately preceding the date of the hearing was fatal to jurisdiction and rendered all subsequent proceedings, including the election, invalid. (See 2001 amendment.) State ex rel. Stevens v. McLeish, 59 M 527, 198 P 357 (1921).

Period of Notice:

Under the rule that where a notice is required to be published at least once a week for a period next preceding a certain date, the word "for" means "throughout" or "during the continuance of" the period prescribed; the provision of this section, requiring publication of notice of hearing of a petition for the creation of a new county "at least once a week for two weeks next preceding the date fixed for such hearing", means that 2 full weeks' notice, 14 days, shall be given and that therefore publication made for a shorter period of time is insufficient. (See 2001 amendment.) Garry v. Martin, 70 M 587, 227 P 573 (1924), distinguished in Scilley v. Red Lodge-Rosebud Irrigation District, 83 M 282, 272 P 543 (1928).

The requirement of this act that notice of the hearing of new county petitions shall be published "at least once a week for two weeks next preceding the date fixed for such hearing" means 2 weeks immediately preceding the hearing. (See 2001 amendment.) State ex rel. Stevens v. McLeish, 59 M 527, 198 P 357 (1921).

7-2-2211. Hearing on petition — protest.

Case Notes

When Protest Must Be Filed: Petitions for the exclusion of territory and protests against the exclusion must, but protests against the creation of a new county need not, be filed at least 1 day before the date set for hearing to entitle them to consideration by the Board of County Commissioners. It is sufficient if such latter protests are filed on or before the time fixed for the hearing. State ex rel. Faragher v. Moulton, 68 M 219, 216 P 804 (1923).

7-2-2212. Exclusions and additions of territory upon petition.

One Block:

The requirement that territory sought to be excluded from a proposed new county must be in one block (the word "block" implying solidity or compactness) was not met by a petition describing an irregularly shaped tract distributed over 14 townships, the exterior boundaries of which ran back and forth in all directions of the compass, alternately including and excluding small tracts, so threaded together as to preserve its continuity, and including those against the creation of the new county and excluding those favoring it. State ex rel. Woodward v. Moulton, 57 M 414, 189 P 59 (1920), distinguished in State ex rel. Keane v. County Comm'rs, 83 M 540, 273 P 290 (1929).

The intent of the Legislature in enacting the provision that territory sought to be excluded from a proposed new county must be in one block was held to have been that a block should be mapped out irrespective of the personnel of those residing within it, the majority of the residents thereof to determine whether, as a whole and not as individuals, they go with the new or remain with the old county. State ex rel. Woodward v. Moulton, 57 M 414, 189 P 59 (1920), distinguished in State ex rel. Keane v. County Comm'rs, 83 M 540, 273 P 290 (1929).

Counterpetition for Exclusion — Verification:

A verification to a counterpetition asking for the exclusion of territory sought to be included in a proposed new county, which merely averred that each affiant believed that the counterpetition was signed by at least 50% of the qualified electors of the territory sought to be excluded, was of no probative value as to the facts alleged. State ex rel. Wood v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 49 M 165, 140 P 728 (1914).

Since the statute does not require the verification of counterpetitions and does not authorize the acceptance of them as probative, the counterpetitions, though verified, cannot be given any evidentiary value. State ex rel. Wood v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 49 M 165, 140 P 728 (1914).

A recital in the affidavit verifying a petition for the elimination of certain territory from the area included within the boundaries of a proposed new county that 50% of the qualified electors of the territory sought to be withdrawn had signed such petition was sufficient prima facie showing of that fact. State ex rel. Arthurs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 44 M 51, 118 P 804 (1911). But this is not so where the petition is unaccompanied by such affidavit, in which case it may not be taken as prima facie evidence of such facts. State ex rel. Lang v. Furnish, 48 M 28, 134 P 297 (1913).

Number in Exclusion Area — Burden: The burden of establishing the number of electors residing in territory sought to be excluded from a proposed new county is upon the petitioners seeking exclusion and not upon the proponents of the new county. State ex rel. Lang v. Furnish, 48 M 28, 134 P 297 (1913).

Exclusion Without Counterpetition for Exclusion: A valid petition describing the territory to be included within the proposed new county was the very foundation of the proceedings for the creation of a new county. While under certain circumstances the Board of County Commissioners was authorized to exclude territory, there was no authority in the Board to incorporate within the boundaries of a proposed new county territory which was not included in the petition praying for its creation or to exclude territory unless a proper petition for withdrawal thereof was presented. State ex rel. Jacobson v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 47 M 531, 134 P 291 (1913).

Counterpetition for Exclusion — Sufficiency:

The Board of County Commissioners, which is entrusted with the duty of passing upon the sufficiency of the petition required to be filed to effect the elimination of certain territory from a proposed new county, must read it in connection with the original petition for the creation of such county; and if thus, by any fair intendment, a description of the territory sought to be eliminated may be arrived at, it is the duty of the Board to give the intention of the petitioners full force and effect. State ex rel. Arthurs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 44 M 51, 118 P 804 (1911).

The petition for an elimination of certain territory from the area included within the boundaries of a proposed new county must contain a description of the territory sought to be eliminated and a prayer for the relief demanded. The other facts may be made to appear by evidence upon the hearing without being specially alleged. State ex rel. Arthurs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 44 M 51, 118 P 804 (1911).

Mandamus — Rejection of Petition: The fact that a Board of County Commissioners, in erroneously rejecting as insufficient a petition seeking the elimination of certain territory from the area of a proposed new county, acted in a quasi-judicial capacity is not any defense to the issuance of mandamus. State ex rel. Arthurs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 44 M 51, 118 P 804 (1911).

Case Notes

Proclaiming Election: In view of the provision of this section that all officers of a county out of which a new county is to be created residing in the proposed new county shall be deemed officers of the new county if within 5 days after determination on the petition for the creation of a new one they shall indicate their intention to become officers of the new county, and the Board of Commissioners shall then omit providing for the election of such officers, it would seem that the proclamation for the election of officers of the new county should be made after 5 days from the determination on the petition. State ex rel. Foot v. Rogge, 80 M 1, 257 P 1029 (1927).

7-2-2226. Term of office for initial officers of new county.

Case Notes

Term of Office: To "hold their offices until the time provided by general law for the election and qualification of such officers" does not mean the officers' terms are up for election at the next general election but when the term of the officers' election expires. Thus three County Commissioners elected concurrently with the election for the formation of a new county on staggered 2-, 4-, and 6-year terms continue in office until the expiration of their elected terms irrespective of intervening general election dates. 7-2-2241. Commission to determine and adjust indebtedness and assessments for old and new counties.

Case Notes

Mandamus — School District Boundaries — Discretion of County Commissioners: The matter of dividing a new county into school districts being lodged in the discretion of the Commissioners of the old county out of which the new one is created, a court cannot, upon finding that the discretion had been erroneously exercised, substitute its discretion and establish the boundaries so as to exclude territory which should not have been included or hold the order valid as to the portion properly included and invalid as to the other. State ex rel. School District v. Urton, 76 M 458, 248 P 369 (1926).

Laches — Dismissal of Mandamus: Where two counties, out of which a third was created, made no objection to the report of the Commissioners appointed to adjust the indebtedness between the counties, and with knowledge of mandamus proceedings instituted by the new county to have the Board's findings reviewed, did not intervene, though they were represented by their respective County Attorneys who took part in the hearing, but waited until the final decision in such proceeding and until the new county had incurred expense in the issuance of bonds to pay the indebtedness due the parent counties and then commenced proceedings to compel the Board of Adjustment to reassemble and correct its findings, they were guilty of laches warranting dismissal of the proceedings. State ex rel. Cascade County v. Poland, 66 M 286, 213 P 800 (1923).

Breach of Promise to Transfer Assets of Old to New County — No Mandamus: Where the Board of Commissioners of a county, a portion of which was thereafter included in a new county, in order to obtain favorable action by the electors of that portion on a proposed issue of road bonds, passed a resolution, amounting to a promise merely, that in the event the bonds were authorized, a certain portion of the receipts would be devoted to road improvement in their district, their breach of trust in thereafter failing to carry out their promise could not be remedied by Writ of Mandate to compel the Board of Adjusters of the indebtedness between the old and the new county to charge the old county with the amount the district should have received under the resolution, the New Counties Act (Ch. 226, L. 1919) not authorizing the adjusters to take such action. State ex rel. Judith Basin County v. Poland, 61 M 600, 203 P 352 (1921).

When Mandamus Is Proper to Compel Adjustment of Indebtedness: Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel Commissioners appointed to adjust county indebtedness between an old and a new county to reassemble and correctly apportion such indebtedness; the fact of their adjournment is immaterial. Such proceedings should be brought in the name of the county and not by the Board of County Commissioners in their official capacity. State ex rel. Furnish v. Mullendore, 53 M 109, 161 P 949 (1916).

Constitutionality: In proceedings for the organization of a new county, the Board of County Commissioners is required to act as a quasi-judicial tribunal, and this constitutes no invasion of the constitutional provisions of the 1889 Montana Constitution that lodge the judicial power of the state in its courts. State ex rel. Lang v. Furnish, 48 M 28, 134 P 297 (1913); State ex rel. Jacobson v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 47 M 531, 134 P 291 (1913); State ex rel. Arthurs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 44 M 51, 118 P 804 (1911).

7-2-2244. Role of commission.

Property of the County — Bridges:

Since a completed and used bridge belongs to the state and therefore is not "property of the county" within the meaning of Art. XVI, sec. 3, 1889 Mont. Const., prescribing the method by which, in the creation of a new county out of an old one, the proportion of the net indebtedness of the old county chargeable to the new one shall be ascertained, the Legislature was without power to authorize the Commissioners appointed to adjust the indebtedness between a new and an old county as it did by the enactment of sec. 7, Ch. 139, L. 1915, to take into consideration steel bridges constructed and in use for a period of less than 10 years, in determining the value of county property. (Section 7, Ch. 139, L. 1915, was repealed by Ch. 226, L. 1919, that enacted this section. This section, containing a subsection identical to the subsection declared unconstitutional, was in effect when this case was decided, and the court declared a repealed law unconstitutional.) State ex rel. Missoula County v. Brown, 73 M 371, 236 P 548 (1925).

A partly finished bridge constructed with funds obtained by a bond issue is not such county property as it may sell and therefore cannot be taken into consideration as county property in the adjustment of indebtedness between an old and a new county. State ex rel. Judith Basin County v. Poland, 61 M 600, 203 P 352 (1921).

Generally speaking, bridges are not such county property as that their value shall enter into consideration in the adjustment of the indebtedness of the old county with the new one. A bridge is to be treated as but a portion of a public highway. State ex rel. Foster v. Ritch, 49 M 155, 140 P 731 (1914).

Property of the County: "Property of the county", within the meaning of Art. XVI, sec. 3, 1889 Mont. Const., under which, when a new county is created, the net indebtedness of the old county, its ratable proportion of which the new county must pay, is to be determined by deducting from its total indebtedness the value of all property of the old county, means such property as a county holds and can sell. State ex rel. Judith Basin County v. Poland, 61 M 600, 203 P 352 (1921).

7-2-2251. Collection of delinquent taxes.

Case Notes

Delinquent Taxes: Taxes that are delinquent upon creation of the new county or were delinquent and remain unpaid for previous years are collectible by and belong to the new county. Delinquent taxes paid on property incorporated in a new county, in the interim between the passing of the resolution by the Board of Commissioners of the parent county and the expiration of the 90-day period after its filing with the Secretary of State, belong to the parent and not to the new county. Hill County v. Liberty County, 62 M 15, 203 P 500 (1921).

Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Part 26
Removal of County Seat

7-2-2601. Petition to remove county seat.

Case Notes

Selection of County Seat — Decision of Electorate: Conceding that the selection or removal of a county seat is a purely political function, that function has not been confided to judges of election or to the canvassers of the returns but to a certain proportion of the qualified electors of the county affected. It rests with the courts to ascertain and decide whether the choice actually made by the requisite proportion of the qualified electors has been duly declared and, if not, to declare it and make it effective. Poe v. Sheridan County, 52 M 279, 157 P 185 (1916).

Inapplicable to Temporary County Seat: The words "changing" and "removing" found in Art. XVI, sec. 2, 1889 Mont. Const. (no comparable provision in 1972 Mont. Const.), and the statute laws refer to the act of changing or removing a county seat that has been definitely located and have no reference to a so-called temporary or provisional county seat. State ex rel. Geiger v. Long, 43 M 401, 117 P 104 (1911).

7-2-2602. Filing of petition — notice and hearing.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 354 in (2) substituted "shall publish a notice as provided in 7-1-2121. The notice must state that the petition is open to inspection in the office of the county clerk" for "must cause to be printed in every newspaper published within said county a notice to the effect that a petition praying for the removal of said county seat has been filed with the county clerk, that said petition is open to the inspection of any and all persons interested therein, and that said petition will be presented to the board of county commissioners at its next regular session for action thereon"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

7-2-2604. Consideration of petition — submission to voters — withdrawal of signatures.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) substituted current text related to signature verification for former (1) that read: "(1) For the purpose of testing the sufficiency of any petition which may be presented to the county commissioners as provided in this section, the county commissioners shall compare such petition with the pollbooks in the county clerk's office constituting the returns of the last general election held in their county for the purpose of ascertaining whether such petition bears the names of at least 50% of the voters listed therein"; in (2) in inserted "county election administrator determines that the", substituted "county's electors who voted in the last general election" for "qualified electors of such county", after "commissioners must" deleted "at the next general election", after "removal" inserted "of the county seat", and inserted last sentence referencing Title 13, chapter 1, part 4; in (3) after "petition" deleted "then shows that it", substituted "county's electors who voted in the last general election" for "voters of the county, after deducting from the original petition the names of all persons who may have signed such original petition and who may have filed or caused to be filed with the county clerk of said county or the board, on or before the date fixed for the hearing, their statement in writing of the withdrawal of their names from the original petition, it shall be deemed insufficient and", and at end inserted "to electors"; inserted (4) regarding a request to not count a person's signature on the petition; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

Case Notes

Sufficiency of Petition — Statutory Requirements:

Under this section, prior to amendment in 1973, the Board of County Commissioners is limited in its investigation of the sufficiency of a petition for the removal of the county seat to a comparison of the names appearing thereon with the pollbooks to ascertain whether the signers are voters and with the assessment roll to ascertain whether they are taxpayers. The Board may not, therefore, eliminate from the petition names of persons who have ceased to be legal voters or taxpayers. Ainsworth v. McKay, 55 M 270, 175 P 887 (1918).

Prior to amendment of this section in 1973, a petition for the removal of a county seat is sufficient if it is signed by the required number of ad valorem taxpayers of the county, provided all the persons necessary to make up such number are qualified voters. State ex rel. Stringfellow v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 42 M 62, 111 P 144 (1910).

Official Duty Presumed Performed: The official duty devolving upon the Commissioners is presumed to have been regularly performed; thus, it is presumed that the Board compared the names signed to the petition with the pollbooks of the "last election". State ex rel. Stringfellow v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 42 M 62, 111 P 144 (1910).

Sufficiency of Petition — Judicial Function of County Commissioners: A Board of County Commissioners exercises judicial functions when it decides whether a petition for the submission of the removal of the county seat to the electors of the county is signed by sufficient number to require such submission. State ex rel. Buck v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 21 M 469, 54 P 939 (1898).

Organization and Incorporation of New Municipalities

Part Case Notes

Presumption of Regularity of Incorporation Proceedings: In a proceeding to enjoin a town from collecting municipal taxes on a 40-acre tract of land originally owned by an Indian ward on the ground that when the town was incorporated the consent of the federal government had not been given to include it in the city limits, the court held, under the rule that every presumption will be indulged in favor of the regularity of the proceedings if the corporate charter shows compliance with the applicable statutes, particularly in view of 26-1-602(15), that official duty is presumed regularly performed, judgment of dismissal affirmed. Case Notes

Approval by Mayor and Council: The approval of the Mayor and a majority of the Council endorsed on the map or plat of an addition to a city or town is essential to bring the territory included therein within the jurisdiction of the Council. Pool v. Townsend, 58 M 297, 191 P 385 (1920).

Attorney General's Opinions

Growth Policy Required Prior to Annexation of New Territory but Not for Continued Subdivision Review: Under 7-2-4734, a growth policy covering an area proposed for municipal annexation is required before a municipality may extend corporate limits under Title 7, ch. 2, part 47, but the requirement does not apply to annexations conducted under 7-2-4301, 7-2-4401, 7-2-4501, 7-2-4601, or this section. A growth policy is also required before certain subdivision review procedures and city powers of annexation are authorized. However, a growth policy is not required to continue subdivision review unless the city or county wishes to qualify for streamlined review processes. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

7-2-4202. Control of additions.

Attorney General's Opinions

Cross-County Annexation Lawful — County Approval Not Required: Montana law does not expressly or impliedly limit annexation by county boundaries. In liberally construing the powers of incorporated cities and towns and counties, the Attorney General held that cross-county annexation is permitted by Montana law and is not dependent upon county approval. (See 7-2-4208.) 51 A.G. Op. 18 (2006).

Interim Study Committee Bill: House Bill 54 (Ch. 130, L. 1981) was introduced at the request of the Study Committee on Annexation Laws. See committee report, Legislative Council, 1980.

Case Notes

Annexation Without Detraction — Methods of Annexation Separate and Distinct: The 1979 amendments to Montana municipal annexation law created methods of annexation that are separate and independent of each other and allow a city to annex real property by statute without detraction prior to annexation. Therefore, a 1974 permanent injunction barring a city from annexing any lands outside city limits that were situated within a rural fire district was properly dissolved, and the decision set out in Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 168 M 70, 540 P2d 958 (1975), which affirmed the 1974 injunction, was statutorily overruled. Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 237 M 444, 775 P2d 209, 46 St. Rep. 936 (1989).

Each Method of Annexation as Separate Procedure: Each of the eight methods of municipal annexation is a separate and distinct procedure. Therefore, the statutory exemption for golf courses found in 7-2-4503 does not apply to annexations commenced under Title 7, ch. 2, part 47 (Planned Community Development Act). State ex rel. Hilands Golf Club v. Billings, 198 M 475, 647 P2d 345, 39 St. Rep. 1132 (1982).

Case Notes

Compliance With Statutory Annexation Provisions Required — Standard of Review: Municipal annexation statutes contain numerous and detailed requirements for a city to annex property, some of which charge city planners to make subjective value judgments and statements of opinion, especially those concerning plans for the future. Pursuant to Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248 (1980), and Nilson Enterprises, Inc. v. Great Falls, 190 M 341, 621 P2d 466 (1980), the cardinal considerations for requiring substantial compliance with the annexation laws are public notice and participation, particularly for those affected by a proposed annexation. If all of the substantive and procedural requirements are included and complied with by a municipality, the law will have been followed, and if each of the statutory mandates that contain a subjective component are considered and included in the required plans, notice and the opportunity to participate are considered proper. Thus, compliance with annexation statutes must be complete and must be substantial when a statute requires a municipality to exercise discretion in making planning decisions. If there are no disputed issues of fact, the Supreme Court will review a District Court's decision on whether there was compliance with the law de novo. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

Former Law: Prior to the enactment of this section, the exclusive manner of annexation was through statutory provisions and failure to substantially comply with such provisions defeated annexation. Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248, 37 St. Rep. 277 (1980); Balock v. Melstone, 186 M 303, 607 P2d 545, 37 St. Rep. 288 (1980).

Attorney General's Opinions

Statutory Applicability: This section applies to tracts or parcels of land on which municipal taxes have been paid without protest for 7 years, even when a portion of the 7-year period passed prior to the 1981 enactment of this section. 42 A.G. Op. 93 (1988).

Part 43
Annexation of Contiguous Land

Part Case Notes

Annexation into Municipality — No Violation of Equal Protection: The city of Lewistown annexed a contiguous area into its municipality. The District Court did not err in granting summary judgment to Lewistown on land owners' claims that they were denied equal protection of the law because annexation requires a municipal governing body to exercise its discretion, subject to statutory directives, to choose one parcel over another to annex. St. John v. Lewistown, 2017 MT 126, 387 Mont. 444, 395 P.3d 486.

Annexation of Partial Lots — Contiguous Land Connected by Road — Statutory Requirements Followed — No Review of Best Interest Determination: The city of Lewistown annexed partial lots, and all property was platted and identified in a recorded, corrected map showing acreage and distances for each partial lot, thereby fulfilling the statutory directive for filing a certificate of survey. The proposed land was contiguous because it was connected by a road, also part of the annexation. Because the city followed the statutory requirements of Title 7, chapter 2, part 43, the District Court was correct in concluding that it should not review Lewistown's determination that the annexation was in the best interest of the city and its residents. St. John v. Lewistown, 2017 MT 126, 387 Mont. 444, 395 P.3d 486, following Missoula Rural Fire Dist. v. Missoula, 286 Mont. 387, 950 P.2d 758 (1997), and Penland v. Missoula, 132 Mont. 591, 318 P.2d 1089 (1957).

Annexation Waivers Required After Annexation Proceedings Commenced — No Fraud or Duress: A municipality may require annexation waivers in exchange for utility services even if the waivers are requested after annexation proceedings are initiated. Because waivers received after the city of Lewistown advised landowners that their water service would be terminated were valid, the District Court did not err in determining that there was not a majority of valid protests against an annexation. St. John v. Lewistown, 2017 MT 126, 387 Mont. 444, 395 P.3d 486. See also Schanz v. Billings, 182 Mont. 328, 597 P.2d 67 (1979), and Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 Mont. 109, 99 P.3d 151.

Contiguous to Newly Annexed Land — Standing Based Upon Additional Taxation — Annexation Void Ab Initio: A taxpayer appealed a District Court decision upholding the annexation of land by the city of Great Falls. The appellant contended that a taxpayer who has been assessed special improvement taxes under a statute authorizing taxation of land that is "contiguous" to a city has the capacity to challenge the annexation proceeding that made its own land contiguous to the city. The Supreme Court noted that the trial court had cited its language in the Sharkey case that when such proceedings are void ab initio for want of jurisdiction of the subject matter, as here, equity will afford relief to the property owner whose taxes would be increased if his property were included within the city's limits. Having determined that the proceedings by Great Falls were indeed void at inception for want of proper jurisdiction, the court held that the taxpayer here had standing and was entitled to relief. Other affected taxpayers who, like appellant, paid the assessments under protest would also have an equitable right to relief for lack of consent. Nilson Enterprises, Inc. v. Great Falls, 190 M 341, 621 P2d 466, 37 St. Rep. 1977 (1980), following Sharkey v. Butte, 52 M 16, 155 P 266 (1916).

"Freeholder" Defined: The term "freeholder", as used in 7-2-4323 (now repealed) and 7-2-4324 (now repealed), means the purchaser and not the seller under a contract for deed. State ex rel. Stephens v. Hamilton, 161 M 1, 504 P2d 283 (1972).

Contiguous Land — Constitutionality: Annexation of contiguous land and annexation of wholly surrounded land do not violate Art. III, sec. 14, 1889 Mont. Const. (comparable to Art. V, sec. 29, 1972 Mont. Const.), or amendment five of the United States Constitution, which provides that private property may not be taken for public use without payment of just compensation, and do not violate Art. III, sec. 27, 1889 Mont. Const. (Art. II, sec. 17, 1972 Mont. Const.), or amendments 5 and 14 of the United States Constitution, which provide that private property cannot be taken without due process of law. Brodie v. Missoula, 155 M 185, 468 P2d 778 (1970), following Harrison v. Missoula, 146 M 420, 407 P2d 703 (1965).

Constitutionality — Annexation Generally: Annexation, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition, is a political matter exclusively for the Legislature to control, and unless specifically restrained by the Montana Constitution, the Legislature can authorize annexation without the consent or even against the wishes of the people living in the annexed corporation or territory. Harrison v. Missoula, 146 M 420, 407 P2d 703 (1965).

Evidence of Annexation Benefits to Landowner: In action for injunctive relief against resolution of intention of City Council to annex land, court properly excluded all evidence relating to benefits. Penland v. Missoula, 132 M 591, 318 P2d 1089 (1957).

Remedy for Illegal Inclusion: The remedy of injunction is available to one whose taxes would be increased by an illegal inclusion of his property within the limits of a city. Sharkey v. Butte, 52 M 16, 155 P 266 (1916).

7-2-4301. What constitutes contiguous lands.

Case Notes

Annexation of Partial Lots — Contiguous Land Connected by Road — Statutory Requirements Followed — No Review of Best Interest Determination: The city of Lewistown annexed partial lots, and all property was platted and identified in a recorded, corrected map showing acreage and distances for each partial lot, thereby fulfilling the statutory directive for filing a certificate of survey. The proposed land was contiguous because it was connected by a road, also part of the annexation. Because the city followed the statutory requirements of Title 7, chapter 2, part 43, the District Court was correct in concluding that it should not review Lewistown's determination that the annexation was in the best interest of the city and its residents. St. John v. Lewistown, 2017 MT 126, 387 Mont. 444, 395 P.3d 486, following Missoula Rural Fire Dist. v. Missoula, 286 Mont. 387, 950 P.2d 758 (1997), and Penland v. Missoula, 132 Mont. 591, 318 P.2d 1089 (1957).

Annexation of City Street Upheld as Basis for Subsequent Annexation of Other Land: The Missoula Rural Fire District and private property owners sued the city of Missoula to enjoin the annexation of their property by the city. The District Court held that the city could use previously annexed land consisting of all or parts of three city streets as a basis for subsequent annexation of parcels of land enclosed by those city streets because those parcels were "wholly surrounded" by city land. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the District Court, holding that a street is an annexable "tract or parcel" of land, pursuant to this section, and that when the contiguity of those streets with other city land at city intersections was considered with the public purpose of the annexations, the streets were valid annexations of contiguous land, pursuant to this section. The Supreme Court then held that since the parcels of land owned by the fire district and the private property owners were then "wholly surrounded" by properly annexed city land, the contested parcels of land were themselves properly annexed, pursuant to 7-2-4501. Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 286 M 387, 950 P2d 758, 54 St. Rep. 1459 (1997).

Strip of Land Too Small for Platting: Triangular piece of unplatted land separated area sought to be annexed into two tracts of land. Although the triangular strip was a part of a much larger tract, that fact was immaterial. The only part of the land which was significant was the strip separating the area sought to be annexed, not the larger area of which the separating strip was a part. If the triangular separating strip is too small or too narrow to be platted, then the tracts separated by it will be considered contiguous. Penland v. Missoula, 132 M 591, 318 P2d 1089 (1957).

Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 485 in three places in introduction, after "city", inserted "or town", and near beginning after "judgment", substituted "of any city or town council" for "of any city council of a city of the first class"; in (1), after "writing", substituted "all registered voters" for "addressed to the address to which tax notices are sent, all owners and purchasers under contracts for deed of property"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: In (1), after "owners" inserted "and purchasers under contracts for deed".

Case Notes

Discretion of City Council: Determination of question of whether annexation of tract of realty into city is in best interest of city and inhabitants of such area to be annexed is expressly granted to City Council by this section, and exercise of such discretion is subject to judicial review only where Council has proceeded contrary to statute or where they have acted so arbitrarily or capriciously that it may be said they exercised no discretion at all. Brodie v. Missoula, 155 M 185, 468 P2d 778 (1970); Penland v. Missoula, 132 M 591, 318 P2d 1089 (1957), distinguished in Klamm v. Miles City, 138 M 65, 353 P2d 752 (1960).

Court Review of Resolution of Intention: Exercise of discretion of City Council in passing resolution of intention to annex land may be reviewed by court only when and if they have proceeded contrary to statute. Penland v. Missoula, 132 M 591, 318 P2d 1089 (1957).

Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 Mont. 109, 99 P.3d 151.

Protest When Annexation Void — Taxpayer's Relief Not Estopped for Lack of Timely Protest: A taxpayer's failure to protest annexation or a special improvement tax at a hearing does not estop him from challenging the annexation later when the jurisdiction of the city to annex and assess is held void ab initio. When there is a substantial defect in the original proceedings that operates to deprive a city of the jurisdiction to act from the outset, estoppel does not bar a taxpayer's prayer for relief. Nilson Enterprises, Inc. v. Great Falls, 190 M 341, 621 P2d 466, 37 St. Rep. 1977 (1980), distinguishing Power v. Helena, 43 M 336, 116 P 415 (1911).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 66 in (2) substituted "real property owners of the area" for "resident freeholders of the territory"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 16, 1995.

Case Notes

Constitutionality — Resident Freeholder Provision: Classifications established by Legislature in limiting protests to annexation to resident freeholders (see 1995 and 1997 amendments) in first-class cities while permitting protest by freeholders without regard to residence in smaller cities is not only a rational distinction but also promotes a compelling governmental interest and is therefore constitutional. Burritt v. Butte, 161 M 530, 508 P2d 563 (1973).

Meaning of "Resident Freeholder":

Neither a corporation nor a partnership is a "resident freeholder" (see 1995 and 1997 amendments) within the meaning of this section since it is clear that this section requires actual residence on the property sought to be annexed in order to qualify for protest and excludes those entities which possess no actual residence as distinguished from a legal residence. Burritt v. Butte, 161 M 530, 508 P2d 563 (1973).

A freeholder becomes a resident under 1-1-215 upon union of act and intent. If the intention to establish a permanent residence is ascertained, the recency of the establishment is immaterial. A resident freeholder (see 1995 and 1997 amendments) qualified to protest annexation is a resident within the area to be annexed, holding a present legal title to a freehold estate in real property located within the area to be annexed. It is not necessary for resident freeholder to reside upon his freehold in order to protest annexation. The date through which timely protest could be received determines qualifications of resident freeholders to protest annexation. Kunesh v. Great Falls, 132 M 285, 317 P2d 297 (1957).

Disapproval by Residents:

The filing of sufficient protests by resident freeholders (see 1995 and 1997 amendments) of a first-class city deprives the City Council of authority to do anything except to sustain the protests and terminate the proceedings. State ex rel. Konen v. Butte, 144 M 95, 394 P2d 753 (1964).

Residents of an area sought to be annexed must register their disapproval by showing such disapproval in writing to the City Clerk as required by statute. They cannot do so in courts of law. Penland v. Missoula, 132 M 591, 318 P2d 1089 (1957).

Mandamus for Termination of Proceedings: Where a majority of the resident freeholders (see 1995 and 1997 amendments) of a first-class city validly protested proposed annexation but City Council, instead of terminating the annexation proceedings, took arbitrary action, mandamus was proper to compel Council to terminate the process. The Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act (Title 27, ch. 8) did not furnish the protestants a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy. State ex rel. Konen v. Butte, 144 M 95, 394 P2d 753 (1964).

Number of Protests — Burden of Proof: A first-class city has the burden of determining if a majority of the resident freeholders (see 1995 and 1997 amendments) have protested the proposed annexation. State ex rel. Konen v. Butte, 144 M 95, 394 P2d 753 (1964).

Case Notes

Compliance With Statutory Annexation Provisions Required — Standard of Review: Municipal annexation statutes contain numerous and detailed requirements for a city to annex property, some of which charge city planners to make subjective value judgments and statements of opinion, especially those concerning plans for the future. Pursuant to Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248 (1980), and Nilson Enterprises, Inc. v. Great Falls, 190 M 341, 621 P2d 466 (1980), the cardinal considerations for requiring substantial compliance with the annexation laws are public notice and participation, particularly for those affected by a proposed annexation. If all of the substantive and procedural requirements are included and complied with by a municipality, the law will have been followed, and if each of the statutory mandates that contain a subjective component are considered and included in the required plans, notice and the opportunity to participate are considered proper. Thus, compliance with annexation statutes must be complete and must be substantial when a statute requires a municipality to exercise discretion in making planning decisions. If there are no disputed issues of fact, the Supreme Court will review a District Court's decision on whether there was compliance with the law de novo. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

Former Law: Prior to the enactment of this section, the exclusive manner of annexation was through statutory provisions and failure to substantially comply with such provisions defeated annexation. Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248, 37 St. Rep. 277 (1980); Balock v. Melstone, 186 M 303, 607 P2d 545, 37 St. Rep. 288 (1980).

Annexation of Contiguous Government Land

Part Case Notes

Statutory Requirements to Be Fulfilled Fully — Consent of State: The taxpayer, assessed special improvement taxes after a city annexed land, attacked the city's failure to file a land description, certificate of ownership, or owner's statement of a desire to have the land annexed. He argued that the city failed to comply with all the mandatory requirements because it did not obtain the state's consent to annex state land and that failure voided the annexation and taxation which followed. Without the state's consent, the city was without jurisdiction to proceed with the annexation. The court held that when statutory language provided the manner in which a city or town could annex, it had to be complied with completely and strictly. Nilson Enterprises, Inc. v. Great Falls, 190 M 341, 621 P2d 466, 37 St. Rep. 1977 (1980), reaffirming Pool v. Townsend, 58 M 297, 191 P 385 (1920); Balock v. Melstone, 186 M 303, 607 P2d 545, 37 St. Rep. 288 (1980); Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248, 37 St. Rep. 277 (1980).

Constitutionality — Annexation Generally: Annexation, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition, is a political matter exclusively for the Legislature to control, and unless specifically restrained by the Montana Constitution, the Legislature can authorize annexation without the consent or even against the wishes of the people living in the annexed corporation or territory. Annexation Without Detraction — Methods of Annexation Separate and Distinct: The 1979 amendments to Montana municipal annexation law created methods of annexation that are separate and independent of each other and allow a city to annex real property by statute without detraction prior to annexation. Therefore, a 1974 permanent injunction barring a city from annexing any lands outside city limits that were situated within a rural fire district was properly dissolved, and the decision set out in Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 168 M 70, 540 P2d 958 (1975), which affirmed the 1974 injunction, was statutorily overruled. Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 237 M 444, 775 P2d 209, 46 St. Rep. 936 (1989).

Annexation of Wholly Surrounded Land

Part Case Notes

Wholly Surrounded Land Annexation — Constitutionality: Annexation of contiguous land and annexation of wholly surrounded land do not violate Art. III, sec. 14, 1889 Mont. Const. (similar to Art. II, sec. 29, 1972 Mont. Const.), or amendment five of the United States Constitution, which provides that private property may not be taken for public use without payment of just compensation, and do not violate Art. III, sec. 27, 1889 Mont. Const. (similar to Art. II, sec. 17, 1972 Mont. Const.), or amendments 5 and 14 of the United States Constitution, which provide that private property cannot be taken without due process of law. Brodie v. Missoula, 155 M 185, 468 P2d 778 (1970), following Harrison v. Missoula, 146 M 420, 407 P2d 703 (1965).

Constitutionality — Annexation Generally: Annexation, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition, is a political matter exclusively for the Legislature to control, and unless specifically restrained by the Montana Constitution, the Legislature can authorize annexation without the consent or even against the wishes of the people living in the annexed corporation or territory. Harrison v. Missoula, 146 M 420, 407 P2d 703 (1965).

Evidence of Annexation Benefits to Property Owners: In action for injunctive relief against resolution of intention of City Council to annex land, court properly excluded all evidence relating to benefits. Penland v. Missoula, 132 M 591, 318 P2d 1089 (1957).

Remedy for Illegal Inclusion: The remedy of injunction is available to one whose taxes would be increased by an illegal inclusion of his property within the limits of a city. Sharkey v. Butte, 52 M 16, 155 P 266 (1916).

Compiler's Comments

1983 Amendment: At beginning of section, after "city" deleted "of the first class".

Case Notes

Wholly Surrounded Land — Not Limited to Single Tract or Parcel: Because of the legislative history, the general rule of statutory construction that the singular includes the plural, and the absurdity that would result if a city was restricted to annexing single tracts, the District Court did not err in finding that in a single resolution a city may annex land made up of several tracts or parcels that are wholly surrounded by city territory. Houston Lakeshore Tract Owners Against Annexation Inc. v. Whitefish, 2017 MT 62, 387 Mont. 83, 391 P.3d 86.

Annexation of City Street Upheld as Basis for Subsequent Annexation of Other Land: The Missoula Rural Fire District and private property owners sued the city of Missoula to enjoin the annexation of their property by the city. The District Court held that the city could use previously annexed land consisting of all or parts of three city streets as a basis for subsequent annexation of parcels of land enclosed by those city streets because those parcels were "wholly surrounded" by city land. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the District Court, holding that a street is an annexable "tract or parcel" of land, pursuant to 7-2-4301, and that when the contiguity of those streets with other city land at city intersections was considered with the public purpose of the annexations, the streets were valid annexations of contiguous land, pursuant to 7-2-4301. The Supreme Court then held that since the parcels of land owned by the fire district and the private property owners were then "wholly surrounded" by properly annexed city land, the contested parcels of land were themselves properly annexed, pursuant to this section. Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 286 M 387, 950 P2d 758, 54 St. Rep. 1459 (1997).

No Certificate of Survey Required: Contention that 30-acre tract was improperly annexed to city due to failure of City Council to survey unplatted land and file certificate of survey prior to annexation was without merit since entire tract was surrounded by city and therefore, under this section, no certificate of survey was necessary. Brodie v. Missoula, 155 M 185, 468 P2d 778 (1970).

Wholly Surrounded Property — Congruity Unnecessary: Contention on appeal that city had improperly annexed certain platted lots due to the fact that one side of lots was contiguous with outdoor theater and thus such lots were not "wholly surrounded" by city, as required by this section, was without merit since "wholly surrounded", as used in this section, does not mean city property must also be wholly contiguous to such property; rather it means that tract is so located that it is impossible to reach it without crossing city property. Calvert v. Great Falls, 154 M 213, 462 P2d 182 (1969), followed in Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 283 M 113, 938 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 480 (1997). See also Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 286 M 387, 950 P2d 758, 54 St. Rep. 1459 (1997), and Houston Lakeshore Tract Owners Against Annexation Inc. v. Whitefish, 2017 MT 62, 387 Mont. 83, 391 P.3d 86, holding that a tract bordered by land and a navigable lake is wholly surrounded if the sides bordered by land are surrounded by the municipality.

7-2-4503. Restrictions on annexation power.

Case Notes

Annexation of Golf Club: The city of Billings began proceedings to annex a golf club. Upon petition of the golf club, the District Court issued a Writ of Mandamus and then ruled, after trial, that 7-2-4503 deprived the city of the authority to annex a golf club. The city appealed, claiming that it had been proceeding under the Planned Community Development Act and that golf courses were not exempt from annexation under that Act. The Supreme Court agreed with the city that golf courses were not exempt from annexation under the Planned Community Development Act but held that under that Act, the golf club could prevent annexation. The court further ruled that because the Planned Community Development Act provides for judicial review, issuance of a Writ of Mandamus was premature. State ex rel. Hilands Golf Club v. Billings, 198 M 475, 647 P2d 345, 39 St. Rep. 1132 (1982).

Each Method of Annexation as Separate Procedure: Each of the eight methods of municipal annexation is a separate and distinct procedure. Therefore, the statutory exemption for golf courses found in 7-2-4503 does not apply to annexations commenced under Title 7, ch. 2, part 47 (Planned Community Development Act). State ex rel. Hilands Golf Club v. Billings, 198 M 475, 647 P2d 345, 39 St. Rep. 1132 (1982).

"Industrial Purpose" Defined: "Industrial purpose" is limited to any factory, business, or concern that is engaged primarily in the manufacture or assembly of goods or processing of raw materials unserviceable in their natural state which are extracted, processed, or made fit for use or are substantially altered or treated so as to create commercial products or materials. Burritt v. Butte, 161 M 1, 508 P2d 563 (1973).

Incidental Agricultural Use of Land Annexed: Contention that 30-acre tract of land was improperly annexed to city since such land was being used for agricultural purposes and therefore exempt from annexation under this section was without merit, since evidence indicated that land was primarily held as developmental parcel for housing development and agricultural use was only incidental thereto. Brodie v. Missoula, 155 M 185, 468 P2d 778 (1970).

7-2-4504. What constitutes contiguous lands.

Case Notes

Strip of Land Too Small for Platting: A triangular piece of unplatted land separated the area sought to be annexed into two tracts of land. Although the triangular strip was a part of a much larger tract, that fact was immaterial. The only part of the land which was significant was the strip separating the area sought to be annexed, not the larger area of which the separating strip was a part. If the triangular separating strip is too small or too narrow to be platted, then the tracts separated by it will be considered contiguous. Penland v. Missoula, 132 M 591, 318 P2d 1089 (1957).

Part 46
Annexation by Petition

Part Case Notes

Standing to Sue Government in General — Annexation Proceedings in Particular: Before one has standing to sue a governmental entity, there must be a case or controversy. The plaintiff must clearly allege past, present, or threatened injury to a property or civil right, and the injury must be distinguishable from injury to the public in general, though it need not be exclusive to the plaintiff. In an annexation protest, annexation is a political matter exclusively for legislative control, absent a constitutional prohibition. The annexation must be void ab initio, and the challenger must be a property owner who would suffer a tax increase. The available remedy is an injunction, not monetary damages. A count of petition signatures for only one of many annexed areas, by a plaintiff who used his own criteria for the count, is insufficient to support a claim that the government entity inaccurately counted the signatures. Since plaintiff here had no standing to directly attack the annexation, he could not collaterally attack it by attempting to show negligence. O'Donnell Fire Serv. & Equip. Co. v. Billings, 219 M 317, 711 P2d 822, 42 St. Rep. 2051 (1985), followed in Knudsen v. Ereaux, 275 M 146, 911 P2d 835, 53 St. Rep. 83 (1996), and Lohmeier v. Case Notes

Lack of Property Ownership Within Proposed Annexation — No Standing to Challenge Annexation Resolution — Summary Judgment Proper Despite Lack of Notice to Parties of Intent to Convert Motion to Dismiss Into Motion for Summary Judgment: It is error for a court to fail to give formal notice of the intent to convert a motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment, giving the party opposing the motion an opportunity to produce additional facts by affidavit or otherwise that would create a genuine issue of material fact to preclude summary judgment. However, in this case, plaintiffs lacked standing to challenge an annexation resolution because they did not own property within the proposed annexation. Without standing to state a claim, plaintiffs could prove no set of facts in support of their action that would entitle them to relief. Therefore, failure by the court to give the parties notice of conversion of the motion to dismiss was harmless error. Knudsen v. Ereaux, 275 M 146, 911 P2d 835, 53 St. Rep. 83 (1996), following O'Donnell Fire Serv. & Equip. v. Billings, 219 M 317, 711 P2d 822 (1985).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 substituted current text requiring an election on the question of annexation to be conducted in accordance with Title 13, chapter 1, part 4, for former text that read: "(1) The question of annexation may be submitted at the next general municipal election to be held in the municipal corporation or it may be submitted prior to the general election, either at a special election called for that purpose or at any other municipal election, except an election at which the submission of such question is prohibited by law.

(2) The election shall be conducted and the returns made in the same manner as other city or town elections. All election laws governing city and town elections shall govern, insofar as they are applicable.

(3) Whenever the question of annexation under this title is submitted at either a general city or town election or at a special election, separate ballots, shall be provided therefor"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1)(a) after "If" deleted "it is found that"; in (1)(b) near beginning substituted "include a statement" for "state" and substituted "containing" for "with", in middle substituted "ordering the election" for "ordering a general or special election", and near end inserted "a statement"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 186 in (2) in first sentence near middle substituted "real property representing 50% or more of the total area" for "50% of the area". Amendment effective April 15, 2011.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 66 in (1)(b), in first sentence, substituted "resident electors owning real property in the area" for "resident freeholder electors of the territory"; in (2), in first clause of first sentence, substituted "resident electors owning real property" for "resident freeholder electors" and substituted "50% of the area" for "all of the territory"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 16, 1995.

1985 Amendment: In (2) after "resident freeholder electors", inserted "or the owners of all".

Commissioner Correction: The term "The resolution" which originally appeared in subsection (2) was changed to "A resolution adopted pursuant to 7-2-4601(3)" by the Code Commissioner, 1979, because of rearrangement of sec. 1, Ch. 641, L. 1979, during codification.

Interim Study Committee Bill: House Bill 54 (Ch. 130, L. 1981) was introduced at the request of the Study Committee on Annexation Laws. See committee report, Legislative Council, 1980.

Composite Section: This section was amended by Ch. 250, Ch. 641, and Ch. 642, L. 1979, and a composite section was prepared by the Code Commissioner, 1979. Chapter 250 was a Code Commissioner bill and was not intended to make substantive changes in the law. Consequently a conflict of language in subsection (1) between Ch. 250 and Ch. 641 has been resolved in favor of the language used in Ch. 641.

Case Notes

Annexation Without Detraction — Methods of Annexation Separate and Distinct: The 1979 amendments to Montana municipal annexation law created methods of annexation that are separate and independent of each other and allow a city to annex real property by statute without detraction prior to annexation. Therefore, a 1974 permanent injunction barring a city from annexing any lands outside city limits that were situated within a rural fire district was properly dissolved, and the decision set out in Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 168 M 70, 540 P2d 958 (1975), which affirmed the 1974 injunction, was statutorily overruled. Missoula Rural Fire District v. Missoula, 237 M 444, 775 P2d 209, 46 St. Rep. 936 (1989).

Case Notes

Compliance With Statutory Annexation Provisions Required — Standard of Review: Municipal annexation statutes contain numerous and detailed requirements for a city to annex property, some of which charge city planners to make subjective value judgments and statements of opinion, especially those concerning plans for the future. Pursuant to Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248 (1980), and Nilson Enterprises, Inc. v. Great Falls, 190 M 341, 621 P2d 466 (1980), the cardinal considerations for requiring substantial compliance with the annexation laws are public notice and participation, particularly for those affected by a proposed annexation. If all of the substantive and procedural requirements are included and complied with by a municipality, the law will have been followed, and if each of the statutory mandates that contain a subjective component are considered and included in the required plans, notice and the opportunity to participate are considered proper. Thus, compliance with annexation statutes must be complete and must be substantial when a statute requires a municipality to exercise discretion in making planning decisions. If there are no disputed issues of fact, the Supreme Court will review a District Court's decision on whether there was compliance with the law de novo. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

Former Law: Prior to the enactment of this section, the exclusive manner of annexation was through statutory provisions and failure to substantially comply with such provisions defeated annexation. Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248, 37 St. Rep. 277 (1980); Balock v. Melstone, 186 M 303, 607 P2d 545, 37 St. Rep. 288 (1980).

Part Case Notes

Provision Made for Water and Sewer Mains — City Annexation Plan in Substantial Statutory Compliance: Plaintiff was one of 277 property owners who contended that a plan for the extension of services into areas annexed by the city of Whitefish did not comply with annexation statutes. The Supreme Court examined the plan and concluded that: (1) the statement required by 7-2-4731 regarding extension of municipal services was included; (2) provision for future development in conformance with 7-2-4732 was made; (3) the plan included a financing method conforming with 7-2-4732 and 76-3-510; (4) tax burden statements conforming to 7-2-4732 and voting methodology statements conforming to 7-2-4733 were included; (5) the plan contained a long-range plan as required in 7-2-4732; (6) a timetable required by 7-2-4732 was included; and (7) the plan included maps of general land use, the city's present and proposed boundaries, and present and proposed streets and water mains, and a statement regarding other boundaries was included in conformance with 7-2-4731. The District Court's conclusion that the plan for the extension of services met statutory requirements was affirmed. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

Each Method of Annexation as Separate Procedure: Each of the eight methods of municipal annexation is a separate and distinct procedure. Therefore, the statutory exemption for golf courses found in 7-2-4503 does not apply to annexations commenced under Title 7, ch. 2, part 47

(Planned Community Development Act). State ex rel. Hilands Golf Club v. Billings, 198 M 475, 647 P2d 345, 39 St. Rep. 1132 (1982).

Constitutionality — Annexation Generally: Annexation, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition, is a political matter exclusively for the Legislature to control, and unless specifically restrained by the Montana Constitution, the Legislature can authorize annexation without the consent or even against the wishes of the people living in the annexed corporation or territory. Harrison v. Missoula, 146 M 420, 407 P2d 703 (1965).

Remedy for Illegal Inclusion: The remedy of injunction is available to one whose taxes would be increased by an illegal inclusion of his property within the limits of a city. Sharkey v. Butte, 52 M 16, 155 P 266 (1916).

Attorney General's Opinions

Cross-County Annexation Lawful — County Approval Not Required: Montana law does not expressly or impliedly limit annexation by county boundaries. In liberally construing the powers of incorporated cities and towns and counties, the Attorney General held that cross-county annexation is permitted by Montana law and is not dependent upon county approval. (See 7-2-4208.) 51 A.G. Op. 18 (2006).

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 66 in definition of municipality, after "any", inserted "incorporated" and at end deleted "under Montana law"; deleted definition of resident freeholder that read: ""Resident freeholder" means a person who maintains his residence on real property in which he holds an estate of life or inheritance or of which he is the purchaser of such an estate under a contract for deed, some memorandum of which has been filed in the office of the county clerk and recorder"; inserted definition of real property owner; and made minor changes in style. Case Notes

Annexation of Golf Club: The city of Billings began proceedings to annex a golf club. Upon petition of the golf club, the District Court issued a Writ of Mandamus and then ruled, after trial, that 7-2-4503 deprived the city of the authority to annex a golf club. The city appealed, claiming that it had been proceeding under the Planned Community Development Act and that golf courses were not exempt from annexation under that Act. The Supreme Court agreed with the city that golf courses were not exempt from annexation under the Planned Community Development Act but held that under that Act, the golf club could prevent annexation. The court further ruled that because the Planned Community Development Act provides for judicial review, issuance of a Writ of Mandamus was premature. State ex rel. Hilands Golf Club v. Billings, 198 M 475, 647 P2d 345, 39 St. Rep. 1132 (1982).

The date of the last publication shall not be more than 7 days preceding the date of the public hearing. If there is no such newspaper, the municipality shall post the notice in at least five public places within the municipality and at least five public places in the area to be annexed for 30 days prior to the date of public hearing"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

7-2-4710. Protest.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 66 in (1), near end, substituted "real property owners of the area" for "freeholders of the territory"; in (2), near beginning, substituted "real property owners" for "freeholders" and near middle, after "annexed", inserted "may not be considered or acted upon by the governing body on its own initiative, without petition"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 16, 1995.

1985 Amendment: Near beginning of (1) increased protest period from 20 to 45 days; in (1) and (2) deleted "resident" before "freeholders".

Case Notes

Failure to Stop Annexation Process — Judicial Review Not Precluded: The right to protest annexation under this section is separate from the right to request judicial review under 7-2-4741. Thus, even though a property owner does not stop the annexation process under this section, the property owner is still entitled to the judicial review in 7-2-4741 to ensure that a city met the statutory requirements of this part. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

City Resolution Allowing Implied Consent to Annexation Upon Continued Use of Utility Services Affirmed: The city of Whitefish adopted a municipal resolution requiring that property owners consent to annexation in order to continue to receive city utility services and allowing the city to imply consent to annexation from property owners that continued to receive the services after they received notice requiring them to disconnect from the utilities. Property owners contended that the resolution was invalid, but the District Court held the resolution valid, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Attorney General held in 46 A.G. Op. 12 (1995), that a municipality may establish a rule requiring consent to annexation as a condition for continued receipt of services, and that opinion is in accord with 69-7-201. Further, the utility rule in this case put the burden on the property owner to arrange to disconnect from services if protesting annexation, so once proper notice was given, under 28-2-503 and this section, the city's procedure to imply consent was a proper method to determine if a property owner wished to continue to receive city services or to protest annexation. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

Recorded Waiver of Annexation Protest by Prior Property Owner — Present Owner Precluded From Protesting Annexation: In 1966, the city of Whitefish adopted a policy that a landowner outside the city boundary had to agree to waive the right to protest future annexation in order to continue to receive city water and sewer services. The waivers were properly recorded and later used by the city to invalidate annexation protests by current landowners in 1998. The District Court concluded that the waivers constituted a covenant running with the land and that the current owners were precluded from protesting the proposed annexation. On appeal, the current owners argued that the right to protest in this section resided with the current property owner and that the statutory consent to annexation authorized by 7-13-4314 only applied to the initiation of services and could not transfer to subsequent purchasers. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under 7-1-113, a self-governing entity may act even when there are controlling state laws as long as the local government's actions are not inconsistent with or lower or less stringent than state requirements. The purpose of 7-13-4314 is to ensure that property owners outside a municipality can request utility services and to ensure that the local government can later require annexation in exchange for utilities. Creating a covenant that runs with the land furthers this purpose. In addition, 70-17-203 also provides that every covenant made for the direct benefit of the property runs with the land. The waivers directly benefited the property and were allowable, so the District Court was affirmed. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004). See also State ex rel. Swart v. Molitor, 190 M 515, 621 P2d 1100 (1981), and St. John v. Lewistown, 2017 MT 126, 387 Mont. 444, 395 P.3d 486.

The Supreme Court held that a regulatory taking of property by a municipality is allowed even if the value of that property and its usefulness is diminished. The Supreme Court cited Harrison v. Missoula, 146 M 420, 407 P2d 703 (1965), for the proposition that the levying of future taxes after annexation does not constitute a taking of property. Kudloff v. Attorney General's Opinions

Growth Policy Required Prior to Annexation of New Territory but Not for Continued Subdivision Review: Under this section, a growth policy covering an area proposed for municipal annexation is required before a municipality may extend corporate limits under this part, but the requirement does not apply to annexations conducted under 7-2-4201, 7-2-4301, 7-2-4401, 7-2-4501, or 7-2-4601. A growth policy is also required before certain subdivision review procedures and city powers of annexation are authorized. However, a growth policy is not required to continue subdivision review unless the city or county wishes to qualify for streamlined review processes. 49 A.G. Op. 23 (2002).

(a) upon a proper showing to the public service commission that the existing carrier is unable or refuses to provide adequate service to the annexed or incorporated area; or

(b) after the expiration of 5 years, if a majority of the residents of the annexed or incorporated area sign a petition requesting the municipality to provide the service.

(2) If a proper showing is made that the existing carrier is unable or refuses to provide adequate service to the annexed or incorporated area or, after the expiration of 5 years, if a majority of the residents sign a petition requesting service from the municipality, the municipality may provide garbage and solid waste disposal service to the entire annexed or incorporated area.

(3) For the purposes of determining whether an existing motor carrier provides adequate service, those services provided by the carrier prior to annexation are considered adequate services." Amendment effective April 29, 2011.

1987 Amendment: In (1), near end of introductory clause, inserted "any person or business located in"; in (1)(b) substituted "after the expiration of 5 years, if a majority of the residents of the annexed or incorporated area sign a petition requesting the municipality to provide the service" for "after the expiration of 5 years, the municipality may provide such service only if a majority of the residents of the annexed or incorporated area request in writing to the municipality that such service be provided by the municipality"; in (2), after "incorporated area or", inserted "after the expiration of 5 years", after "residents" substituted "sign a petition requesting" for "request", and near end substituted "provide" for "assume sole jurisdiction for"; and inserted (3) relating to adequate motor carrier service.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 381, L. 1987, which amended this section, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in D & F Sanitation Service v. Billings, [219] Mont. [437], 713 P.2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986), interpreted section 7-2-4736, MCA; and

WHEREAS, the Supreme Court's interpretation of the section was contrary to the commonly understood intent of the statute and results in an unwieldy provision of services."

Case Notes

Adoption of Self-Government Charter — Doctrine of Implied Preemption: Appellant garbage haulers contended that the Legislature preempted the field of garbage regulation by enacting 7-2-4736. Powers specifically denied to local governments are enumerated in 7-1-111 and include the exercise of any power that prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public convenience and necessity. Under 69-12-314, garbage haulers are required to get a certificate of public convenience and necessity prior to doing business. The decision by Billings voters that the city should provide garbage services in no way prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public necessity. The Supreme Court held that the city was simply exercising its self-government powers to provide a service for its residents and was taxing them for that service. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986), overruling Billings v. Weatherwax, 193 M 163, 630 P2d 1216, 38 St. Rep. 1034 (1981).

Annexation — Preservation of Existing Garbage Service — Constitutionality: The city of Billings contended that 7-2-4736 was a special or local act which violated Art. V, sec. 12, Mont. Const. The Supreme Court determined that the legislative purpose of the section to encourage private garbage service to unannexed areas was a sufficiently important governmental interest to justify the classification; hence, 7-2-4736 was held to be a general law which does not violate Art. V, sec. 12, Mont. Const. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986).

Classification Rationally Related to Governmental Interest: The city of Billings alleged that 7-2-4736 violated Art. II, sec. 4, Mont. Const., by placing a greater tax on annexed taxpayers than on unannexed taxpayers, thereby denying equal protection to both classes of taxpayers. The court found that the classification of people in annexed areas using private garbage services prior to annexation bears a rational relation to the governmental purpose of encouraging private garbage service in unannexed areas. Therefore, 7-2-4736 was held to be constitutional under Art. II, sec. 4, Mont. Const. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986).

Franchise Not Irrevocable — Constitutionality: On cross-appeal, respondent city of Billings contended that 7-2-4736 violated Art. II, sec. 31, Mont. Const., because it granted an irrevocable franchise to appellant private garbage haulers. The Supreme Court agreed that 7-2-4736 conferred a special privilege or franchise upon the garbage haulers, but noted that the franchise was not an irrevocable one within the meaning of Art. II, sec. 31, Mont. Const., since the privilege could be terminated by either a showing that the private carrier was unable or refused to provide adequate service or by written request of a majority of residents after a set period of time. Therefore, 7-2-4736 was held to be constitutional under Art. II, sec. 31, Mont. Const. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986).

Interpretation of Statute — Customers After Annexation: The Supreme Court upheld the District Court's interpretation of this section (prior to 1987 amendment), which interpretation stated that in the event of annexation, a private garbage carrier may continue to provide services only to those customers it had prior to annexation. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 186 in (1) in introductory clause after "of this part" inserted reference to filing of petition in district court in which municipality is located; in (1)(a) at end after "their property" deleted "may file a petition in the district court of the district in which the municipality is located seeking review of the action of the governing body"; inserted (1)(b) regarding filing by county; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2011.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 66 in (1), near beginning, substituted "real property owners of the area to be annexed" for "resident freeholders in the territory" and at end, after "governing", substituted "body" for "board and serve a copy of the petition on the municipality in the manner of service of civil process"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 16, 1995.

Case Notes

Property Owners Barred From Amending Petition — Rules of Civil Procedure Inapplicable: The plaintiff property owners filed a petition for review of an annexation ordinance before the 30-day statutory deadline. However, the plaintiffs initially filed the petition without a majority of real property owners, instead naming John Does 1-200. The plaintiffs eventually amended the petition by including more property owners pursuant to the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure. The District Court dismissed the petition, holding that the plaintiffs failed to meet the 30-day deadline and rejecting the amendment of the petition. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the Rules of Civil Procedure do not supersede the provisions of statutes relating to appeals to or review by the District Courts. When the rules are inconsistent with statutory provisions, the statutory provisions govern. Sharp v. Eureka, 2014 MT 216, 376 Mont. 221, 331 P.3d 840.

Failure to Stop Annexation Process — Judicial Review Not Precluded: The right to protest annexation under 7-2-4710 is separate from the right to request judicial review under this section. Thus, even though a property owner does not stop the annexation process under 7-2-4710, the property owner is still entitled to the judicial review in this section to ensure that a city met the statutory requirements of this part. Case Notes

Compliance With Statutory Annexation Provisions Required — Standard of Review: Municipal annexation statutes contain numerous and detailed requirements for a city to annex property, some of which charge city planners to make subjective value judgments and statements of opinion, especially those concerning plans for the future. Pursuant to Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248 (1980), and Nilson Enterprises, Inc. v. Great Falls, 190 M 341, 621 P2d 466 (1980), the cardinal considerations for requiring substantial compliance with the annexation laws are public notice and participation, particularly for those affected by a proposed annexation. If all of the substantive and procedural requirements are included and complied with by a municipality, the law will have been followed, and if each of the statutory mandates that contain a subjective component are considered and included in the required plans, notice and the opportunity to participate are considered proper. Thus, compliance with annexation statutes must be complete and must be substantial when a statute requires a municipality to exercise discretion in making planning decisions. If there are no disputed issues of fact, the Supreme Court will review a District Court's decision on whether there was compliance with the law de novo. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

Former Law: Prior to the enactment of this section, the exclusive manner of annexation was through statutory provisions and failure to substantially comply with such provisions defeated annexation. Gregory v. Forsyth, 187 M 132, 609 P2d 248, 37 St. Rep. 277 (1980); Balock v. Melstone, 186 M 303, 607 P2d 545, 37 St. Rep. 288 (1980).

Case Notes

Refusal of Deannexation by City Council — Claims Preclusion Proper: The plaintiffs successfully petitioned the defendant, a city, to have their property annexed to the city. Five years later, the plaintiffs sought to have the same property deannexed, which the defendant denied. The plaintiffs filed a lawsuit against the defendant, which the District Court dismissed because the complaint had not been timely served and the statute of limitations for the plaintiffs' claims barred them from being refiled. One month after the District Court's ruling, the plaintiffs filed another suit against the defendant, and the District Court granted summary judgment in favor of the defendant, holding that claims preclusion barred the plaintiffs' second suit. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the four-part test for claims preclusion had been satisfied. Schweitzer v. Whitefish, 2016 MT 254, 385 Mont. 142, 383 P.3d 735.

Special Election on Alternative Form of Government — Study Commission to Recommend Adoption: Under 7-3-187, a special election on an alternative form of government is scheduled only if the study commission recommends an alternative. Therefore, a local government study commission may not have an alternative form of local government placed on the ballot unless the study commission recommends adoption of the alternative plan. 41 A.G. Failure to Adopt Alternate Form of Government — Statutory Basis of Government: A local government which fails in an election to adopt an alternate form of government in the manner provided by Art. XI, sec. 3 and 9, Mont. Const., is bound by the features of the existing form of government. The provisions of 7-3-201 through 7-3-224 allow voters to adopt a mayor-council structure with either partisan or nonpartisan elections. The procedures for recommending such a change are set forth in 7-3-121 through 7-3-161 and 7-3-171 through 7-3-193. If a nonpartisan election structure is not adopted, local elections must be conducted on a partisan basis after May 2, 1977, under the provisions of 7-3-113. 41 A.G. Op. 37 (1985).

Nonapplicability to Proposed Alternative Forms of Government: The structural characteristics of government required by this section were intended to apply if voters did not adopt an alternate form of local government. The section does not apply to proposed alternate forms of government, which may recommend any of the structural characteristics permitted in the local government statutes; therefore, a proposed municipal commission-executive form of government is not restricted by the structural characteristics in this section. 41 A.G. Op. 88 (1986).

Failure to Adopt Alternate Form of Government: A local government which fails in an election to adopt an alternate form of government in the manner provided by Art. XI, sec. 3 and 9, Mont. Const., is bound by the features of the existing form of government. The provisions of 7-3-201 through 7-3-224 allow voters to adopt a mayor-council structure with either partisan or nonpartisan elections. The procedures for recommending such a change are set forth in 7-3-121 through 7-3-161 and 7-3-171 through 7-3-193. If a nonpartisan election structure is not adopted, local elections must be conducted on a partisan basis after May 2, 1977, under the provisions of 7-3-113. 41 A.G. Op. 37 (1985).

Provision Requiring Partisan Elections to Govern: This section provides that if a local government organized under the general statutes authorizing the mayor-council form of government did not adopt a new form of government, then it is governed by certain statutes after May 2, 1977, including 7-3-219(1) (formerly section 47A-3-203(h)(i), R.C.M. 1947), which requires partisan elections. Failure of such local government to adopt a new form of government binds it to the features of the existing government, including partisan elections; however, city officials elected on a nonpartisan basis are considered de facto public officials, and their official acts are regarded as legal. Local elections must be conducted on a partisan basis in the future unless the voters adopt a different plan of government. 41 A.G. Op. 37 (1985).

Attorney General's Opinions

Appointment of Heads of City Departments by City Council Allowed: The city council in a council-manager form of government may adopt an ordinance pursuant to 7-3-304 authorizing the city council rather than the city manager to appoint the heads of city departments. 45 A.G. Op. 1 (1993).

Increase in Number of City Commissioners — Study Commission Recommendation: A local government study commission may not recommend that the number of City Commissioners be increased from five to seven unless it does so as part of a recommendation to adopt a form of government that permits a seven-member City Commission. 41 A.G. Op. 48 (1986).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 substituted "7-3-121 through 7-3-123, 7-3-125" for "7-3-121 through 7-3-125"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 2 near beginning after "7-3-121 through" inserted "7-3-125 and 7-3-141 through". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Commissioner Correction: The free joint conference committee report on HB 851 (Ch. 675, L. 1979) deleted a section of the original bill but did not alter the internal references within the bill accordingly. The Code Commissioner, 1979, has corrected these internal references in 7-3-125, 7-3-143 through 7-3-145, and 7-3-149.

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 substituted "this part" for "7-3-121 through 7-3-125 and 7-3-141 through 7-3-161". Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 2 in introductory clause after "7-3-121 through" inserted "7-3-125 and 7-3-141 through"; and in definition of authority in (g) substituted "water conservation and flood control district" for "flood control and water conservation district". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 521 inserted definitions of form of government and plan of government; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "parts 1 through 7" for "parts 1 through 6" at the end of (3).

7-3-123. Alteration of existing forms of local government.

Attorney General's Opinions

Election Required in 1984 on Whether to Establish Study Commission — Existing Study Committee: The question of conducting local government review and establishing a study commission must appear on the June 1984 primary election ballot pursuant to 7-3-173, notwithstanding any recommendations made by a study committee now reviewing a county government or the placing of its recommendations on the ballot. 40 A.G. Op. 30 (1984).

7-3-125. Petition for alteration.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (2) at end of first sentence deleted "and upon receipt of the petition the governing body shall call an election, as provided for in 7-3-149 through 7-3-151, on the proposed alteration" and near end after "consolidated and" inserted "at least"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

Case Notes

County Government in Transition Period After Vote to Change Form of Government — Not Empowered to Order Special Election on Further Change: In November 1982, the voters in a county voted to change the county form of government from a charter government, provided for in Title 7, ch. 3, part 7, to a commission government, provided for in Title 7, ch. 3, part 4. The new commission government was to take effect in June 1983, after election of new county officers. During the transition period, the existing charter government, in response to a petition filed under 7-3-125, authorized a special election on the question of returning to a charter government. This special election was then challenged in an action for a Writ of Prohibition under Title 27, ch. 27. The Supreme Court upheld the District Court's issuance of the Writ, ruling that placing on the ballot the question of changing the form of county government was in excess of the charter government's jurisdiction. 1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to department of commerce for reference to department of administration.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "department of administration" for "department of community affairs" in (1).

7-3-149. Election on alteration of form of government.

Compiler's Comments

2017 Amendment: Chapter 242 in (1) at beginning deleted "Upon the election administrator's verification that a petition filed pursuant to sections 7-3-121 through 7-3-123, 7-3-125, and 7-3-141 through 7-3-148 meets all the necessary requirements" and after "plan of government" substituted "upon" for "proposed by the petition"; inserted (1)(a) through (1)(c) regarding election administrator's verification, local government ordinance, and study commission recommendation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 3, 2017.

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) before "governing body" inserted first clause concerning a petition meeting requirements, substituted "call an election" for "call a special election", after "proposed by the petition" deleted "to be held at the next regular or primary election that is at least 75 days after the call and the date of filing with the records administrator under 7-3-146. The records administrator shall prepare and print notices of the election", and inserted last sentence referencing Title 13, chapter 1, part 4; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 521 in (1) in first sentence near middle after "question of an" substituted "alteration of the" for "alternative" and after "government" inserted "or change in a plan of government proposed by petition"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 387 in first sentence of (1), after "held at", inserted "the next regular or primary election that is at" and before "the date" deleted "within 120 days of", deleted former second sentence that read: "The special election may be held in conjunction with any other election", and at end of second sentence, before "election", deleted "special"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (1) in first sentence, substituted "75 days" for "40 days".

1983 Amendment: In (1), after "to be held" inserted "at least 40 days after the call and".

Attorney General's Opinions

Study Commission to Establish Election Date on Question of Amendments: A local government study commission, rather than a Board of County Commissioners, is authorized to call for and establish an election date on the question of amendments to the existing form of government proposed in the study commission's final report. (See 1995 amendment.) 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

Election Required in 1984 on Whether to Establish Study Commission — Existing Study Committee: The question of conducting local government review and establishing a study commission must appear on the June 1984 primary election ballot pursuant to 7-3-173, notwithstanding any recommendations made by a study committee now reviewing a county government or the placing of its recommendations on the ballot. 40 A.G. Op. 30 (1984).

7-3-150. General ballot requirements.

Attorney General's Opinions

Ballot Division by Precinct: The ballot division required for local government ballots in this section should be done according to the boundaries of precincts, as that term is defined in 13-3-101. 41 A.G. Op. 88 (1986).

Election Required in 1984 on Whether to Establish Study Commission — Existing Study Committee: The question of conducting local government review and establishing a study commission must appear on the June 1984 primary election ballot pursuant to 7-3-173, notwithstanding any recommendations made by a study committee now reviewing a county government or the placing of its recommendations on the ballot. 40 A.G. 2009 Amendment: Chapter 2 in second sentence after "7-3-121 through" inserted "7-3-125 and 7-3-141 through". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Case Notes

Judicial Review Procedure Not Plain, Speedy, and Adequate Remedy Precluding Writ of Prohibition: In an appeal of the District Court's issuance of a Writ of Prohibition prohibiting the County Commission and the County Recorder from placing on an election ballot the question of retaining the charter form of county government, appellants claimed that prohibition did not lie because there were other plain, speedy, and adequate remedies available to petitioners. The Supreme Court affirmed the Writ's issuance, ruling that a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy was not afforded by: (1) the judicial review procedure set forth in 7-3-154; (2) the injunction procedure set forth in Title 27, ch. 19; or (3) the declaratory judgment procedure set forth in Title 27, ch. 8. Allen v. Madison County Comm'n, 211 M 79, 684 P2d 1095, 41 St. Rep. 1226 (1984).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 521 in (1) in first sentence at beginning substituted "A change in form of government or plan of government" for "An alternative plan of local government", near middle after "office" inserted "pursuant to 7-3-161", and near end substituted "transition" for "consolidation"; and in (3) near beginning after "amendment to" substituted "the plan of an existing form" for "an existing plan" and at end inserted "unless the plan provides for an increase in the number or type of elective officers, in which case the amendment takes effect when the new officers take office". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Attorney General's Opinions

Study Commission Recommendations — Effective Date: A local government study commission report that proposes an alternative plan of local government, if approved by the electors, takes effect when the new officers take office unless otherwise provided in any charter or consolidation plan, under 7-3-156(1). A study commission proposal involving the creation of new offices and establishing qualifications for office becomes effective immediately upon adoption of the change by the electors, under 7-3-156(2). An amendment to an existing plan of government, including changing from partisan to nonpartisan elections for officers other than County Commissioners, takes effect at the beginning of the local government's fiscal year commencing after the election results are officially declared, under 7-3-156(3). (See 2007 amendment.) 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 521 in (1) in first sentence near middle after "new" inserted "form of government or" and after "plan of" substituted "government proposed by petition" for "local government"; in (2) in first sentence near middle after "new" inserted "form of government or"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

7-3-158. Transition provisions affecting personnel.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 521 in (1) at end deleted "whereupon the prior governing body is abolished"; inserted (2) concerning holding of office under new form of government or change to plan of government; in (3) near beginning after "positions" deleted "whether elective or appointive"; in (4) at beginning substituted "A change in a form of government or a plan of government" for "A charter or a petition proposing an alteration to an existing form of local government", after "elected officers" substituted "of an office that is abolished may" for "shall", and after "existing elected officers" deleted "shall"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "or resolution" after "petition" in (3).

Attorney General's Opinions

Required Election Schedule for Nonelected Position: Where the existing office of city treasurer is a nonelected position and the proposed plan of local government calls for an elected city treasurer, the election schedule required by 7-3-160 is to be followed. The exceptions in this section apply only to elected officers. (See 2007 amendment.) 41 A.G. Op. 88 (1986).

Holdover Officers — Exclusive Exceptions: Subsection (3) of 7-3-158 provides the only two exclusive exceptions regarding holdover officers of an existing governing body once a new form of local government has been adopted. If neither exception is provided for by charter or petition, then the general rule in 7-3-158(1) would operate to abolish the prior governing body at the time the new body is elected and qualified for office. (See 2007 amendment.) 41 A.G. Op. 70 (1986).

Increase in Number of County Commissioners — Holdovers — Alteration of District Boundaries: If the electors were to adopt a proposal to increase the number of County Commissioners, all of the incumbent Commissioners would lose their positions unless otherwise required by the adopted plan, pursuant to 7-3-158. If no provision were made for holdovers in the local government study commission plan, they would remain in office only until the newly elected Commissioners take office. However, a study commission proposal is not invalid because it provides for holdover County Commissioners, even when the proposal alters the commission district boundaries. (See 2007 amendment.) (See 40 A.G. Op. 1 (1983)). 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

7-3-160. Election of new officials — subsequent elections of officials.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) in first sentence substituted "order an election" for "order a special primary and general election", in second sentence substituted "first election" for "elections" and substituted "conducted in accordance with Title 13, chapter 1, part 4" for "held in conjunction with any other election of that government", and inserted last two sentences prohibiting primary elections and specifying officials' term; in (2) substituted current language regarding dates of subsequent primary and general elections for former (2) that read: "(2) The order must specify:

(a) a date for the primary election to be held no later than the government's next regularly scheduled primary election; and

(b) a date for the general election to be held no later than the next regularly scheduled city or county general election following the primary election date established under subsection (2)(a)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 521 in (1) in first sentence near beginning after "which" substituted "a new form" for "the new plan", after "government" inserted "or change in a plan of government", and near end after "form" inserted "or plan" and in second sentence after "officials" substituted "must" for "may" and at end inserted "of that government"; in (2)(a) near end substituted "government's next regularly scheduled" for "next regularly scheduled city or county"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1986 Amendment: Substituted (2) relating to scheduling of primary and general elections for former (2) that read: "The order shall specify a date for the primary election not more than 120 days or less than 75 days after the election approving the new form and a date for the general election 75 days after the primary."

1985 Amendment: In (2) after "less than", substituted "75 days" for "20 days" and near end of sentence, substituted "75 days" for "60 days".

Attorney General's Opinions

Required Election Schedule for Nonelected Position: Where the existing office of city treasurer is a nonelected position and the proposed plan of local government calls for an elected city treasurer, the election schedule required by this section is to be followed. The exceptions in 7-3-158 apply only to elected officers. (See 2007 amendment to 7-3-158.) 41 A.G. Op. 88 (1986).

Study Commission to Establish Election Dates for New Officers: Under 7-3-187(1)(c), a local government study commission, rather than a Board of County Commissioners, is responsible for setting the dates of a special primary and a general election for officers of a new government, if the proposal is approved by the electors. However, the dates must fall within the time periods provided in 7-3-160(2) (decided prior to 1986 amendment). 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

Timetables for Filing Declarations of Nomination and Changing Precinct Boundaries — Study Commission Recommendations: The timetable for filing declarations of nomination found in 13-10-201(6) and the timetable for changing precinct boundaries found in 13-3-102(1) apply to candidates for County Commissioner positions created by the adoption of a local government study commission proposal. 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

2005 Amendment: Chapter 130 in (1)(c) at beginning deleted "in 1984 and thereafter"; in (2) near middle after "commission" substituted "as required by" for "in 1984 to implement the provisions of" and after "constitution" deleted "as provided in section 2, Chapter 70, Laws of 1977"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

Attorney General's Opinions

Mill Levy Question Precluded on Study Commission Ballot: A local governing body is required to conduct a decennial election on the question of local government review and establishment of a study commission. Prior to 1999, under 7-3-184, a local government under study was also required to appropriate an amount necessary to conduct the study and local governments were allowed a mill levy to do so. However, the 1999 Legislature eliminated a local government's authority to levy for a study commission in favor of a generic mill levy election procedure. Thus, local governments may now choose whether or not to fund study commissions, but any appropriation for that purpose is subject to the mill levy limitations of 15-10-420. The ballot form in 7-3-175 is limited to the single question of establishing a local government study commission, so a local government may not combine a mill levy question with the study commission question. Rather, the mill levy question may be presented pursuant to the general-purpose mill levy election procedure in 15-10-425. 50 A.G. Op. 5 (2004).

Existing Nonelected Study Committee — 1984 Election Required: The question of conducting local government review and establishing a study commission must appear on the June 1984 primary election ballot pursuant to this section, notwithstanding any recommendations made by a nonelected study committee now reviewing a county government or the placing of its recommendations on the ballot. 40 A.G. Op. 30 (1984).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 deleted former (2) and (3) that read: "(2) The question of conducting a local government review and establishing a study commission requires an affirmative vote of a majority of those voting on the question for passage.

(3) Except for elections to be conducted pursuant to 7-3-173(2), a special election on the question of reviewing a local government and establishing a study commission must be held no sooner than 60 days and no later than 90 days after the passage of a resolution or the certification of a petition calling for an election on the question"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 521 in (1) in ballot form in both for and against statement after "establishment" inserted "and funding, not to exceed (insert dollar or mill amount)" and in against statement after "of a" inserted "local government" and at end inserted "consisting of (insert number of members) members to examine the government of (insert name of local government) and submit recommendations on the government"; and made minor changes in style. Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) at beginning deleted "If the question of reviewing the local government and establishing a study commission is approved" and substituted "in accordance with 7-3-124" for "in conjunction with the first regularly scheduled election of the local government conducted after 90 days following the election establishing the study commission"; in (2) substituted "the filing deadline established in 13-1-403" for "75 days before the date of the election"; in (5) inserted first sentence regarding number of candidates and number of positions to be filled; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

Code Commissioner Correction: Pursuant to sec. 40, Ch. 55, L. 2015, the code commissioner in (1) substituted "7-3-174" for "7-3-124". Section 7-3-124 was repealed by Ch. 49, L. 2015, and 7-3-174, as amended by Ch. 49, deals with the same subject matter as the repealed section.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 250 in (2) near middle of first sentence, substituted "75 days" for "60 days".

Chapter 435 in (2) at end substituted "commissioners" for "commissions"; and in (4), in first sentence inserted "which includes votes cast for candidates who have officially filed nominations and votes for write-in candidates" and inserted second sentence concerning a tie vote.

7-3-177. Composition of study commission.

Compiler's Comments

1985 Amendment: In (2) inserted second sentence relating to time of appointment.

Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 584 at beginning of (2)(a) substituted "Subject to 15-10-420" for "For the support of the study commission", substituted "may" for "shall", and after "study" deleted "not to exceed 1 mill, and the local government may levy up to 1 mill in excess of all other mill levies authorized by law to fund the appropriation for the support of the study commission"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

Severability: Section 172, Ch. 584, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 175, Ch. 584, L. 1999, provided that this section applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

1991 Amendment: Near middle of (2)(a), after "appropriate", substituted "an amount necessary to fund the study, not to exceed 1 mill" for "the equivalent of at least 1 mill".

Attorney General's Opinions

Mill Levy Question Precluded on Study Commission Ballot: A local governing body is required to conduct a decennial election on the question of local government review and establishment of a study commission. Prior to 1999, under this section, a local government under study was also required to appropriate an amount necessary to conduct the study and local governments were allowed a mill levy to do so. However, the 1999 Legislature eliminated a local government's authority to levy for a study commission in favor of a generic mill levy election procedure. Thus, local governments may now choose whether or not to fund study commissions, but any appropriation for that purpose is subject to the mill levy limitations of 15-10-420. The ballot form in 7-3-175 is limited to the single question of establishing a local government study commission, so a local government may not combine a mill levy question with the study commission question. Rather, the mill levy question may be presented pursuant to the general-purpose mill levy election procedure in 15-10-425. (See 2007 amendment.) 50 A.G. Op. 5 (2004).

Service Consolidations Submitted to Governing Bodies: A local government study commission may recommend a change in the form or structure of local government. Recommended changes in structure are to be set forth in the study commission's final report and placed on the ballot for voter approval. A study commission may also recommend a service consolidation or transfer in cooperation with a study commission of another county or municipality. A recommendation to consolidate services is to be set forth in a supplemental report and submitted to the appropriate governing bodies for reaction within 1 year. 41 A.G. Op. 80 (1986).

Special Election on Alternative Form of Government — Study Commission to Recommend Adoption: Under 7-3-187, a special election on an alternative form of government is scheduled only if the study commission recommends an alternative. Therefore, a local government study commission may not have an alternative form of local government placed on the ballot unless the study commission recommends adoption of the alternative plan. 41 A.G. Op. 56 (1986).

Recommendation of Shorter Terms of County Commission Office: A local government study commission may recommend that terms of office for County Commissioners be less than 6 years if the county has adopted the statutory county "commission form" of government. A local government study commission may not recommend that the terms of office for County Commissioners be less than 6 years if the county has retained the form of government organized under the statutes listed in 7-3-111. 41 A.G. Attorney General's Opinions

Holdover Officers — Exclusive Exceptions: Subsection (3) of 7-3-158 provides the only two exclusive exceptions regarding holdover officers of an existing governing body once a new form of local government has been adopted. If neither exception is provided for by charter or petition, then the general rule in 7-3-158(1) would operate to abolish the prior governing body at the time the new body is elected and qualified for office. (See 2007 amendment to 7-3-158.) 41 A.G. Op. 70 (1986).

Increase in Number of County Commissioners — Holdovers — Alteration of District Boundaries: If the electors were to adopt a proposal to increase the number of County Commissioners, all of the incumbent Commissioners would lose their positions unless otherwise required by the adopted plan, pursuant to 7-3-158. If no provision were made for holdovers in the local government study commission plan, they would remain in office only until the newly elected Commissioners take office. However, a study commission proposal is not invalid because it provides for holdover County Commissioners, even when the proposal alters the commission district boundaries. (See 2007 amendment to 7-3-158.) (See 40 A.G. Op. 1 (1983)). 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

Study Commission Recommendations — Effective Date: A local government study commission report that proposes an alternative plan of local government, if approved by the electors, takes effect when the new officers take office unless otherwise provided in any charter or consolidation plan, under 7-3-156(1). A study commission proposal involving the creation of new offices and establishing qualifications for office becomes effective immediately upon adoption of the change by the electors, under 7-3-156(2). An amendment to an existing plan of government, including changing from partisan to nonpartisan elections for officers other than County Commissioners, takes effect at the beginning of the local government's fiscal year commencing after the election results are officially declared, under 7-3-156(3). (See 2007 amendment to 7-3-156.) 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

Study Commission to Establish Election Dates for New Officers: Under 7-3-187(1)(c), a local government study commission, rather than a Board of County Commissioners, is responsible for setting the dates of a special primary and a general election for officers of a new government, if the proposal is approved by the electors. Staggered, At-Large Election of County Commissioners Violates Section 2 of Voting Rights Act: The United States Department of Justice brought a civil action against Blaine County, Montana, claiming that the county's adoption of an at-large system of electing County Commissioners violated the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (VRA) (42 U.S.C 1973) because it allowed block voting of whites against Indian candidates, largely from the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation, thereby excluding Indians from participating equally in the county's political process. The District Court found that there was a violation of section 2 of the VRA, enjoined the county from using the at-large election system, and required the county to adopt a curative plan and implement it. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the U.S. District Court's decision and held: (1) U.S. Supreme Court summary affirmances of lower court decisions may be relied on as precedent, unless circumstances have changed since the court's order; (2) Congress did not exceed its authority in failing to limit the application of section 2 of the VRA to only certain geographic localities found by the Congress to have discriminated against minorities in the past; (3) the VRA was constitutional in its requirement that only a discriminatory result, rather than a discriminatory intent, be found for there to be a violation of the law; (4) the District Court was correct in its conclusion that, taking into consideration the totality of the circumstances existing in Blaine County, an at-large voting system violated section 2 of the VRA; and (5) although the District Court did fail to rule on the reliability of some of the expert witnesses used by the United States, the error was harmless error and would not require the court of appeals to overturn the District Court's judgment. County Government in Transition Period After Vote to Change Form of Government — Not Empowered to Order Special Election to Further Change: In November 1982, the voters in a county voted to change the county form of government from a charter government, provided for in Title 7, ch. 3, part 7, to a commission government, provided for in Title 7, ch. 3, part 4. The new commission government was to take effect in June 1983, after election of new county officers. During the transition period, the existing charter government, in response to a petition filed under 7-3-125, authorized a special election on the question of returning to a charter government. This special election was then challenged in an action for a Writ of Prohibition under Title 27, ch. 27. The Supreme Court upheld the District Court's issuance of the Writ, ruling that placing on the ballot the question of changing the form of county government was in excess of the charter government's jurisdiction. Case Notes

Staggered, At-Large Election of County Commissioners Violates Section 2 of Voting Rights Act: The United States Department of Justice brought a civil action against Blaine County, Montana, claiming that the county's adoption of an at-large system of electing County Commissioners violated the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (VRA) (42 U.S.C 1973) because it allowed block voting of whites against Indian candidates, largely from the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation, thereby excluding Indians from participating equally in the county's political process. The District Court found that there was a violation of section 2 of the VRA, enjoined the county from using the at-large election system, and required the county to adopt a curative plan and implement it. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the U.S. District Court's decision and held: (1) U.S. Supreme Court summary affirmances of lower court decisions may be relied on as precedent, unless circumstances have changed since the court's order; (2) Congress did not exceed its authority in failing to limit the application of section 2 of the VRA to only certain geographic localities found by the Congress to have discriminated against minorities in the past; (3) the VRA was constitutional in its requirement that only a discriminatory result, rather than a discriminatory intent, be found for there to be a violation of the law; (4) the District Court was correct in its conclusion that, taking into consideration the totality of the circumstances existing in Blaine County, an at-large voting system violated section 2 of the VRA; and (5) although the District Court did fail to rule on the reliability of some of the expert witnesses used by the United States, the error was harmless error and would not require the court of appeals to overturn the District Court's judgment. Butte-Silver Bow Self-Government Charter Held Not Superior to Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act: When Babb was appointed the chief executive officer of the Butte-Silver Bow consolidated city-county government, he immediately fired both Johnston and Shea, who had been department heads of the consolidated government for many years. Johnston and Shea then sued Babb for violation of the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act (WDEA). Babb argued that because the self-government charter of the consolidated government provided that department heads serve "at the pleasure of" the chief executive officer (CEO) of the local government and because self-government charters are superior to statute, Johnston and Shea were "at will" employees to whom the WDEA did not apply. The U.S. Magistrate Judge decided, citing MacMillan v. St. Comp. Ins. Fund, 285 M 202, 947 P2d 75 (1997), that the Montana Supreme Court has held that municipalities operating under self-government charters have limitations as provided in Title 7, ch. 1, part 1, which the self-government charter itself cited, and 7-1-111(2), which applies Title 39 to local governments operating with self-government powers. Further, the Magistrate Judge decided that under Art. XI, sec. 5(3), Mont. Const., and Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222 (1999), the language of the self-government charter requiring department heads to serve "at the pleasure of" the CEO is not such a part of the structure and organization of local government that it is superior to statute. For these reasons, the Magistrate Judge decided that the WDEA did apply to the firing of Johnston and Shea and that they therefore could not be fired without good cause and granted Johnston and Shea's motion for summary judgment. Johnston v. Babb, Cause No. CV-05-03-BU-CSO (D. Mont. 2005).

Establishment of Refuse Disposal District by County With Self-Governing Power: Title 7, ch. 13, part 2 (now repealed), is not mandatory upon a county charter form of government when it establishes a refuse disposal district and system. That part applies to the establishment of a refuse disposal district by governments that are of general power status, not those with self-government status. Title 7, ch. 13, part 2 (now repealed), does not direct or require a local government to provide a service within the meaning of 7-1-114. Clopton v. Madison County Comm'n, 216 M 335, 701 P2d 347, 42 St. Rep. 851 (1985).

Case Notes

Suspension of Firefighters — All Cities Required to Present Charges to City Council for Hearing — Suspension Procedure Not Part of "Structure" of City Government Under Applicable Definitions — Statute Not Superseded by Charter: Elsenpeter, a Billings firefighter, was suspended from duty by the Billings fire chief. The firefighters' union filed a lawsuit in which the union contended that the suspension procedure used by the city was unlawful because the charges against Elsenpeter were not presented to the Billings City Council for hearing pursuant to 7-33-4124. The city contended that the suspension procedure that it used is part of the structure and organization of the city under its charter and that, pursuant to Art. XI, sec. 5, Mont. Const., and subsection (2) of this section, which allow the structure of a chartered city government to supersede statutory requirements, the city may override the statutory requirements for hearing contained in 7-33-4124 because the definition of "structure" contained in 7-1-4121(24) is the definition that should apply. The Supreme Court held that in as much as the definitions in 7-1-4121 are, by the terms of that section, limited in their application to 7-1-4121 through 7-1-4149, the dictionary definition of "structure" is the definition that applies. Because the dictionary definition of structure was narrower, the Supreme Court held that the disciplinary suspension procedure used by the city was not part of the "structure" of city government. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that the statutory procedure contained in 7-33-4124, requiring presentment of the charges to the City Council, was not superseded by the city charter and had to be followed for the purposes of the suspension of Elsenpeter. Billings Firefighters Local 521 v. Billings, 1999 MT 6, 293 M 41, 973 P2d 222, 56 St. Rep. 23 (1999). Billings Firefighters Local 521 II was followed, as to the power of a consolidated local government CEO to fire government employees not being considered a part of the structure and organization of a self-governing local government, in Johnston v. Attorney General's Opinions

Combination of Legislative and Executive Powers Under Charter County Government: Under this section, a charter may provide that the executive and administrative functions of the government will be performed by one or more members of the legislative body, which clearly allows the entire legislative body or commission to perform the executive functions. Accordingly, a county charter may provide that the legislative body or commission will perform the executive functions in addition to its legislative duties. The language of the charter determines whether the executive functions are performed by one or all of the members of the legislative body or commission. 46 A.G. Op. 14 (1996).

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of City-County Government to Acquire and Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utilities: A consolidated government with self-government powers, such as the city and county of Butte-Silver Bow, has the authority to acquire and operate electric and natural gas utilities both within and outside the boundaries of the local government unit. The Attorney General determined that Butte-Silver Bow was specifically authorized to do so after considering the local government's charter, constitutional ramifications, and whether the exercise of that authority was prohibited by local government law or other statutes applicable to self-government units and was consistent with state provisions in areas affirmatively subjected to state control, as described in 7-1-113. 48 A.G. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Saving Clause: Section 33, Ch. 29, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 35, Ch. 29, L. 2001, provided: "(1) [This act] applies to the authorization and issuance of bonds occurring on or after July 1, 2001.

(2) Debt limits established under [this act] do not apply to bonds authorized before July 1, 2001, regardless of when the bonds are issued."

1981 Amendment: Changed "The municipality shall not" to "The municipality may not" at the beginning of (2); and substituted "exceeding 28% of the taxable value" for "exceeding 5% of the value" in the middle of (2).

Validation: Section 64, Ch. 614, L. 1981, provided: "Notwithstanding any provisions of this act, any outstanding indebtedness or bond issue on January 1, 1982, of any governmental subdivision is not invalidated because of any changes in the taxable valuation of the subdivision due to removal of automobiles and trucks having a rated capacity of three-quarters of a ton or less from the tax base."

Effect of 1981 Amendment: The primary purpose of Ch. 614, L. 1981, was to replace the system of taxation of automobiles and light trucks with a fee system. With the adoption of the fee system, automobiles and light trucks are no longer taxable property. The resulting loss of taxable valuation has a direct effect on the amount of indebtedness a political subdivision can incur. Thus it was necessary in Ch. 614 to increase the percentage of taxable valuation used as a limitation on indebtedness to offset the loss of taxable valuation attributable to automobiles and light trucks.

Case Notes

City Gross Revenue Franchise Fee on Facilities Using Public Right-of-Way Illegal Tax on Goods and Services: The city of Billings by ordinance established a franchise fee on several public utilities and telecommunications corporations with facilities located in the public right-of-way, and the utilities challenged the fee. The District Court held that the fee constituted an unlawful tax, and the city appealed. Despite the fact that the ordinance was subsequently rejected by voters, rendering the issue moot, the Supreme Court noted that the issue was capable of repetition and therefore accepted jurisdiction of the issue as appropriate in order to finally settle the legality of such fees in case similar ordinances were brought forth in the future. The fee in question was characterized as a franchise fee based on 4% of gross annual revenue generated by each utility that occupied the public right-of-way within the city. However, money collected was not earmarked for right-of-way maintenance or regulation, but was to be used to reduce general property taxes and to fund transportation improvement projects, public safety operations, and park maintenance, and the fee was separate from the city's police power over streets and alleys.

The Supreme Court agreed that the unilaterally imposed, revenue-generating gross revenue fee, which was unrelated to the use or occupancy of the right-of-way, was in fact a tax based exclusively on the sale of a product or service within the city and was thus prohibited pursuant to 7-1-112. Attorney General's Opinions

Town With Weak-Mayor Government Not Authorized to Adopt Statutory Quorum Provisions: A town with a weak-mayor form of municipal government does not have authority to adopt by ordinance the quorum provisions of this section. Those provisions would conflict with 7-5-4121, which states that a majority of the members of the town council constitute a quorum and does not include the mayor as a member of the town council for the determination. 47 A.G. Op. 20 (1998).

Removal of Chief of Fire Department: The chief of a fire department of a city operating under the commission form of government was removed by the Council, his name, however, being restored to the roll of members, thus entitling him to the safeguards afforded him as such member under the civil service rules of 7-33-4121 through 7-33-4131. He later was suspended under this section, but a hearing on his appeal was not accorded him. Held, that failure to hear his appeal rendered the order of suspension of no effect, automatically reinstated him, and entitled him to compensation during the period of his suspension. State ex rel. Daly v. Dryburgh, 62 M 36, 203 P 508 (1921).

Removal of Police Officer:

A police officer may be suspended or discharged for neglect of duty or disobedience of orders by the Chief of Police under this section, subject to review by the Superintendent of the Police Department, from whose order of approval the accused may appeal to the City Council or the Police Commission, under 7-32-4155 through 7-32-4164, upon charges filed with it, a copy of which must be furnished to him. State ex rel. Lease v. Wilkinson, 59 M 327, 196 P 878 (1921).

Where an acting Chief of Police merely recommended to the Council that a police officer be removed from office but did not actually suspend or discharge him, in conformity with this section, there was no order from which he could appeal, and his attempted appeal was ineffectual for any purpose. Section 11-3327, R.C.M. 1947, a saving clause, was not codified. This section has not been repealed and is still valid law. It may be referred to as sec. 114, Ch. 152, L. 1917.

7-3-4301. Authorization for commission-manager form of municipal government.

Attorney General's Opinions

Vacation of Street by Mayor-Council Government — Legal Effect on City's Interest in Street: Under 7-14-4114, a municipality has the authority to close all or part of a street to through traffic without giving up its legal interest in the street or to vacate all or part of the street and revoke its legal interest in it. A municipality with a mayor-council form of government is bound by the procedures in 7-14-4114 rather than by 7-3-4448, which applies only to commission-manager forms of government, when it seeks to discontinue, close, or vacate a street. The choice between vacating a street and closing a street is a matter for the discretion of the municipal officers of a mayor-council form of government. 46 A.G. Op. 4 (1995), clarifying Wynia v. Great Falls, 183 M 458, 600 P2d 802 (1979).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 214 in (2) after "public service commission" deleted "and any order made, action taken, or regulation provided by the commission shall supersede and nullify any order, regulation, ordinance, or other action authorized by this part or part 44 in conflict with any such order, regulation, or action of said public service commission. However, the annual report relating to the operation of a public utility owned by a municipality operating under this part and part 44 to be made to the public service commission shall conform to the fiscal year of the city or town"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

7-3-4305. Petition to organize under commission-manager form — election required.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) substituted "order an election" for "order a special election" and substituted "in accordance with Title 13, chapter 1, part 4" for "in conjunction with a regular or primary election"; in (2) inserted "pursuant to 13-1-405"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 387 in (1), near end of first sentence after "shall", deleted "within 30 days" and after "held" inserted "in conjunction with a regular or primary election"; in (2), at end after "held", deleted "which may not be less than 75 or more than 90 days from the date of the order of the council"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 319 near beginning of (1) decreased percentage of necessary petition signatures from 25% to 15% of qualified electors; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: At end of (2) substituted "no less than 75 and no more than 90 days from the date of the order of the council" for "within 90 days from the date of filing of such petition".

Case Notes

Filing: Filing petition seeking to reorganize city government with City Clerk is equivalent to filing with the City Council. The city must hold the election petitioned for within 90 days (see 1995 amendment) of initial filing with City Clerk. State ex rel. Espelin v. Great Falls, 160 M 135, 500 P2d 1194 (1972).

Attorney General's Opinions

Qualified Electors — Petitions: Petitions for a city election for reorganization under this section require the signatures of presently qualified electors totally not less than 25% of the number of qualified electors registered for the last preceding general municipal election. 34 A.G. Op. 49 (1972).

7-3-4307. Form of ballot.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 substituted "At an election under 7-3-4305, the ballots to be used must be headed "Election for the purpose" for "At such election, the ballots to be used shall be printed on plain white paper and shall be headed "Special election for the purpose"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (2) substituted "failed" for "shall not be adopted at such special election" and after "electors" deleted "of such municipality"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

7-3-4310. Election for municipal officers after reorganization.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) in first sentence substituted "order an election" for "order a special election", substituted "in accordance with Title 13, chapter 1, part 4" for "in conjunction with a regular or primary election", inserted "which must be in accordance with 13-1-405", and substituted last two sentences of (1) regarding first election of officers for "The mayor shall issue a proclamation setting forth the purpose for which the special election is held and the day of holding the election. The proclamation must be published for 10 successive days in each daily newspaper published in the municipality if there is a daily newspaper or for 2 successive weeks in each weekly newspaper published in the municipality. A copy of the proclamation must also be posted at each voting place within the municipality and in five of the most public places in the municipality"; substituted current text in (2) and (3) regarding subsequent election of officers and notice and posting of copies for former text that read: "(2) The election must be conducted, the vote must be canvassed, and the result must be declared in the same manner as provided by law for other municipal elections.

(3) The provisions of 7-3-4341 are to be followed in the special election, except that the date of the election must be in conjunction with a regular or primary election held before the special election"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 387 in (1), in first sentence after "favor of", substituted "reorganization" for "such proposition" and after "held" inserted "in conjunction with a regular or primary election" and in second sentence, at end, deleted "which must be no less than 75 or more than 90 days after the making of such order"; in (3) substituted "election must be in conjunction with a regular or primary election held" for "primary election shall be at least 85 days"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (1) in second sentence, substituted "no less than 75 or more than 90 days" for "within 90 days"; and in (3) substituted "85 days" for "30 days".

1981 Amendment: In (3), substituted "7-3-4341 are" for "[7-3-4345 through 7-3-4347] and [7-3-4349(1)] are specifically"; deleted "The provisions of [7-3-4350] shall be applicable to subsection (2)" from the end of (3).

7-3-4311. Procedure for multimunicipality organization — petition — election — elector qualifications.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) at end substituted "ordering an election to be held in accordance with Title 13, chapter 1, part 4" for "ordering a special election to be held in conjunction with a regular or primary election"; in (3) substituted "qualified electors" for "legal voters"; in (4) substituted current language requiring notice pursuant to 13-1-108 for former language that read: "shall give notice for 30 days in a newspaper published within the proposed municipal district or, if a newspaper is not published in the proposed district, by posting notices in six public places within the limits of the district of the time and place or places of holding the first election for commissioners of the municipal district under this law"; in (5) substituted current language concerning conduct of elections for former language that read: "At the election, all electors qualified by the general election laws of the state who have resided within the limits of the municipal district for 6 months are qualified electors. The board of county commissioners shall appoint judges and clerks of election and canvass and declare the result of the election. The election must be held in conjunction with a regular or primary election and must be conducted in the manner prescribed by law for the election of county officers"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 387 in (1), near beginning after "unincorporated", deleted "which are situated in such proximity or location with reference to each other as to make single municipal control necessary or desirable, shall" and at end inserted "in conjunction with a regular or primary election"; in (2), in second sentence after "held", deleted "which must be no less than 75 or more than 90 days from the date of filing such petition"; in (3), in fourth sentence, inserted "must be held in conjunction with a regular or primary election and"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (2) in second sentence, substituted "no less than 75 or more than 90 days" for "within 90 days".

Resolution Creating Special Improvement District — Not Subject to Referendum: A resolution creating a municipal special improvement district that encompasses less area than the municipal limits is not subject to referendum because the resolution affects only the people within the improvement district rather than the people of the municipality as a whole. The Supreme Court further held that the resolution creating a special improvement district is part of an administrative procedure, not a legislative action subject to referendum. Shelby v. Sandholm, 208 M 77, 676 P2d 178, 41 St. Rep. 186 (1984), distinguished in The Greens at Fort Missoula, LLC v. Missoula, 271 M 398, 897 P2d 1078, 52 St. Rep. 501 (1995).

Case Notes

Authority of Board of County Commissioners to Approve Subdivisions Within Three-Mile Area Outside Corporate Limits: The city of Bozeman sought a reversal of 43 A.G. Op. 26 (1989), in which the Attorney General held that the Board of County Commissioners has final authority to approve subdivisions that are within the 3-mile area immediately outside the corporate limits of the city when the city has a commission-manager form of government. Bozeman asserted that 76-2-312 was not a limitation on the authority of commission-manager governments but rather an acknowledgement by the Legislature that such municipal governments already had extraterritorial subdivision authority under this section and that 76-2-312 exempted cities with a commission-manager form of government from procedural requirements that other forms of municipal government have to follow in order to exercise their extraterritorial subdivision authority. However, this section does not refer to the city commission, but instead clearly provides that the authority granted is to the city director of public services to ensure that the involved plat complies with platting regulations. If the plat complies, the director must approve it. The District Court properly found that 76-2-312 took away the extraterritorial subdivision authority over subdivisions that Bozeman, as a commission-manager form of government, would otherwise have had under 76-2-310 and 76-2-311. Bozeman v. Racicot, 253 M 204, 832 P2d 767, 49 St. Rep. 435 (1992).

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of County Commissioners to Approve Subdivisions Under Commission-Manager Government: The Board of County Commissioners has final authority to approve subdivisions that are within the 3-mile area immediately outside the corporate limits of the city when the city has a commission-manager form of government. 43 A.G. Op. 26 (1989).

7-3-4448. Vacating or changing name of street.

Compiler's Comments

1983 Amendment: In (2), after "persons" deleted "whose" and inserted "who are owners or purchasers under contracts for deed of"; and after "property" inserted "that".

Case Notes

Closure Versus Vacation: Closure and vacation are not synonymous. The former merely alters the use of a street, while the latter effects the vacation of the city's legal interest in the street. Therefore, a city may close a street without meeting the notice requirements of 7-3-4448 if it complies with the notice requirements of 7-14-4114, and in such a case the requirement of 7-3-4448 that the right of access be maintained does not apply. Further, there is no reversion to the lot owners of half the closed street since the city retains its rights in the street. Wynia v. Great Falls, 183 M 458, 600 P2d 802, 36 St. Rep. 1589 (1979).

Standing: Plaintiffs whose property abutted a portion of the street affected had standing to bring action to invalidate ordinance vacating street for parking facilities, even though plaintiffs' property did not abut portion of street vacated. Kemmer v. Bozeman, 158 M 354, 492 P2d 211 (1971).

Attorney General's Opinions

Vacation of Street by Mayor-Council Government — Legal Effect on City's Interest in Street: Under 7-14-4114, a municipality has the authority to close all or part of a street to through traffic without giving up its legal interest in the street or to vacate all or part of the street and revoke its legal interest in it. A municipality with a mayor-council form of government is bound by the procedures in 7-14-4114 rather than by this section, which applies only to commission-manager forms of government, when it seeks to discontinue, close, or vacate a street. The choice between vacating a street and closing a street is a matter for the discretion of the municipal officers of a mayor-council form of government. 46 A.G. Op. 4 (1995), clarifying Wynia v. 2015 Amendment: Chapter 49 in (1) near middle substituted "general" for "regularly scheduled"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective November 4, 2015.

Section Not Codified: Section 11-3271.2, R.C.M. 1947, relating to initial election of the City Judge, was not codified because it was temporary. This section is still valid law and has not been repealed. It may be referred to as sec. 3, Ch. 219, L. 1977. See 1-2-208, stating that amendment to a codified provision is given effect over an uncodified provision.

Case Notes

Termination at Will Unconstitutional: Former provision of this section which allowed termination of a Police Judge at the will of the City Commission was unconstitutional as a violation of the mandate of the doctrine of separation of powers. State ex rel. Morales v. City Comm'n, 174 M 237, 570 P2d 887 (1977). (Annotator's Note: The constitutional infirmity was corrected by amendment effective April 4, 1977.)

Attorney General's Opinions

Term of Appointment of Vacancy in Office of City Judge — Commission-Manager Form of Government: Under the specific provisions of this section, a person who is appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of City Judge under a commission-manager form of city government shall serve the remainder of the existing term. 52 A.G. Op. 2 (2007).

Appointment of City Judge by Third-Class City: Under 7-4-4102, the governing body of a third-class city has the authority to determine by ordinance how a City Judge is selected. However, nothing in statute precludes the city from amending the ordinance in order to provide for the election of the judge. Therefore, when a city of the third class adopts a commission-manager form of government, the city is not bound by this section, which requires election of a City Judge, but may continue to appoint its judge under an ordinance passed pursuant to 7-4-4102. 45 A.G. Attorney General's Opinions

Secretarial Services for Private Practice of County Attorney: A secretary employed by the county to assist a County Attorney may work on the County Attorney's private business during time when the secretary's services are not needed on county business. The County Attorney must account for the time that the secretary spends on private business and reimburse the county for any county-compensated time spent on the County Attorney's private business. A claim by a County Attorney for secretarial services reasonably required for the conduct of the County Attorney's official duties is a legitimate claim against the county. The reasonableness of the claim is a question of fact vested in the sound discretion of the county governing body. 46 A.G. Op. 10 (1995). See also 46 A.G. Op. 20 (1996), in which the Attorney General held that a County Attorney may not compel the County Commissioners to authorize the hiring as a county employee of a legal secretary for the County Attorney absent a showing that any other arrangement would prevent the County Attorney from performing the minimum statutory duties.

Establishment of City Court Office Hours by Governing Body: Subsection (3) of this section permits the governing body of a third-class city or town to set the office hours of the City Court at times other than between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, except on Sundays and other legal holidays. (See 1995 amendment.) 43 A.G. Op. 61 (1990).

Legality of Evening City Court Hours: A City Judge is not prohibited by 3-1-301, 3-1-302, or 3-11-101 from establishing regular sessions of the court during evening hours as long as regular sessions are not convened on Sundays or other legal holidays and the court is open for business on judicial days. These sections place no limitations on the hours of business. Although this section requires that City Court offices be open for business continuously from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. on weekdays, this does not prohibit a City Judge from setting office hours after 5 p.m. on weekdays. As long as the office is open during the required hours for the transaction of business, such as the filing of court documents with the clerk, the City Judge may set additional hours for regular court sessions. (See 1995 amendment.) 43 A.G. Op. 61 (1990).

City Not Authorized to Reduce Office Hours: The phrase "unless otherwise provided by law", as used in this section, does not authorize a city to enact a municipal ordinance reducing the number of hours during which city offices must be open. Subsection (1)(f) of 7-1-114 prohibits a city from reducing its office hours beyond those required by this section. (See 1995 amendment.) 43 A.G. Op. 16 (1989).

Heritage Day — Single Calendar Day Only: The governing body of a political subdivision must schedule the Heritage Day legal holiday on a single calendar day each year. 42 A.G. Op. 22 (1987).

Office Closure When Employees Observe Holidays: Public officer must close on the appropriate day if office employees are entitled to have off the Friday preceding a legal holiday falling on a Saturday or the Monday following a legal holiday falling on a Sunday. 34 A.G. Op. 27 (1971).

Part 21
County Commissioners

Manner of Exercising Power:

Where by law the Board of County Commissioners or other county officer is required to do an act but the method of doing it is not provided, any reasonable and suitable means may be adopted for performing it. Ransom v. Pingel, 104 M 119, 65 P2d 616 (1937); Simpson v. Silver Bow County, 87 M 83, 285 P2d 195 (1930); Arnold v. Custer County, 83 M 130, 269 P 396 (1928), distinguished in Judith Basin County ex rel. Vralsted v. Livingston, 89 M 438, 298 P 356 (1931).

Where the Legislature has prescribed with particularity the essential steps necessary to be taken by a county in the exercise of a power granted, the statute must be held to exclude any other mode of procedure, under the doctrine expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Franzke v. Fergus County, 76 M 150, 245 P 962 (1926).

Contracts:

While the Board of County Commissioners is without power to enter into a contract for services the performance of which is cast upon another county official or board, it may contract with a private individual for information relative to matters of taxation to aid it in the performance of its duties as a County Board of Equalization (now County Tax Appeal Board), even though, incidentally, the information received may aid other officials in the performance of their duties, provided the grant power is to be found in the statutes. Simpson v. Silver Bow County, 87 M 83, 285 P 195 (1930).

A contract made by a Board of County Commissioners, a few weeks before the expiration of its term of office and upon the expiration of a prior contract, for county printing for the 2 succeeding years, is valid in the absence of fraud or bad faith in the making and is not against public policy. Picket Publishing Co. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 36 M 188, 92 P 524 (1907).

A contract with an attorney for his services, entered into by the Chairman of the Board individually, is not binding on the county, since the Commissioners have power to bind the county only where they act as a legal entity. Williams v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 28 M 360, 72 P 755 (1903).

Existence of Power:

The Board of County Commissioners may exercise powers not specifically granted if they are necessarily implied from those granted, and under its implied power it may contract to have work done which is necessary for the proper management of the county's business and the preservation of its property, if the law does not make it the duty of some county officer to do the work. Arnold v. Custer County, 83 M 130, 269 P 396 (1928).

Counties and school districts are subdivisions of the state government with fixed powers and duties, and any act taken by the Commissioners of the former or the trustees of the latter must be justified by the provisions of the statutes defining and limiting their powers. State ex rel. School District v. McGraw, 74 M 152, 240 P 812 (1925).

A Board of County Commissioners is one of limited powers and must in every instance justify its action by reference to the provisions of law defining and limiting these powers. If, however, there is no question of the existence of the power to do the act proposed [decided prior to the adoption of Art. XI, sec. 4(2), Mont. Const.—Annotator], and the mode of its exercise is not pointed out, the Board is left free to use its own discretion in selecting the mode it shall adopt or the course it shall pursue, and the result cannot be called in question if the course pursued is reasonably well adapted to the accomplishment of the end proposed. Hersey v. Neilson, 47 M 132, 131 P 30 (1913); Morse v. Granite County, 44 M 78, 119 P 286 (1911); State ex rel. Gillett v. Cronin, 41 M 293, 109 P 144 (1910); State ex rel. Lambert v. Coad, 23 M 131, 57 P 1092 (1899).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Office of County Commissioner Incompatible With Office of School Trustee: The current nature and duties of the offices of County Commissioner and county high school trustee could give rise to possible conflicts of governmental interest if one person were to retain both offices simultaneously. The Attorney General affirmed the decision in 8 A.G. Op. at 402 (1920), holding that the offices are incompatible in light of the fact that under state law a County Commissioner has certain supervisory powers over a school trustee. However, nothing in state law prohibits an individual from holding one of these offices while seeking the other. 42 A.G. Op. 94 (1988).

Absence of County Commissioner From State: A County Commissioner is subject to the provisions of 7-4-2208 requiring all county officers to secure consent of the Board of County Commissioners before absenting themselves from the state for a period of more than 5 days. 37 A.G. Op. 19 (1977).

2013 Amendment: Chapter 40 in (1) in last sentence substituted "may not be made between the date that falls 6 months before a county commissioner primary election and the date of the general election" for "must be made within 6 months preceding a primary election". Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 291 in (1) in first sentence near middle substituted "into as many commissioner districts as there are county commissioners and ensure that the districts are as compact" for "into three commissioner districts as compact" and in fourth sentence at beginning substituted "A change" for "No change"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Sections 7-4-2102 through 7-4-2104 shall not apply to counties adopting an optional or alternative form of government authorized by law"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1983 Amendment: At end of (1), substituted "primary election" for "general election".

Case Notes

At-Large Voting System Invalid as Discriminatory: Blaine County, located in north central Montana, is vast and sparsely populated. Its 7,009 residents are spread out over 4,638 square miles, which places the county in the top 5% of counties nationwide in terms of size. American Indians constitute 45.2% of the population and 38.8% of the voting age population, while whites make up 52.6% of the population and 59.4% of the voting age population. The American Indian population is geographically concentrated, with 80% of the county's American Indians residing on the Fort Belknap Reservation. Despite their geographic concentration, no American Indians were ever elected to the Blaine County Commission under the at-large voting system. Under the at-large voting system, the Blaine County Commission consisted of three Commissioners, each of whom was required to reside in one of three different residential districts. Each Commissioner was elected by a majority vote of the entire county, not just by voters in the Commissioner's residential district. The Commissioners served 6-year staggered terms, so that each even-numbered year, one Commissioner stood for election. The United States brought an action under section 2 and section 12(d) of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, challenging the county's at-large voting system. The United States sought a declaration that the existing at-large voting system violated section 2. The United States also sought an injunction to prevent the county from using at-large voting in future elections and to require the county to submit a new districting plan for the District Court's approval. The Supreme Court applied section 2 to multimember districts in Thornburg v. Gingles, 478 US 30 (1986). In that case, the court held that when plaintiffs challenge at-large voting schemes under section 2, they must prove at a minimum that "a bloc voting majority must usually be able to defeat candidates supported by a politically cohesive, geographically insular minority group". Broken down, this test has three requirements known as the "Gingles factors": (1) compactness; (2) cohesive minority voting; and (3) a bloc voting majority that can usually defeat the minority preferred candidate. If the plaintiff establishes these three factors, the court then must consider whether under the totality of circumstances, the at-large voting system operates to prevent the minority group from participating equally in the political process and electing representatives of its choice. The evidence presented in this case established that Blaine county's at-large voting system violated section 2. U.S. v. Blaine County, 363 F3d 897 (9th Cir. 2004).

Applicability of Deadline to Redistricting: The Supreme Court, in Barthelmess v. Bergerson, 218 M 398, 708 P2d 1010, 42 St. Rep. 1685 (1985), ordered the redistricting of Custer County to comply with 7-4-2102, including the provision that "no change in the boundary lines of any commissioner district shall be made within 6 months next preceding a primary election". A primary election was scheduled for June 2, 1986, necessitating a December 2, 1985, deadline for redistricting. On December 3, 1985, the two judges of the district issued a memorandum expressing concern over the inability to create new districts within the time prescribed by 7-4-2102, and not until January 3, 1986, was a redistricting plan reviewed and approved. The Supreme Court noted that the purpose of the deadline was to prevent gerrymandering and to provide sufficient time for candidates for County Commissioner to file for election. The provision should not be construed so as to prevent the formation and filing of districts when, as here, the former districts did not meet the statutory requirements of compactness and equality of population. Strict enforcement of the 6-month provision in this case would prevent the residents from legally electing their Commissioners, disenfranchising the voters and impeding county business. The court stated the concept in 1-3-201 that when the reason for a rule ceases, the reason for its enforcement also ceases. By way of declaratory relief, the court upheld the January 3, 1986, districting plan and allowed the County Commissioners to append to the plan a copy of the court order in lieu of the requirement of 7-4-2103 that the certificate shall be dated and signed by the District Judges. Barthelmess v. Bergerson, 220 M 74, 713 P2d 990, 43 St. Rep. 186 (1986).

Equality of Area: Custer County Commissioner district lines were redrawn according to the latest federal census report to achieve simple, identifiable districts as equal in population as possible. No attempt was made to equalize geographic area, as required by this section. The Supreme Court held that the County Commissioners have limited discretion in determining boundaries and mathematical exactness is required only when reasonably possible. However, compliance with the statute requires at least an attempt to equalize both area and population, and hence the new districts are void and the prior districts remain valid until the county is redistricted. Barthelmess v. Bergerson, 218 M 398, 708 P2d 1010, 42 St. Rep. 1685 (1985).

Attorney General's Opinions

Eligibility for Election of Person Transferred Into County Commission District Through Reapportionment: A person who is transferred into a County Commission district by virtue of a reapportionment conducted pursuant to this section is not disqualified from standing for election as long as the person has resided at the same address in the new district for the requisite 2-year period set out in 7-4-2104. 49 A.G. Op. 17 (2002).

Increase in Number of County Commissioners — Holdovers — Alteration of District Boundaries: If the electors were to adopt a proposal to increase the number of County Commissioners, all of the incumbent Commissioners would lose their positions unless otherwise required by the adopted plan, pursuant to 7-3-158. If no provision were made for holdovers in the local government study commission plan, they would remain in office only until the newly elected Commissioners take office. However, a study commission proposal is not invalid because it provides for holdover County Commissioners, even when the proposal alters the commission district boundaries. (See 40 A.G. Op. 1 (1983)). 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

Timetables for Filing Declarations of Nomination and Changing Precinct Boundaries — Study Commission Recommendations: The timetable for filing declarations of nomination found in 13-10-201(6) and the timetable for changing precinct boundaries found in 13-3-102(1) apply to candidates for County Commissioner positions created by the adoption of a local government study commission proposal. 41 A.G. Op. 44 (1986).

Case Notes

Supreme Court Order in Lieu of Certificate: The Supreme Court, in Barthelmess v. Bergerson, 218 M 398, 708 P2d 1010, 42 St. Rep. 1685 (1985), ordered the redistricting of Custer County to comply with 7-4-2102, including the provision that "no change in the boundary lines of any commissioner district shall be made within 6 months next preceding a primary election". A primary election was scheduled for June 2, 1986, necessitating a December 2, 1985, deadline for redistricting. By way of declaratory relief, the court upheld the January 3, 1986, districting plan and allowed the County Commissioners to append to the plan a copy of the court order in lieu of the requirement of this section that the certificate shall be dated and signed by the District Judges. Separation of Powers Doctrine Not to Preclude Compliance With Employee Grievance Procedure by Justice's Court: A Justice of the Peace involved in a disciplinary action against the court office manager contended that a grievance hearing before the County Commission would violate the separation of powers doctrine by interfering with the independence of the court by requiring the Justice of the Peace to be an adverse witness against court personnel, allowing the Justice of the Peace's decision on personnel matters to be overruled by another branch of government, and possibly requiring the Justice of the Peace to accept an employee believed to be unsatisfactory. However, as established in Hillis v. Sullivan, 48 M 320, 137 P 392 (1913), the hiring by the County Commission of a clerk to assist a court does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. In addition, the County Commission is statutorily required to provide a Justice of the Peace with clerical assistance. Thus, a grievance hearing before the County Commission does not violate the separation of powers doctrine because the County Commission's independent hiring of the office manager is consistent with the doctrine; nor does the County Commission's hearing of the grievance constitute an exercise of authority belonging to the Judicial Branch. Clark v. Dussault, 265 M 479, 878 P2d 239, 51 St. Rep. 642 (1994).

Election of Nonresident — Redistricting: Custer County Commissioner district lines were redrawn prior to election of respondent as County Commissioner. Respondent ran for and was elected to the office of County Commissioner for new district 2, although he resided in new district 3. Appellants claimed this section precluded respondent from holding office because of nonresidency. However, the new district boundaries were held void in this decision as not having been established in compliance with 7-4-2102, so respondent was allowed to hold office from the previous district 2 (of which he was a resident) until the next general election, at which time the district boundaries were to be reestablished. Barthelmess v. Bergerson, 218 M 398, 708 P2d 1010, 42 St. Rep. 1685 (1985).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 421, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, current law requires an elected official to take the oath of office on the first Monday of January succeeding the election; and

WHEREAS, the first Monday in January can be as late as the 7th day of January; and

WHEREAS, employing two elected officials in the same month can cause confusion and disagreement regarding compensation and benefits to each official; and 1985 Amendment: Inserted second sentence relating to when commissioner takes office.

Attorney General's Opinions

Recommendation of Shorter Terms of Office by Local Government Study Commission: A local government study commission may recommend that terms of office for County Commissioners be less than 6 years if the county has adopted the statutory county "commission form" of government. A local government study commission may not recommend that the terms of office for County Commissioners be less than 6 years if the county has retained the form of government organized under the statutes listed in 7-3-111. 41 A.G. Op. 51 (1986).

Chapter 551 in (2), near middle of first sentence, substituted "remaining county commissioners" for "district judge or judges in whose district the vacancy occurs" and after first sentence, inserted lead-in to (a) and (b) and inserted (a) and (b) relating to procedure based upon party affiliation or lack thereof; and in (4) near end, substituted "remaining county commissioners" for "district judge".

Case Notes

Prospective Appointment to Fill Vacancy: Under 2-16-501, refusal or neglect of an officer-elect to file his bond within the time prescribed creates a vacancy in the office, and in the case of a County Commissioner (prior to the 1985 amendment of this section) the District Judge had authority under this section, upon the expiration of the 30-day period provided for the filing of a bond, to declare the office vacant and make a prospective appointment, to fill the vacancy when it did occur, i.e., at the commencement of the new term. State ex rel. Wallace v. Callow, 78 M 308, 254 P 187 (1927).

Annulment of Order Filling Vacancy: The power to fill a vacancy in the office of County Commissioner was conferred by Art. XVI, sec. 4, 1889 Mont. Const., upon the District Judge of the district in which the vacancy occurred. The provisions of this section were enacted in pursuance thereof (amended in 1985 to change power of appointment to remaining commissioners and amended in 2007 to require the County Compensation Board or a District Judge to make the appointments to multiple positions). Such appointing power is ministerial, not judicial, in character. Certiorari does not lie to annul an order filling a vacancy deemed by the Judge to exist in that office in a newly created county because of the alleged unconstitutionality of the act under which the office was filled by election and because the incumbent was holding two other offices regarded by him as incompatible. State ex rel. Dowen v. District Court, 50 M 249, 146 P 467 (1915).

Attorney General's Opinions

Filling Vacant Office: Prior to the 1979 amendment of this section, the Attorney General held that if the office of County Commissioner has become vacant with no opportunity to nominate candidates in the primary election, the selection of candidates for the general election will be made by each political party according to 13-10-327; and, pursuant to 13-12-208 (now repealed), write-in candidates may also seek the office. The appointee to fill the immediate vacancy will hold that office until the next general election. 37 A.G. Op. 147 (1978).

7-4-2107. Compensation of county commissioners.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 507 in (1) in first sentence at beginning substituted "Subject to subsection (2)" for "Except as provided in subsection (3)" after "board of county commissioners" deleted "in counties of the first, second, third, and fourth class" and deleted former second sentence that read: "However, the county commissioners may, for all or the remainder of each fiscal year, in conjunction with setting salaries for other officers as provided in 7-4-2504(1), set their salaries at the prior fiscal year level if that level is lower than the level required by this subsection"; in (2) in first sentence at beginning substituted "Each board may elect to serve on a part-time rather than a full-time basis and receive part-time annual salaries based on the annual salary established in 7-4-2503(1)(a)" for "Each member of the board in all other counties may receive an annual salary equal to the annual salary established in 7-4-2503(1)(a)(ii)" and at end after "clerk and recorder" deleted "or a salary at a per-day rate determined by using the salary established in 7-4-2503(1)(a)(ii) for the clerk and recorder" and deleted former second and third sentences that read: "However, the county commissioners may, for all or the remainder of each fiscal year, in conjunction with setting salaries for other officers as provided in 7-4-2504(1), set their salaries at the prior fiscal year level if that level is lower than the level required by this subsection. The salary determined by the board must apply uniformly to all board members"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Each member of the board of fourth-class counties may receive a salary at a daily rate determined by using the salary established in subsection (1). If a daily rate is used, then all board members must be paid on that basis"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 28 in (1), at beginning, inserted exception clause; inserted (3) regarding salary of Board members of fourth-class counties at a daily rate; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 10, 1993.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning of (2), after "counties", substituted language concerning Board member salary being equal to annual salary or per-day rate based upon salary established in 7-4-2503 for Clerk and Recorder for language setting salary for Board member of $60 per day beginning July 1, 1985, and adjusted every July 1 thereafter by adding a cost-of-living adjustment to $60 amount and inserted last sentence concerning established salary being applied uniformly to all Board members. Amendment effective April 22, 1991.

1986 Amendment: In (1) following "$2,000" inserted remainder of subsection allowing a uniform freeze in compensation; and in (2) following "calculated as provided in 7-4-2504" inserted remainder of subsection allowing a uniform freeze in compensation.

1985 Amendment: In (2) in first sentence, after "salary", deleted "of not more than $50", and inserted the second and third sentences setting $60, then $60 plus a cost-of-living increment, for a daily salary.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "an annual salary equal to the annual salary established in 7-4-2503 for the clerk and recorder plus $2,000" for "an annual salary to be established by resolution of the board in an amount not to exceed the annual salary established in the schedule in 7-4-2503 for the clerk and recorder" at the end of (1); and substituted (2) establishing a $50-maximum daily salary for "Each member of the board in all other counties is entitled to a salary to be established by the board by resolution in an amount not to exceed $40 per day for each day's attendance on the sessions of the board."

Attorney General's Opinions

Change in County Classification — Adjustment of Salaries of County Officials: When the classification of a county under 7-1-2111 (now repealed) changes, salaries of County Commissioners, the County Attorney, and county officials listed in 7-4-2503(1) must be adjusted as of July 1 of the following year. Adjustments are computed as follows: (1) for County Commissioners, according to this section; (2) for a part-time County Attorney, according to 7-4-2503(3); and (3) for county officials listed in 7-4-2503(1), according to 7-4-2503. (See 2001 amendment.) 42 A.G. Op. 85 (1988).

Timing of Salary Increases Caused by County Classification Change: Under the reasoning of 40 A.G. Op. 81 (1984), when a county's classification changes according to 7-1-2111 (now repealed), the salaries of the County Commissioners, as provided for in 7-4-2107, must change as of July 1 of the following year, the onset of a new fiscal year for the county. 41 A.G. Op. 6 (1985).

Computation of Cost-of-Living Increase: The cost-of-living increase authorized for county officials by this section applies only to the annual base salary plus population increment established by 7-4-2503(1) and not to the additional sums included in the salaries of the Superintendent of Schools, Sheriff, and Commissioners under 7-4-2503(2) and this section. (See 2001 amendment.) 39 A.G. Op. 65 (1982).

Board of County Commissioners Not to Reduce Workload of One County Commissioner and Reduce His Pay Accordingly: A County Commissioner of a first-, second-, third-, or fourth-class county may not reduce his workload relative to the workloads of the other Commissioners and have his pay reduced accordingly. 36 A.G. Op. 48 (1976).

7-4-2108. Mileage allowance for county commissioners — expenses.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 291 in (1) after "county commissioners" deleted "in counties of the first, second, third, and fourth class"; in (2) deleted former first sentence that read: "Each member of the board in all other counties is entitled to a mileage allowance as provided in 2-18-503 for the distance necessarily traveled in going to and returning from the county seat and the commissioner's place of residence each day that the trip is actually made to perform official duties" and near end after "county seat" substituted "the rate for lodging established in Title 2, chapter 18, part 5, or the amount calculated in this section for mileage, whichever is less" for "$18 per day"; in (4) in first sentence after "commissioner" substituted "the rate for noncommercial, nonreceiptable lodging established in Title 2, chapter 18, part 5" for "the amount of $7"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

7-4-2109. Presiding officer of board.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

7-4-2110. Supervision of county and other officers.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 112 inserted (5) authorizing the board to require officers to supervise staff in the manner provided in personnel policies of the county's governing body; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Case Notes

County Assessor as Agent of Department of Revenue: This section grants to the Board of County Commissioners supervisory control of County Assessors "under such limitations and restrictions as are prescribed by law". Section 15-8-102 is such a limitation and removes supervision of all internal operations of the County Assessor's office from the County Commissioners and places it with the Department of Revenue. Cantwell v. Geiger, 228 M 330, 742 P2d 468, 44 St. Rep. 1574 (1987).

Supervision of Officers: The Board of County Commissioners has general supervision and control over the officers, affairs, and finances of its county, and it may be conceded that, unless authority therefor shall be found in the statutes, no other county officer may bind the county by contract. A person dealing with a county through one of its agents is bound to know the extent of such agent's authority, and if he enters into an unauthorized contract, he does so at his own risk. Hicks v. Stillwater County, 84 M 38, 274 P 296 (1929). See also Pue v. Lewis & Clark County, 75 M 207, 243 P 573 (1926).

Attorney General's Opinions

County Attorney as Employee for Purposes of Lawsuit Regarding Administrative Actions: A County Attorney is not liable for civil damages for conduct within the scope of his prosecutorial duties; however, that immunity does not extend to the discretionary administrative business of running a County Attorney's office. Thus, a County Attorney is considered a county employee for purposes of the Montana Comprehensive State Insurance Plan and Tort Claims Act whenever the County Attorney is named in a civil lawsuit for actions regarding county administrative business, such as the hiring and firing of staff. 44 A.G. Op. 29 (1992).

Office of County Commissioner Incompatible With Office of School Trustee: The current nature and duties of the offices of County Commissioner and county high school trustee could give rise to possible conflicts of governmental interest if one person were to retain both offices simultaneously. The Attorney General affirmed the decision in 8 A.G. Op. at 402 (1920), holding that the offices are incompatible in light of the fact that under state law a County Commissioner has certain supervisory powers over a school trustee. However, nothing in state law prohibits an individual from holding one of these offices while seeking the other. 42 A.G. Op. 94 (1988).

Departmental Responsibility for Operation of County Assessor's Office — Exceptions: The Department of Revenue is responsible for the internal operation of a County Assessor's office, including employment practices, except with regard to County Assessors and their deputies, who serve at the instance of the electorate or appointing power, as determined statutorily. 42 A.G. Op. 52 (1988).

Manner in Which Duties Performed — No Control by Commissioners: The County Commissioners, in the exercise of their statutory supervisory control over county officers, may assure that the officers fulfill their statutory duties but may not assume control over the manner in which those duties are performed. 38 A.G. Op. 85 (1980).

Supervisory Power Over All Enumerated County Officers: The supervisory power of the County Commissioners under 7-4-2110 extends to all county executive officers enumerated in 7-4-2203. 38 A.G. Op. 85 (1980).

7-4-2111. Indemnity insurance for county officers.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 291 following "this state" inserted "or to a self-insurance pool insuring counties as authorized by 2-9-211"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

7-4-2113. Liability on official bond of commissioner.

County Officers in General

7-4-2201. General qualifications for county office.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 60 inserted (3)(b) providing that when an office is consolidated between two or more counties, a person must be an elector of any county in which the duties of the office are to be exercised to be qualified for the office; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

7-4-2202. General qualifications for district or township offices.

1989 Amendment: In (2), at beginning of second sentence, substituted "More" for "Not more"; and made minor change in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Attorney General's Opinions

No Authority of Board of County Commissioners to Reduce County Auditor Office to Part-Time Position: Montana statutes contemplate a full-time County Auditor with a full-time salary in every county with a population of greater than 15,000. Although County Commissions do have the authority to consolidate certain county offices, including the County Auditor's office, no existing statute contemplates a reduction of the office of County Auditor to a part-time position. Had the Legislature intended to expressly authorize County Commissions to reduce the office, it would have adopted legislation similar to that for County Attorneys and County Superintendents. The authority in 7-6-2412 extends to the imposition of additional County Auditor duties, not to the reduction of hours worked. There is no express or implied authority for counties with general powers to reduce the office of County Auditor to a half-time position. 47 A.G. Op. 18 (1998).

Departmental Responsibility for Operation of County Assessor's Office — Exceptions: The Department of Revenue is responsible for the internal operation of a County Assessor's office, including employment practices, except with regard to County Assessors and their deputies, who serve at the instance of the electorate or appointing power, as determined statutorily. 42 A.G. Op. 52 (1988).

Manner in Which Duties Performed — No Control by Commissioners: The County Commissioners, in the exercise of their statutory supervisory control over county officers, may assure that the officers fulfill their statutory duties but may not assume control over the manner in which those duties are performed. 38 A.G. Op. 85 (1980).

Supervisory Power Over All Enumerated County Officers: The supervisory power of the County Commissioners under 7-4-2110 extends to all county executive officers enumerated in 7-4-2203. 38 A.G. Op. 85 (1980).

County Employee Elected to Public Office: A county employee who is elected or appointed to a public office of the state, county, or city thereby terminates his employment and is entitled to receive vacation and sick leave benefits accumulated during his employment unless he falls within the mandatory leave provision of 2-18-620 (now repealed and replaced by 39-2-104). 38 A.G. Op. 12 (1979).

7-4-2204. Township officers.

Compiler's Comments

Township Officers: There are no townships or township officers in Montana.

7-4-2205. Term of office — oath.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 131 in (3)(a) near middle after "office on" inserted "or before". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 421 in (3), after "part", inserted "and who is elected to office"; inserted (3)(a) relating to taking the oath on the last business day of December; in (3)(b) substituted "at 12:01 a.m. on January 1 following the officer's election" for "on the first Monday of January succeeding their election"; and made minor changes in style.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 421, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, current law requires an elected official to take the oath of office on the first Monday of January succeeding the election; and

WHEREAS, the first Monday in January can be as late as the 7th day of January; and

WHEREAS, employing two elected officials in the same month can cause confusion and disagreement regarding compensation and benefits to each official; and

WHEREAS, employing the newly elected official on January 1 would simplify the payroll process, save local governments and taxpayers money, and make it easier for all concerned to remember the official transition date."

1983 Amendment: At end of (3), deleted "except the county treasurer, whose term begins on the first Monday of March next succeeding his election".

Transition: Section 2, Ch. 71, L. 1983, read: "A county treasurer holding office on the effective date of this act [October 1, 1983] or a person appointed to fill the unexpired term of such a treasurer continues to serve until the first Monday of March after the election of his successor.

Notwithstanding the provisions of 7-4-2205(1), the successor's term expires on the first Monday in January following the election of his successor."

7-4-2206. Vacancies — appointment of interim officer.

Compiler's Comments

2017 Amendment: Chapter 372 in (4) after "a vacancy occurs" deleted "on or". Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

2013 Amendments — Composite Section — Code Commissioner Correction: Chapter 51 inserted (2)(b) regarding the appointment of interim county officers; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

Chapter 143 in (3) substituted "prior to August 1" for "75 days or more"; in (3)(a) substituted "prior to March 1" for "75 days or more"; in (3)(b) in first sentence substituted "on or after March 1" for "after the 75th day" and after "candidate" inserted "in a partisan election", in second and fourth sentences substituted "county election administrator" for "clerk and recorder", and in fourth sentence substituted "prior to August 1" for "on or before the 75th day"; in (4) substituted "on or after July 31" for "after the 75th day"; and deleted former (5) that read: "(5) Vacancies occurring in the office of justice of the peace must be filled as provided in Title 3, chapter 10, part 2." Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

The code commissioner changed "subsections (3) through (5)" to "subsections (3) and (4)" to reflect the deletion of former subsection (5) by Ch. 143.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 42 in (4) substituted "subsection (2)" for "7-4-2206(2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Chapter 226 in (2), in second sentence, substituted exception clause for "Except for the justice of the peace", near middle, after "until the", inserted "person elected at the", and after "election" substituted "is certified pursuant to 13-15-406" for "unless otherwise provided in subsection (3) or (4)"; in (4) substituted "subsection (2)" for "7-4-2206(2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 10, 1997.

1985 Amendment: Throughout section substituted references to 75 days for references to 50 days; and in (3)(b) in fourth sentence, substituted "75th day" for "40th day".

Case Notes

Appointment to Fill Vacancy: County Commissioners who appointed a person in November to the office of County Attorney to take office in January were not acting to forestall the rights and prerogatives of the Board which would be in office in January since only one of the members would be new in January. State ex rel. Koch v. Lexcen, 131 M 161, 308 P2d 974 (1957).

Person Elected to Fill Vacancy Not Elected for Four Years: Plaintiff was appointed Sheriff to fill vacancy caused by the death of his predecessor. At the next general election he was elected Sheriff. He was elected only to fill the unexpired term of his predecessor and not for a full 4-year term, notwithstanding that the ballot did not specify length of time for which candidate sought office. Bailey v. Knight, 118 M 594, 168 P2d 843 (1946).

Attorney General's Opinions

Appointee to County Attorney's Office — Term of Office: The term of an individual appointed to fill a vacancy in the office of County Attorney, due to a tie vote, extends until the next general election. 42 A.G. Op. 48 (1987).

Vacancy in Office of County Attorney — Term of Successor: After an appointment to fill a vacancy in the office of County Attorney, the successor chosen at the next election holds office for the remainder of the unexpired term that was originally determined to be vacant. 42 A.G. Op. 48 (1987).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

7-4-2208. Absence of county officers from state.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 123 in (1) near middle substituted "more than 30 consecutive days" for "more than 60 days or for a period longer than 15 days"; substituted (2) relating to participation in a vote concerning a commissioner's absence for "The sheriff, undersheriff, or deputy sheriffs of any county may absent themselves from the state, with the permission of the board, for a period of more than 60 days for the sole purpose of attending a recognized and accredited law enforcement training school without effecting forfeiture of their offices"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 381 in (1) at beginning substituted "Subject to subsection (2) and except as provided in 10-1-1008" for "Except as provided in subsection (2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 25, 2005.

1991 Amendment: Near middle of (1) increased from 5 to 15 the number of days a county officer may be absent from the state without permission of the County Commissioners.

Case Notes

Sheriff's Unauthorized Absence From State — Reimbursement of Expenses: A Sheriff predicated his demand for reimbursement for expenses incurred by him for services performed beyond the state line upon his legal rights incident to his position as Sheriff and not upon a contract of employment by the County Attorney at whose direction he acted. The Sheriff did not show that he first obtained the consent of the Board of County Commissioners to absent himself from the state, thus he was not entitled to recover on the theory that the claim was allowable under authority of 7-6-2426, making the county chargeable with expenses necessarily incurred by the County Attorney in criminal cases arising within the county. Brannin v. Sweet Grass County, 88 M 412, 293 P 970 (1930).

Attorney General's Opinions

Absence of County Commissioner From State: A County Commissioner is subject to the provisions of 7-4-2208 requiring all county officers to secure consent of the Board of County Commissioners before absenting themselves from the state for a period of more than 5 days. 37 A.G. Op. 19 (1977).

7-4-2210. Restriction on practice of law by certain officers.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

7-4-2211. County offices.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 216 in (2)(a), after "business", substituted "during the office hours determined by the governing body by resolution after a public hearing and only if consented to by any affected elected county officer" for "from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. continuously", before "holidays" inserted "legal", and at end deleted "provided, however, that the offices enumerated herein shall be kept open on Saturdays and on holidays and at other times when the business of said offices requires them to be kept open"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Application of Section: A county extension officer is not a county officer subject to this section. Neither the law relating to his office nor section 16-2403, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), enumerating county officers, designates him as county officer. Turnbull v. Brown, 128 M 254, 273 P2d 387 (1954).

Attorney General's Opinions

Secretarial Services for Private Practice of County Attorney: A secretary employed by the county to assist a County Attorney may work on the County Attorney's private business during time when the secretary's services are not needed on county business. The County Attorney must account for the time that the secretary spends on private business and reimburse the county for any county-compensated time spent on the County Attorney's private business. A claim by a County Attorney for secretarial services reasonably required for the conduct of the County Attorney's official duties is a legitimate claim against the county. The reasonableness of the claim is a question of fact vested in the sound discretion of the county governing body. 46 A.G. Op. 10 (1995). See also 46 A.G. Op. 20 (1996), in which the Attorney General held that a County Attorney may not compel the County Commissioners to authorize the hiring as a county employee of a legal secretary for the County Attorney absent a showing that any other arrangement would prevent the County Attorney from performing the minimum statutory duties.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 420 near middle substituted "photographic, micrographic, electronic" for "photostatic, microphotographic, microfilm"; deleted (2) regarding the manner of recording or photographing and storing of loose pages (see 1993 Session Law for text); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1993.

Attorney General's Opinions

County Clerk and Recorder — No Refusal to Record a Valid Deed: Since the Clerk and Recorder of a county is not a law enforcement officer and enforcement of a criminal statute is not within his prescribed duties, he may not refuse to record a deed that has not met the prerequisite, set forth in the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act (Title 76, ch. 3), that an approved, certified plat be filed before the land is transferred. 35 A.G. Op. 25 (1973).

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 420 in (1), after "7-4-2221", deleted reference to subsection (1) and deleted "the original of which is not less than 10 years old"; in (2), at beginning after "The", deleted "photostatic, microphotographic, or microfilmed"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1993.

7-4-2223. Duplicate records — safe storage of one copy.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 420 in (1), after "or reproduced", deleted "by microphotographic, microfilm, or other mechanical process"; in (2), near beginning of first sentence after "place", substituted "the master" for "one" and in second sentence, after "equipment for", substituted "reproducing the record or document" for "displaying such record by projection to not less than its original size or for preparing copies of the record"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1993.

Part 23
Consolidation of County Offices

7-4-2301. Authorization to consolidate county offices.

Attorney General's Opinions

Consolidated Offices — Ballot Listing: It is within the discretion of the Board of County Commissioners to designate how consolidated county offices may be listed on the primary and general election ballots. 37 A.G. Op. 141 (1978).

7-4-2302. Petition for consolidation of county offices.

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: In (1) substituted "45 days before the date on which declarations for nomination may first be filed for any county office" for "7 months before the date of any general election at which any county officers are to be elected"; and in (2) substituted "registered electors" for "qualified electors" and at end deleted "whose names appear on the registration records thereof".

Attorney General's Opinions

Consolidation of Offices: Offices of County Treasurer and County Superintendent of Schools may be consolidated into one office provided the officeholder meets the minimum qualifications of both offices. 35 A.G. Op. 31 (1973).

1985 Amendment: Substituted "as provided in 7-1-2121" for "one time in the official newspaper of the county, which publication must be at least 10 days before the date set for said hearing. If there is no newspaper of general circulation printed and published in said county, then such notice must be posted by the county clerk or clerks, at least 10 days before the date set for such hearing, in three public places in the county or counties"; and deleted former (2) that read: "Said notice shall either contain a copy of said petition, with the signatures omitted, or a copy of the resolution of intent passed by the board or boards of county commissioners and shall state the time and place fixed for hearing the same and that on such hearing, any taxpayer of the county may appear and be heard in support of or in opposition to said petition."

7-4-2309. Conduct of hearing — decision.

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: In (1), at beginning of second sentence, substituted "registered elector" for "qualified elector"; and in (2) inserted "Such order must be made at least 7 days before the date on which declarations for nominations may first be filed for any county office."

7-4-2310. Order for consolidation of offices.

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: In middle of (1) substituted clauses requiring Commissioners to enter order for office consolidation not less than either 7 days before filing of nominations or 6 months prior to appointment to consolidated office for "6 months prior to the general election held for the purpose of filling the offices to be consolidated".

7-4-2312. Salary and bond of officer following consolidation.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 262 in (1)(b) in first sentence after "7-4-2503" deleted "annually", substituted "January 1" for "with the first Monday in January", and inserted last sentence concerning adoption of resolution for subsequent term of consolidated office. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 291 in (1)(b) after "boards shall" substituted "in conjunction with setting elected officials' salaries as provided in 7-4-2503, annually adopt a resolution fixing the percentage adjustment of the salary of the officer holding the consolidated office" for "in June of each fourth year, adopt a resolution fixing the salary of the officer"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 27 in (1), after "justice of the peace", inserted "and the county assessor"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1994.

Applicability: Section 171(2), Ch. 27, Sp. L. November 1993, provided that the amendments to this section apply to tax years after December 31, 1993.

Case Notes

No Legal Duty to Fund Deputy Position: The Lewis and Clark County Auditor petitioned for a Writ of Mandamus to compel the Board of County Commissioners to fund a Deputy Auditor position eliminated by the Commissioners because of budget cuts. The District Court dismissed the petition on the ground that there was no legal duty of the Commissioners to fund the position. On appeal, the Supreme Court had to reconcile three statutes: 7-4-2401(1), under which county officers may appoint as many deputies or assistants as necessary to discharge the duties of the office; 7-4-2402, which provides the County Commissioners with authority to fix and determine the number of county deputy officers; and 7-6-2413, which provides that the number of Deputy Auditors in first-, second-, and third-class counties must not exceed one. The court held that the specific statute, 7-6-2413, must control over the general statute, 7-4-2401(1). The specific statute does not mandate a Deputy Auditor but merely permits one deputy. Based on 7-4-2402, the court held that the authority to determine whether to appoint a deputy resides with the Commissioners and not the Auditor. Based on this statutory scheme, the court held that the Commissioners had no clear legal duty to fund the position of Deputy Auditor. Spotorno v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 212 M 253, 687 P2d 720, 41 St. Rep. 1722 (1984).

Appointment of Deputy County Attorneys:

Although 7-4-2703 provides that a County Attorney of a first- or second-class county may appoint only one Chief Deputy and one Deputy County Attorney, this section provides for appointment of such additional Deputy County Attorneys as may be reasonably necessary to discharge the duties of the office. The prosecutors here were appointed properly and had the lawful authority to prosecute the matter. St. v. Poncelet, 187 M 528, 610 P2d 698, 37 St. Rep. 760 (1980).

Under 2-16-213 and this section, a County Attorney may appoint a deputy to serve without compensation and such deputy may legally act in the name of his principal in the filing of informations and the prosecution of criminal action. St. v. Crouch, 70 M 551, 227 P 818 (1924).

The provisions of this section have no application to the appointment by the court of counsel to assist a County Attorney in prosecuting persons charged with crime. St. v. Whitworth, 26 M 107, 66 P 748 (1901).

Authority of County Commission to Restrict Number of Deputies Hired by Elected Officials: A Board of County Commissioners has authority through control of the county budget to restrict the number of deputies hired by elected officials. Therefore, a Clerk of the District Court may not employ a chief deputy or any other deputies without authorization of the Board. 43 A.G. Op. 77 (1990).

Departmental Responsibility for Operation of County Assessor's Office — Exceptions: The Department of Revenue is responsible for the internal operation of a County Assessor's office, including employment practices, except with regard to County Assessors and their deputies, who serve at the instance of the electorate or appointing power, as determined statutorily. (See 1993 special session amendment.) 42 A.G. Op. 52 (1988).

Addition or Elimination of Salaried Deputy Position — Authority Resident With County Commission: As between the County Assessor and the Board of County Commissioners, the authority to add or eliminate a salaried deputy position resides with the Board of County Commissioners. 42 A.G. Op. 23 (1987).

Establishment and Elimination of Deputy Position in County Office — Authority Resident With County: As between the state and county governments, the authority to establish a deputy position and the commensurate authority to eliminate a deputy position in the office of the county reside with county government. 42 A.G. Op. 23 (1987).

7-4-2402. Authorization to exceed limitation on number of deputy officers.

Section Not Codified: The phrase relating to payment of deputies in section 16-3704, R.C.M. 1947, was not codified because it was redundant with 7-4-2505. That phrase has not been repealed and is still valid law. It may be referred to as sec. 1, Ch. 365, L. 1971. See 1-2-208, stating that amendment to a codified provision is given effect over an uncodified provision.

Authority of Sheriff to Appoint Deputies — Consolidated City-County Government: Where the charter of a consolidated city-county government, which was approved by the voters on November 2, 1976, and took effect on May 2, 1977, specified the manner in which promotions of Sheriff's deputies were to be made, promotions made on April 12, 1977, were governed not by the provisions of the charter but by provisions of state law requiring that the appointment of a greater number of deputies than that allowed by statute is subject to the approval of the Board of County Commissioners. As the promotions were not so approved, they are void. Butler v. Local 2033 Am. Fed'n of County Employees, 186 M 28, 606 P2d 141, 37 St. Rep. 168 (1980).

Employee on Commission Basis: If the services the County Commissioners seek to have done involve only an investigation of county offices for abstracting purposes, that can be done by a regularly appointed deputy county officer. There is no statutory authority for the Commissioners to employ anyone to perform such services on a commission basis. Kelly v. Silver Bow County, 125 M 272, 233 P2d 1035 (1951).

Performance of Duties of Clerk of District Court by Deputy District Court Clerk: Under the plain meaning of this section, any deputy clerk of the District Court may act on behalf of the Clerk of Court in performing any of the Clerk's functions and duties. 43 A.G. Op. 77 (1990).

Disposition of Money Received by County Officers for Preparation of Abstracts: Preparation of abstracts by a Clerk of District Court, a County Clerk, or their respective deputies is an official service of the office. Therefore, compensation paid to them by title companies, credit bureaus, banks, realtors, and others for preparation on a regular basis of abstracts of instruments recorded in their respective offices may not be retained for their personal use, but rather must be paid to the county general fund, District Court fund, or state, as provided by law. 43 A.G. Op. 75 (1990).

7-4-2405. Appointment of deputies in certain counties.

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of Public Safety Commission to Set Salary of Deputy Sheriff: In a department of public safety created pursuant to Title 7, ch. 32, part 1, the public safety commission may set the salary of a department Deputy Sheriff under 7-32-104 at any level at or above the amount that would be paid to the deputy under 7-4-2508. To the extent that 7-4-2508 and 7-32-104 conflict, the provisions of 7-32-104, which allow the public safety commission to set the salaries of department employees, are the more specific and therefore are controlling. 48 A.G. Op. 20 (2000).

Part-Time Deputy County Attorney Entitled to Longevity Pay — Year of Service Composed of Calendar Year: The Legislature did not distinguish full-time Deputy County Attorneys from part-time Deputy County Attorneys for purposes of eligibility pay. Therefore, a part-time Deputy County Attorney is entitled to longevity pay under 7-4-2503 after completing the required years of service. As used in that section, the term "year of service" means a calendar year rather than 2,080 hours of employment. 48 A.G. Op. 19 (2000), following Phillips v. Lake County, 222 M 42, 721 P2d 326 (1986), and overruling 39 A.G. Op. 78 (1982), 40 A.G. Op. 61 (1984), and 43 A.G. 77 (1990), to the extent that a different definition of year of service was applied.
